Babson Praises Hoover's Effort To Bolster Banks and Cites Own Recommendations 10 Months Back

Bay State Economist Repeats Own Statement: "What This Country Needs Most Right Now is 'Bank Relief'" In Article Nearly Year Ago and Reports Immediate Stock Rise of $8,000,000 After Announcement

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Oct. 24—President Hoover's plan for bank relief is the step toward business recovery. It should have been adopted long before. However, until the situation became so critical the big bankers were not impressed with the necessity of such action.

Ten months ago I said in a newspaper article:

"This country needs most right now 'bank relief.' Farm relief, unemployment relief, and all other emergency relief would be less necessary, if we could stop this epidemic of bank failures. When a bank closes its doors the whole community suffers. Money ceases circulating, business funds are tied up, men are thrown out of employment, savings are lost, and purchases are stopped. The federal reserve act makes no provision for giving direct help to non-member banks or for making loans along with undecommissioned assets. It is a shame to close banks which have been honestly run, as 99 per cent of these country banks have been, simply because quotations are temporarily low. Cannot some means be devised which will give relief to sound independent country banks? Recognizing this great need President Hoover now calls for:

1.—Federal Reserve banks to cooperate with all banks in their territory for making advances on assets of closed banks, enabling them to make payments to depositors without waiting for final liquidation.

2.—Establishment of regional bank committees throughout the country to facilitate credit advances to these frozen banks.

3.—Amending the Federal Reserve act to make eligible a wider range of loans for redit, thus broadening the whole credit base and helping all classes of business.

4.—Affording greater credit to the farmers through enlarging Federal bank operations.

These measures strike at the very root of our troubles and promise to help prevent bank failures, to restore confidence in securities, stimulate business and employment, and help the farmers.

The plan will act as a three-fold stimulant to business.

First, even if temporary advances of only 50 cents on the dollar were made to the depositors of closed banks, that would release about $800,000,000 of frozen deposits. Addition of this great purchasing power would at once help trade and employment.

Second, by re-establishing confidence in our banks, it will stop the hysterical withdrawal of deposits, and gradually release $1,000,000,000 of hoarded currency. Getting this idle money back into circulation would greatly stimulate all phases of activity.

Third, should congress amend the Federal Reserve act in accordance with this plan, credit would be available to many business men who are now being refused necessary loans. It would broaden the whole credit base of our banking system, thus substituting moderate inflation for ruinous deflation.

Furthermore, real estate, which is now hardest hit of all business, may be afforded a new source of credit through the new $500,000,000 banking institution. It has long been known that home building is a subject close to Mr. Hoover's heart. Some means by which certain types of mortgage loans and other real estate paper can be made eligible for discount and made more easily negotiable would prove a tremendous help to the building industry. Any action tending to help the financing of home building and home buying would afford employment to the building trades among which unemployment is now especially severe.

Confidence in Markets The electrifying effect of President Hoover's banking plan on the stock and bond markets clearly shows how confidence is being helped. In three days' time the announcement brought a rise of about $8,000,000,000 in total value of stocks. The rise in bonds and commodities added at least $4,000,000,000 more. Of course, there will be reactions from these rapid advances, but the fundamental thing is that confidence is being restored. The wholesale accumulation of high-grade bonds and stocks has been one of the worst features of the market situation. Necessary for banks to sell their securities for cash in order to meet possible runs has played a large part in the drastic decline. With this danger lessened such selling should subside. The same thing applies to the commodity markets where banks were forced to call loans secured by cotton, wheat, and other basic materials, thus dumping these commodities at ruinous prices. The recent strength in certain basic commodities again clearly demonstrates the importance of banking confidence.

While the Federal Reserve act was never intended to serve as a basis from failing which ought to fall because of mismanagement or hopelessness, nevertheless, in this crisis the good banks have suffered with the bad—the just with the unjust. The great majority of our banks are honest and carefully conducted. Under normal conditions their loans are perfectly sound. Most of the inefficiently run banks have already been wrecked out by the depression.

The Federal Reserve system, however, has signally failed to protect the sound banks in times of emergency like the present. Now President Hoover proposes to change all this. His plan would make the reserve system more flexible—more ready to meet the emergency needs of banks and business. This question of bank failures is not so much a question of solvency. It has become a question of deposits. There is always a limit in deposit withdrawals facing every bank. By restoring the people's confidence, hysterical withdrawals will be stopped and a great danger averted.

Putting First Things First

I believe in helping foreign countries, as ultimately the world must prosper as a unit and we, however, should be willing to help the banks and farmers of this country simultaneously with helping the banks and farmers of Europe. It is a poor rule that doesn't work both ways. Hoover has acted wisely in striving first to help the people at home before negotiating to aid Europe. Talk of extensions of the monetary policy revision of war debts would have been premature without prior steps for domestic relief.

My own forecast is that we will help Europe in some concrete form, but—before such help materializes—we must work out plans to help our own people at the same time. My guess is that this will take place through some form of inflation, which will make it easier for people in this country who are in debt to carry their obligations without defaulting either principal or interest.

Business by the Babsonchart now registers 23 per cent below normal, or 10 per cent below what it was a year ago. (Copyright, 1931, Publishers' Financial Bureau.)

SUGAR BEET HARVESTING PROGRESSES AT BURLEY

BURLEY, Oct. 24 (Special to The News)—Sugar beet harvesting here is well advanced. The sugar company officials say, and the harvest has been progressing satisfactorily. Indications are that the crop will make between nine and ten tons to the acre, which is considered very good in view of the drawbacks that were contended with this season.

Early planting and good cultural methods are given the credit for the fair crop being harvested. The season was the worst ever known here, it is said, as seed was blown out by high wind, the white fly was unusually prevalent and the summer was exceptionally hot and dry.

To date, the sugar content is 17.49 per cent, which is above average. If the sugar holds up for the balance of the season to make 17 per cent average.

YOUNG MEN IN WRECK FACE LIQUOR CHARGES

Two young men who said their names were L. Miller and T. Miller and that they came from Sacramento, California, were held under $1000 bond each for preliminary hearing Tuesday following arraignment before United States Commissioner F. S. Bell yesterday on charges of intoxication and possession of liquor in violation of federal prohibition laws. In default of bail, both were lodged in the county jail.

The young men were picked up by police officers here Friday in the wreck of a car on the highway west of Twin Falls early Friday morning.

Liquor in bottles was found in a field near where the wreck occurred, and also in the hotel room that the young men occupied here, police officers said.

Miller's knowledge pay him well. He is Edward Shuler, designer and builder of more miniature automobiles than any other man in Hollywood.

Cartoonist Thinks Hysterics About Russia Pointless

Leaders Face Task of Raising Standards of Living or Admitting Failure—and Lengthy Labors Loom

"This is the third of Cartoonist Darling's series of articles on Russia. This article is particularly interesting to Idaho because it deals in considerable detail with agriculture—Editor"

BY J. N. (DING) DARLING

Copyright, 1931, by J. N. Darling. It is no wonder that Russia, to the outsider who gets his impression from the strange tales that have been told of it, seems like some strange, new creation of a Luther Burbank wizard at work in the social garden.

Russia is far away from the American reader and the curiosity which has grown up around it makes any story that comes out of it seem like the remarkable fables as told by the spies returning from Cannan.

If the Russian agricultural laboratories grow a super squash or an egg plant three feet long, Walter Durant, New York Times correspondent, writes a dramatic narration of the wonders of Soviet Russia. And the American public sits back in pop-eyed wonder, apparently forgetting that the department of agriculture in the United States of America had done the same thing many years ago and printed tons of pamphlets about how any farmer may do.

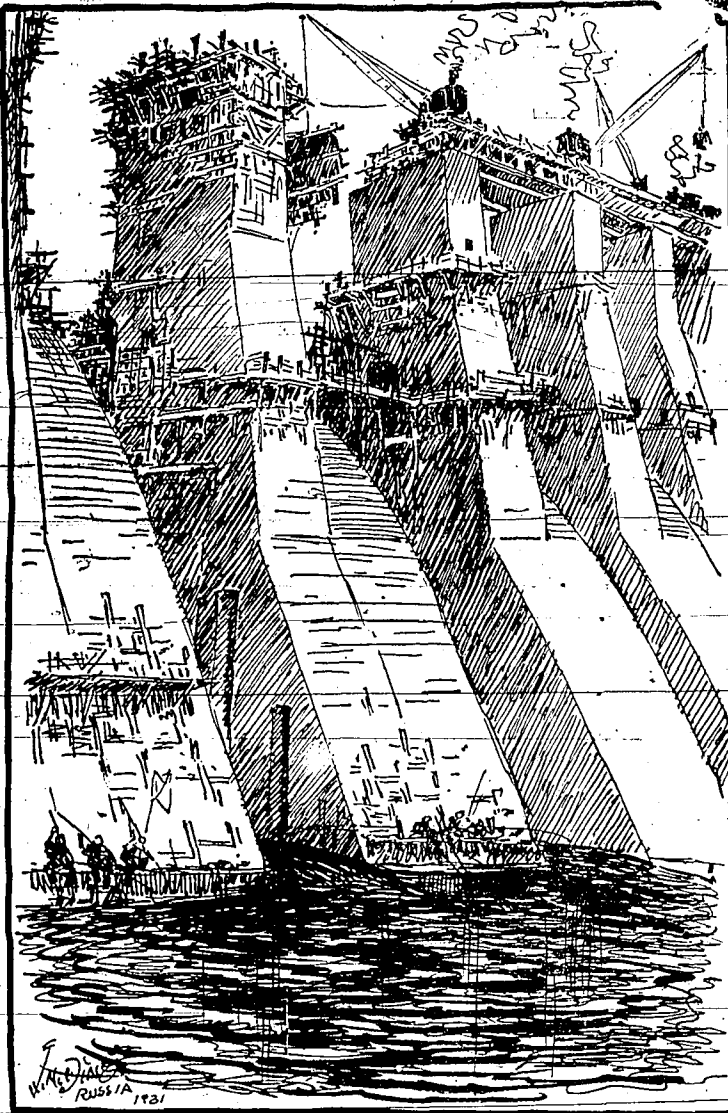

Probably your congressman has sent you a copy, which you promptly threw in the waste basket, and no one ever read.

Remember America!

If some emotional reformer makes a supervised visit to Moscow and Leningrad and comes out with miraculous tales of the new housing program for the workers, which the benevolent Russian government has planned, the American public gapes with hysterical astonishment, forgetting that Mrs. Russell Sage, Jacob Reese, Theodore Roosevelt and the Metropolitan Life Insurance company inaugurated the same movement many years ago and incidentally discovered that their cultural bathtubs were used for wood boxes, just as the Russians are discovering today.

City planning commissions throughout America, hundreds of cities have taken the work where the pioneers left off and there is scarcely a city in America that isn't farther along with the reform of housing conditions than Russia will be at the end of her five-year program.

The Rockefeller Institute alone has done more for the relief of human suffering from disease than all of the Soviet clinics can ever dream of and there is not a city or hamlet in America that cannot show better facilities for caring for the sick and poor and the incompetent than any boasted sanatorium for the workers in Russia. It is too bad to spoil a good fairly story—seems almost as cruel as telling little children there isn't any Santa Claus, but there really is no reason for getting so hysterical about Russia.

Like War Times

Those of us who lived through and remember the artificial devices which were used in America during the World war to stimulate the public into heroic efforts would feel perfectly at home in Russia today. The five-year program would not seem like such a mysterious monstrosity if we were to see it in time of war instead of peace. Everything they are doing in Russia today is so much a reminder of the same technique we used in the war that it is like reading the "Nineteen Years Ago" column in the daily newspapers to travel through Russia and witness the methods, the spasmodic energy and the pumped up emotions which mark the efforts of the Soviet government in every corner of this vast country.

Borrowed Tricks

They have borrowed every trick and device that was invented during the World war. All the methods which we used to energize the American public into a united front for military victory, have been adopted here to yank the Russian population out of the primitive civilization of the middle ages and land them in the midst of the mechanized era of the Twentieth century. The aim of the Russian government has been to do it in five years. They will come just about as close to it as we came to settling all the problems of the war when we signed the Armistice on November 11, 1918.

They have adopted, as we did, a modified government dictatorship which rules with an iron hand and tolerates no opposition sentiment. Forced draft production is insisted on, no matter what it may cost in money or human sacrifice. They have trade embargoes, food restrictions, "minute speakers," flimsy propaganda and wild juggling of currency mediums. Slackers and conscientious objectors are clapped into jail and "liberty loan drives" periodically test the patriotism of the populace. It is all very familiar.

Generates Energy

When a nation is involved in a great war it is taken for granted that every able-bodied man and woman will throw every ounce of energy into the struggle. The entire community becomes fired with the contagious fervor for heroic effort and sacrifice. Youth catches fire and feigns maturity in order that it may join the ranks of combatants. The spirit of the elders is reflected in the games of the children in the streets.

All these phases are visible at every turn of the road in Russia today. Russia, more than any other nation in the world, has declared herself against war but she has applied the exact formulas for winning a war to her present campaign for economic self sufficiency. So far, the formula is working successfully.

Bangs and Clatters

She bangs and clatters with the erection of new, and additions to the old, industrial plants. A Dniestrostroy power dam echoes the American effort at Muscle Shoals. Whole blocks of old buildings are pulled down with a crash and great clouds of dust, to make way for new structures more fitted to the great cause.

Emergency water mains and sewer districts cleave the highways to new projects under construction and old pavements are ripped up for new. At every corner you turn is a new reminder of the days and scenes which followed America's entrance into the war in 1917—all except the military aspect which, if my observations are as competent as they are honest, is surprisingly negligible.

New Cities

New cities, hastily built of long, low roofed buildings, are springing up over night from the Black sea to the Baltic, looking for all the world like our wartime cantonments. Trainloads of hastily saved new lumber fill the railroad sidings; awarms of men; with saws and axes so many ants, dot the scaffolding where tomorrow some new integer of the Russian industrial program will turn out the first experimental sample of its kind.

All day sounds the clatter of hammers and the screech of heaving cranes, and by night continues under a glare of light from clusters of high power lamps on tall poles. Bill posters, in flaming red letters call for increased efforts on the part of all patriots. Huge cartoons ridicule and shame the slacker, blackboard bulletins, clocks and diagrams report the hourly, daily and weekly progress of the work on each construction job.

Even the Bonds

There is honorable mention and high praise for the efficient workers and scathing ridicule for those who have fallen below their quota of expected production. "Buy United Socialist of Soviet Republic government bonds at 10 per cent and help your country to victory with the five-year program."

Corps of "shock brigade" workers periodically invade a construction—projects get a new pace for the regular local workers and move on to another project, there, by their example, to shame the lagging producers into greater energy.

"Devils of Capitalism"

Widespread propaganda tells them in scornful terms that the devils of capitalism will get them if they don't watch out; "shame on the careless worker who injures a machine or wastes material," "carelessness is better than sabotage," "tighten your belts for the struggle to victory," and so forth ad infinitum and ad nauseum.

The prevalence of so much hortatory propaganda leads a stranger to suspect that the fervor for the cause which pervades the ruling group at the top is not entirely shared by the great mass of laborers and peasants upon whom the success of the five-year program depends.

Frenzy of Effort

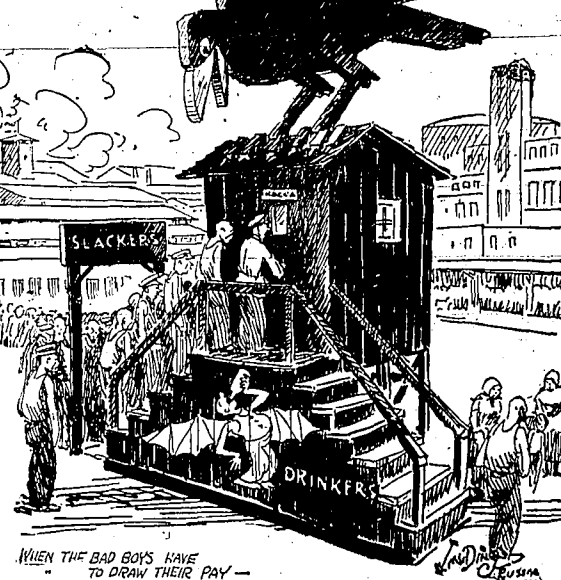

The government, the press and the Soviet party are perpetually occupied in an unrelenting campaign to keep the people whipped into a frenzy of effort.

If there were an army at their gates threatening the country with invasion the job of keeping the spirit at a white heat would not be so difficult. Lacking that tangible energy they have built up huge bugaboos out of capitalism. Almost daily rumors are broadcast, telling of the preparations which Poland, Finland and France are making to attack their borders. America is pictured as a devil incarnate, trying to strangle the Russian industrial development.

"Foreign Monsters"

Huge, "cut out" wooden posters, 30 feet high, decorate the highways, picturing the hostile countries as claw-fisted monsters, reaching for Russia's treasures, while a heroic figure of the Red soldier with his rifle at a challenging angle keeps back the horrid invaders from devouring the Russian children.

MONEY CRISIS IN ENGLAND CAUSES BUSINESS MIX-UP

United States Concerns Operating in London Use

EXTREME CASES COME TO TRADE'S ATTENTION

Traders Using American Money as Basis for Deals

Remain Well Off as Formerly

By ALVIN HALLMAN (Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The price of sterling has fallen to a level which is the gold standard by Great Britain and resulting depreciation of the value of sterling have hit American exporters hard, but British buyers are sharing the burden.

A survey by American authorities here reveals that most houses doing business in the United Kingdom are under contract for some months to come to deliver their product either on a dollar basis or pound basis.

Those whose accounts receivable are in pounds naturally will stand a loss, since so great has been the fall in sterling that the post-war guarantee clauses in contracts has disappeared.

Take Import Loss

But those who contracts call for payments in dollars are as well off as ever. There the burden is on the British buyer.

Several extreme cases have come to light—one that of a radio-spare-parts jobber who contracted to buy considerable amounts of radio equipment from America and pay for it in dollars, passing it on to British retailers on contract calling for pound sterling payments.

Good Business Prophet

Some American business men in London expect that many branch factories of American concerns will be opened in England. The idea would be to take advantage of the fall in the value of sterling and to dodge the effects of new tariffs, which become ever nearer.

In one industry in which a 33-1-3 per cent protective tariff was established five years ago, a large British manufacturer who presumably was to profit from the tariff, objected to paying "a word" to establish here of American branch factories.

What he prophesied came to pass. The factories are here, turning out tremendous quantities of a product allied with the rubber and automotive industries, and the prophetic manufacturer has just passed his dividend.

The broad general view here is that such hardship as American firms suffer probably will be only temporary, and that as English gains in prosperity from her depreciated currency the market here will improve.

This is regarded as particularly true of cotton, it being reasoned that the Lancashire textile district, at present hard hit by depression, will be revived, and imports of cotton from the southern states improved.

HEAVY TRAFFIC OUSTS MEXICO'S 'THEATRES'

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24.—Congested traffic in the capital has caused banishment of the "carpas," the colorful little portable street theatres which have been the centers of amusement for the poor. From town to town in the wake of the "carpas" are dancing, singing and crude, sometimes riotous, street parties for an admission fee of 4 cents.

Queen Mary Now Rivals Prince Of Wales In "Royal Salesman" Role

Her Majesty and Other Royal

Ladies Lend Names to Approve British—Products

(By The Associated Press)

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Prince of Wales isn't the only royal salesman busy boosting English goods.

Queen Mary is pretty good at it herself.

Unlike prominent American women who endorse endorsements of cosmetics and household equipment for a juicy check, Her Majesty and other royal ladies lend their names and approval to British products and don't get even a discount.

It's a bit doubtful whether the business "by appointment" seals, proclaiming royal patronage, cut much ice, but to have been selected by the queen personally is a big sales talk for any piece of merchandise in the British empire.

Queen Mary likes to shop for presents and has already started her Christmas buying.

She believes in shopping early—not that the rush would really bother her—and little shops tucked away in London's crooked streets are as often patronized by Her Majesty as the big department stores.

Among her purchases this fall have been blown up balloons with maps of the world on their surfaces. One of her favorite gifts is a handkerchief.

Last February she attended the British Industries Fair where British makers and sellers get together on a grand scale and made many purchases, among them several handkerchiefs.

Six months later models she had chosen were still on display in Bond Street, where the handkerchiefs were still being sold.

With the approval of the Duchess of York, a "Princess Margaret Rose" pattern of nursery china was introduced at this same fair, to commemorate the birth of Britain's youngest royal personage. This proved so popular that it also was made up in tea sets.

The china is of white, banded in pale blue, and the decoration includes a pink rose, white marguerites, a sprig of Scotch heather, and a pair of green love birds.

England's queen, who has started her Christmas shopping early this year, weighs the persuasive arguments of a London art dealer.

Prince, Soon to Mary Commoner, Plans for Home Away From Castle

(By The Associated Press)

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 24.—Prince Lennart of Sweden will start a household of his own this fall, a fact which has added strength to the rumor that the young duke soon will marry his commoner fiancée.

Karin Nilsvandt, his fiancée, is in a new "functionalistic" apartment house in a district of the capital which is so newly developed that the street has no name and the house no number.

Prince Lennart has recently returned from a German agricultural college.

In the meantime Miss Nilsvandt has been making her home at Stenhammar, the ducal estate of Prince William, her future father-in-law.

By contrast, Prince Lennart is now living at the palace of his father, King Gustaf Adolf, who as oldest son of the crown prince is "the presumptive" to the throne, is establishing his own household this fall at the palace of his mother, Queen Victoria.

Nothing is known of the future matrimonial plans of Prince Gustaf Adolf.

WILL RESTRICTS WIDOW TO HUMAN MEAT DIET

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Charles A. T. Pringle, a barrister, left his widow about $15,000, bequeathed with curious restrictions.

She must never, the will said, eat pate de foie gras, crayfish, lobster, prawn, shrimp, eel, or "any shell or other animal or creature," without absolute proof of its humane death before cooking.

CRISIS TURNS BRITONS TO BOOKS ON FINANCE

LONDON, Oct. 24.—That the British are getting "financial minded" as a result of Britain's monetary crisis is indicated by an extraordinary run on libraries and bookshops for literature on finance, economics, banking and currency.

Leading booksellers say there rarely has been a growing demand for such books, but with the gold standard suspension the demand has doubled.

Libraries report a waiting list for books on finance which makes such works compete strongly with best sellers.

England's queen, who has started her Christmas shopping early this year, weighs the persuasive arguments of a London art dealer.

A "Princess Elizabeth" china of a rather more subtle pattern had previously been shown. There were also "Princess Elizabeth" hankies in black and white cotton with a colored print of the little girl in the center. These sold for about a dime and went like hot cakes.

Princess Elizabeth is now appearing on the market in a tiny china statuette with blond curls and a pink dress.

MEDICINAL WATERS PROMISE NEW FAME FOR OBERAMMERGAU

OBERAMMERGAU, Oct. 24.—This little village, considered to be the site of the Passion Play and wood-carving for many centuries, will soon render another service as a good Samaritan to the sick.

Medical authorities, probing the soil-of-the-estate-moors-there, had discovered the valley of the River Ammer, which flows through the town, have pronounced it effective for curative purposes.

A "kurt" and bathhouse containing facilities for medicinal baths and treatments will be erected, the undertaking to be backed by a foreign syndicate.

The project has aroused criticism among those who fear less changing the isolated village to a busy spa may affect the piety of the natives.

On the other hand, there are some who are in the discovery the hand of divinity giving a just reward for genuine devotion.

In any case if a boom develops, it will bring the village a more enduring prosperity than the gate receipts of the famous Passion Play, presented once every ten years.

PHONE CALLS GAIN FAVOR

MADRID, Oct. 24.—Two long distance telephone calls are given free to each new subscriber of the Spanish Telephone company in an effort to make Spaniards "long distance minded." The scheme is working.

SPAIN'S PRESIDENT HOPES TO PUT ALL PEOPLES TO WORK

Constitution Defines Nation As "Republic of Workers of All Classes in Regime of Liberty and Justice"

(By The Associated Press)

MADRID, Oct. 24.—Republican Spain is going to work with a vim. The new Aznar government and the constitutional assembly can so order things.

The new constitution, now being completed by congress, defines Spain as a "republic of workers of all classes in a regime of liberty and justice. All its power emanate from the people."

The question of just who were three workers raised one of the most difficult problems for the law makers. It threatened a cabinet crisis which it took the church-state problem to bring about.

Conservative Protest

Difficulties of defining the republic in the first chapter of the constitution came from the socialist first, then the others. When the draft was presented to congress no reference was made to the word "workers."

The socialists, by a bit of parliamentary strategy, inserted the word. That left Spain just a plain "republic of workers." More conservative elements, led by Miguel Maura, ex-minister of the interior, and Alcala Zamora, who later resigned as president, protested the word.

All Included Now

The protest was against "workers" was synonymous with Russia and they wanted none of it. Although the chamber, by a close vote, approved the socialist amendment, in view of popular criticism, it immediately rescinded its decision and turned the constitutional committee to write a new draft.

The new definition, which was adopted, was "workers" by a close vote. It was the very best definition in view of popular criticism, it immediately rescinded its decision and turned the constitutional committee to write a new draft.

German "Steel Helmets" Adopt Motto, "The Fatherland Above All Parties"

(By The Associated Press)

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—The soldier-president Paul von Hindenburg as an honorary member, and more than 1,000,000 followers, Franz Seldte, head of the country-wide nationalist "steel helmets," is a vital force in German politics.

His efforts brought the League of War Veterans to its present strength out of a mere "putsch" clique. Its motto, coined by him, is: "The Fatherland above all parties."

The collapse of the German Empire and the ensuing chaos found Seldte at his home town, Madgeburg. His attempt to organize a counter revolution there and in Berlin failed, but he succeeded in creating a local association of "front soldiers," based upon war reminiscences, comradeship and self-help.

France Seldte thus discovered his organizing talent. In October 1919 he united local groups of former front soldiers and was made chief of the Reich's Association of Front Soldiers.

He made the organization self-supporting and enabled it to publish a newspaper, the "Stahlhelm," which has a circulation of 170,000.

Seldte was born in Madgeburg June 20, 1882. He started to follow his father's profession of chemistry but the World War interrupted his studies. He went to the front as a leader of a machine gun section and in 1918 lost his left arm fighting on the Somme.

He is a bachelor. Besides leading the "Stahlhelm," he conducts a soda mineral water bottling business in his home city.

"When the time comes, the steel helmets will be ready," he says. "Without these veterans to lead them, the German people will never travel the road to a better future."

Democratic Control Of House Hinges On Republican Rift

SOLID FRONT OF BOURBONS LOOMS IN NEXT SESSION

Representative John Garner Appears Unopposed As Party Choice For Speakership

GOOD OLD PARTY FACES POSSIBLE SPLIT BALLOT

Independents' Demands For Concessions Must Be Granted to Make Accord

(This is the second of three articles in which Cecil B. Dickson, head of the house of representatives staff of The Associated Press, discusses the impending party battle for organization of the new house—Editor.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (Special to The News)—The Democrats may be able to organize the house of representatives when the seventy-second congress convenes December 7.

Indications are that they will present a solid front to the Republicans.

Representative John N. Garner, Texas, appears unopposed as party choice for speaker. At the Democratic caucus in December he is expected to be nominated by acclamation.

The white-haired plainsman, now entering his fifteenth consecutive term, was the militant leader of the Democrats during the last congress against a Republican majority of more than 100.

Republicans face a possible split over the choice of a successor to the late Nicholas Longworth, speaker nominee, as the result of demands by independents for greater representation.

The independents are not made amenable by concessions, by way of retaining a few of them could be absent on the day congress meets, pleading illness or other valid reasons.

Democrats might profit. Then, if the Democrats should be present in full force, they could expect to power for the first time since the sixty-fifth congress.

Even if the Republicans organize, the fact remains that under Garner's leadership the Democrats have been more often than the Republicans to muster their votes on big issues, and many times they might have on the floor a majority that could override the Republicans.

Some of the more than 50 new Democrats in the house come from normally Republican districts.

Republican leaders hope these may at times follow the dictates of their Republican constituents.

Among the Democratic members there is some division of thought as to whether an effort should be made to organize the house while the Republicans have a majority, even though split.

The argument advanced is that the Republicans, with administration aid, could cripple the program of a Democratic organization by appointment of house members to government posts or through political trades.

Furthermore, many Democrats believe that the party's chance of electing a president in 1932 would be handicapped by Democratic control in the house.

They contend that the Republican nominee might "stand" the Democratic house for the country's economic ill.

Democrats appear willing. The main force of the Democrats appear ready to accept the responsibility.

They point out that the Republicans seized the house in the sixty-sixth congress in the last two years of the Wilson administration and predict that a Democrat will succeed President Hoover if they take the house of the seventy-second congress.

Assuming that Garner is chosen speaker, half a dozen veterans have been suggested for floor leadership. They are John McFalls, Alabama; Joseph Byrne, Tennessee; Charles R. Clay, Georgia; Henry P. Rainey, Illinois; John J. O'Connor, New York; and John L. Rankin, Mississippi.

The Northern Democrats claim that the "south" would be in the saddle unless the leadership and some committee chairmanships should be awarded the northern states.
