BANKS' ACTIVITIES ON STOCK MARKET PROVE DANGEROUS

Senate Sub-Committee Finds Spectacular Confirmation of Hazards in Practice During Past 10 Years

The document, made public by the special banking investigating group headed by Senator Glass, Democratic Virginia, was a report prepared by the committee's expert, Dr. H. Parker Willis, New York, summarizing the testimony it has taken.

The lengthy document filled with the results of questionnaires sent out to the committee to banks and bankers in all parts of the country assailed the federal reserve authorities on many points. They urged to take prompt action "under conditions" which played an important part in the 1929 stock market collapse.

"Despite the very significant and mischievous role played by broken loans for the account of others during the stock market inflation," the report said, "no special steps were reported by the federal reserve authorities to investigate them for purposes of future control until the

Specific Recommendations

While no specific recommendations for legislation were made in the report, it is expected to point the way for important revisions in the banking laws.

Changes were urged, too, to President Hoover in his annual message in view of "the extent of bank failures."

Remedial legislation this session also will be sought by Senator Glass.

The report traced the effects of increased participation of banks in the capital market.

"During a period of widespread confidence and active business," said, "the stimulation of the capital market resulting from rapidly increasing bank loans on securities and bank purchases of bonds tends to

President of Equipment Com-

BOISE, Dec. 26 (P)—Replying to the statement of Parker P. Carver, state purchasing agent, on the much-disputed highway equipment contract, Governor Roscoe W. Dwyer said today that Alvin Harbours, president of the Idaho Equipment company, declared in an interview tonight that Governor Ross knew from the beginning about the negotiations which he had with Harbours to buy the machinery direct from the company without bids.

He said negotiations for the contract, under which the state planned to order $500,000 worth of equipment, were known to the governor from the time they started in July. He declared that Alvin Harbours, president of the company, was authorized by the governor as contracting agent to make the deal on terms by which he could pay for the equipment over a long period and the department was without funds.

He said he limited the commission an additional auxiliary motor to be fitted upon a truck already owned by the highway department, and he did not want too much additional equipment on his hands in event the state decided not to buy the rented chinery.

On November 15, he said, "I notified the department the trucks were ready and the governor refused them."

The governor called him in earlier in December, he said, and after a series of meetings a price of $25,000 was agreed upon for the trucks, the order excluding one auxiliary motor, free mounting, delivery charges and service for one year. T. C. Johnson inspected the equipment and said it was "the best equipment he ever saw."

"The main argument made by the governor," he said, "was that if he let him have his way in this deal he would make it up to us in business later."

wholesale price of the merchandise used in a service is indeed the part of the cost. A legitimate profit is figured in, but the real which make up the total are items of expense which most people consider. For example: Our funeral parlor is equipped and furnished for a specific purpose—it is used for nothing else—the property, equipment, casket, casket room, preparation room, and automobiles run into hundreds of dollars, and anything less modern is a reflection on the public taste. In addition, there is the item of a fixed overhead—24-hour salaries, liability insurance, upkeep on cars, building, equipment, gas, oil, repairs, taxes, license fees, interest on investment, telephones, and light, depreciation, personal services, professional skill in embalming and plastic surgery.

It is readily seen, therefore, that the merchandise is but a small part of the total cost; although in days gone by it was the practice to make the price of the merchandise high enough to take in the "overhead." We believe it a fairer method to quote the price which includes merchandise and service complete to prevent confusion and misunderstanding.

COAL GOOD?

We won't cast any reflections on your intelligence by telling you that our coal is the "best in the world," or that "we never have had a single complaint." Some people don't like Goddala. We can't please them all—BUT, Peacock and Perittas are GOOD coals.

We have customers who pay extra drayage to have our coal delivered as far as Shoshone, Hazelton, Buhl, Hammon, Kimberly, Twin Springs, Contact, Pitt and Clove—there's a reason. Hundreds of Twin Falls people will vouch for the good qualities of these coals.

If you have never used either of these fuels, try an order—there's a difference. If you aren't satisfied, there is a reason—just let us know and we will find and correct the trouble. Over 90% of heating troubles are not due to the coal—our business is to find and correct these troubles, and help you get the most heat possible for your money.

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

LET'S BE AMERICANS

Senator Borah is by no means alone in his opinion lately voiced in the Senate that the United States has too long been involved in European affairs, and that unless there is a readjustment in Europe concerning money nearly to the American people, the United States must get out, and stay out, of Europe.

Says the Idaho Senator:

"It will cost us something to come out, but it will bankrupt us to stay in."

It is evident to Senator Borah that the part the United States has played in Europe's affairs since the World war has been of no real benefit to anybody concerned.

And it is becoming increasingly evident to Americans that the hope of the nation and of the world in so far as it relates to this nation, is to be found now, as it has been found in the past, in strengthening of the United States through conservation of this nation's ideals and resources.

President Hoover lately expressed this view in his message to the Congress in which he said: "The American people are the highest contribution to world stability," and again:

"Our duty is a country of such stability and security as can not be taken away from us by any other nation."

There are two angles of approach to the question. One is for this nation to go to the rest of the world for the world to come to us on our terms.

There is nothing in this nation's history up to the World War period, to indicate that the United States has not been served the rest of the world when it has been most faithful to American traditions and ideals.

It is consistent now to make the United States help to lead down a nation that has been an ideal and a tower of strength of the world for nearly two hundred years.

RESOLUTIONS

There is a good reason why New Year's affords a better time to make a good resolution than any other season of the year. Any date on which one may reach the conclusion that one would better do something from some practice to which one is addicted, or to adopt a course which one has not hitherto followed, is a good time to begin. However, New Year's is a favorite date because it is the start of another year. The date is wiped clean then and a new account is opened; it is easier to make a resolution than it is to keep it. Resolutions have to do with improvement. It doesn't require resolution to do worse than one did in the old year. A worse course offers few difficulties in execution. To do better is the one which requires fortitude and perseverance.

Despite resolutions we may make most of us do not change greatly from year to year. It is the trend, though, that makes the chief difference. With some the direction is an ascending plane while with others there is a down grade and the latter is the easier course to pursue, though the difference between the two may not be especially perceptible. Most of those who improve a little do not do so conspicuously, while many of those who grow worse do not do so at a rapid rate. The result depends on the kind of a groove in which one is running; for we do not run in grooves very largely. The person moving on a plane surface without any rule to hold him in his course is an exception.

We do not deny New Year's resolutions. Good ones made and broken may be much better than none made at all. Yet, one who never thinks of change of habits and motives except at the inception of another year will not get very far in personal uplift. These dates come too infrequently and there are not enough of them in a lifetime.

MORE DEER

New records for men and deer were made in the season just ended in Pennsylvania. Thirty-one men were bagged by their fellow-hunters. Ten hunters shot themselves. Seven others succumbed to heart attacks; evidently they couldn't stand the strain of the chase or the excitement of seeing a real deer.

But it is the deer fatalities that make the real surprise. There were fifty-four thousand of them shot, according to the state game commission. Such provable hunting of big game in an old and populous eastern state will be incredible in the majority of states where deer are seldom seen except in zoos.

Only a few years ago deer were very scarce in Pennsylvania. Now they have become so plentiful that an army of hunters is needed to keep them from becoming a pest to farmers. It is a remarkable illustration of what can be accomplished for the benefit of such sport by intelligent game laws.

REGULAR LIVING

John D. Rockefeller at ninety-five is pronounced by his Florida physician "in perfect health." He shows no sign of organic illness, is mentally and physically active for his age, and requires less medical attention than the other members of his household. Many will want to know why.

Probably a strain of natural longevity in his family. He has basic reason in this case, as in others of the kind. But sedulous care has much to do with it. Says the doctor:

"He guards his diet almost sacredly. But in his regular routine of living, he aside him most. Everything he does is regulated—his time to arise, to work, to play, to relax and to retire. He has followed this custom for years and is reaping the inevitable reward. If we all lived as Mr. Rockefeller does, we would be just as well off spiritually as he is. Most people, though, would not submit to such a regime. They do not want to be regular and systematic. They want to break the routine, they want life spiced with variety. They want to follow their whims and impulses, to leave room in their schedules for the unexpected. They prefer liberty to system. And if their years are fewer, they may maintain that they make up for it in amplitude of living.

Guiding Your Child

Assuming Good Will

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

The religious, think that Mrs. Lyne has been blessed with an unusually docile child.

He comes when she calls him, never objects to leaving his play and some indoors to be washed for dinner.

He takes his nap without a murmur. Yet the secret of Bobby's goodness undoubtedly lies far less in his native disposition than in the fact that his mother who always has taken care to grant an attitude of good will to him.

She has assumed cheerfully that he wanted to do as he was told. For voice or when she tells him to do this or that is both positive and friendly.

Bobby never has thought of resisting her regular and sensible commands because nothing in her face or in her tone of voice has suggested that he should.

Children are quick to take in either good or bad suggestions. If anything in the adult's manner suggests that what they are being asked to do is unpleasant, that they are expected to offer resistance, trouble is likely.

The child either will refuse outright, and perhaps discover that his stubbornness results in his getting his way—or he may learn the art of stalling while he holds the center of attention. Routine commands need only to be given a few times in an unpleasant, uniform way, before the child learns the technique of resistance and uses it habitually. Most children are disobedient less because disobedience really seems pleasant to them than because their mothers unconsciously have suggested it.

AMBITION

America is a country in which the legend of success is passed in every child almost from birth.

Every new-born can hope to become president, every pretty shop girl a millionaire bride.

Fathers want to bring up their boys to "something better" than their own lot.

A farmer is not content with farmer son. He wants them to be doctors, lawyers or trade leaders.

Every ambitious mother wants her daughter to do something more than merely earn a living or enjoy herself a failure unless she rides beyond the orbit into which he was born.

No one will quarrel with the ideal of giving our children the best possible start in life.

Yet this ambition should be tempered with thought for what will really constitute the child's fulfillment.

Obviously, not every boy can become president of the United States, and obviously not every child has in the makings of a career his parents may cherish.

Psychiatrists have accumulated data showing that the pressure upon children to rise above their parents or to carry on some particular family tradition is responsible for many nervous and thwarted and dissatisfied lives. Much better than bringing up a child with a fixed idea of what he must do, is to help him to find really worth-while and growing interests in the present.

Only through finding out for themselves the things they can do well, through being given wide opportunities for learning and experience can children discover the avenue that constitutes success in life for them.

WHY HE SHOWS OFF

The show-off in the family is usually alienated, ridiculed and put down in every way.

Showing off often is the result of being too much ignored.

The child, unable to make his presence felt in a legitimate way, resorts to doing things before bragging and making stunts before company.

Sometimes showing off results from the child's desire to attract attention to himself or to attract a brother or sister.

He does what he can to attract attention to himself or to attract a brother or sister.

Perhaps he is trying to compensate for some obvious handicap. He is physically weak, unusually ungainly in appearance, his showing off may be a mistaken attempt to put himself over.

Occasionally showing off is the result of having been spoiled and babied during early years.

Having been made to feel unduly important in the past, it is difficult for the child to admit his real position.

Unconsciously, what the show-off needs is reassurance and a chance to assert himself in ways which will earn real respect and recognition.

Give him tasks which he can do and be praised for. Help him to cultivate friends who will not make him feel inferior.

Ignore him when he shows off, but make a point of recognizing a really good turn or a really clever stunt or anything he does which shows that he is honestly trying to work and take responsibility.

News In Twin Falls 19 Years Ago

Taken From The Twin Falls News Files Thursday, December 26, 1912

"Twin Falls this year enjoys a 'white Christmas.' The first real snow of the season fell last Friday evening and continued until early Saturday morning. Snow boys have been at the height of their glory during the past few days. Advantage has been taken of the snow for sledding and sledding on behind wagons, buggies and bobcats.

Among the students here for the holidays from the state university at Moscow are Rollo Crater, Claude McKelwell, Clyde Magera, William McKeaster, Ray Cammack, Mince Katherine and Helen Piccarini and Jessie Starr, Kimberly.

The public schools closed Tuesday evening for the holidays, and will resume Thursday, January 2, 1913. The second semester will begin February 10. Beginning classes will be organized at all buildings at that time.

Dr. W. F. Pike leaves Thursday morning for Chicago where he will take a special post graduate course in surgery in the Polyclinic Institute. During his absence his practice will be cared for by Dr. Weaver.

Postal and express clerks are going through with the usual rush of holiday business, and the records of the Twin Falls offices will show a big increase over the same season in previous years. Reports from all sections of the country say that the mails and express lines are congested with the excess business.
