POTATO DISEASES GET ATTENTION IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, May 24 (Special to The News)—The potato disease problem that has plagued growers for at least 100 years, says a Reader, specialist in potato pathology with the University of Idaho agricultural experiment station, but "outlets" or pulling up of all un-healthy plants in the field, is the most common remedy.

Another method—including a service performed by the college of agriculture. Growers can send samples of their seed stock to Moscow in December to be grown—cleaned—of time in greenhouses. When one eye from each potato has grown to a sufficient height, trained men pick out the diseased plants and send the healthy potatoes back to the grower. Its plants them in an isolated location, using the "tuber-unit" method, and when they are grown has been inspected again. Potatoes destined in the fall are the start of his seed stock.

Five virus diseases are responsible for the most trouble to Idaho potato growers: mild mosaic, crinkle mosaic, rugose mosaic, leaf-roll, and spindle tuber. Witch's broom, giant hill, and calico also exist, but the extent of their damage is not great.

CUSTOM OF CUTWORMS ALLOWS DESTRUCTION

Water, about 1 gallon.

Thoroughly mix the dry bait and water together, then pour this solution over the dry mixture and mix. The mesh should be moist enough to break up in small particles when thrown from the hand.

Broadcast this poison bait on the ground just before plants are set. It should be applied late in the evening. Give them a second meal if necessary.

One species frequently becomes so numerous in alfalfa fields that the worms prevent the plants from starting growth for a month or more. A heavy Gooding with irrigation water will usually kill them. Birds and poultry will be safe from the bait if it is scattered in small party parcels.

MOSCOW POULTRY MAN ADVISES ON PULLETS

MOSCOW, May 24 (Special to The News)—Careful selection and proper feed are vital requirements for pullets while on range, says Tom Moore, poultry specialist with the University of Idaho agricultural extension division.

Pullets that are well rugged, and disease free will respond in high egg production when managed and feed are reasonably correct.

Dry laid well exposed to the sun is the best pullet range, as sunlight kills germs and worm eggs which thrive in grass, moist ground and in shady places. Shade is necessary to protect the birds from mid-day heat, but it should be provided by colony houses of the type recommended by the extension division.

Pullets cannot be comfortable when crowded, and comfort is as important as feed. Give them plenty of room. Roosts should be arranged so as to give free circulation of air over their heads at night.

Clean drink and feed arrangements are also important. Running water of any kind is not safe. Use fresh well water, preferably in barrels with faucets in the bottoms arranged to drip into long troughs. Chickens of all ages should be fed from troughs or hoppers, never on the ground or litter.

Pullets on range require much less animal protein than chicks of brooder age. Too much protein in

PURE from Start to Finish

—and THEY'RE Milder THEY TASTE BETTER

Nowadays, when so many people are talking about purity... pure food, pure milk, pure water... it's worth a minute to tell you something about the purity of Chesterfield cigarettes.

All the materials that go into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes are tested again and again by expert research chemists. Just like the things you eat and drink.

The tobacco is pure—the right kind, Domestic and Turkish both, mild, sweet, ripe. The paper is pure—clean, white, the best cigarette paper that money can buy. There is purity in every ingredient and cleanliness in every operation.

You can know, when you light a Chesterfield, that it is as pure as science can make a cigarette. And your taste will tell you it's milder, it tastes better.

Rest Ordered For "Jafst"

POLICE HAVE pinned their hopes of picking up the trail of the Lindbergh kidnapers on John F. Condon, aged educator who made the $50,000 ransom payment. Guiding Your Child

THE CHILD'S MIND

By Mrs. Anna Lewis

Nancy dawdled over her dressing. Her mother, standing over her, impatient to be off and exasperated at the delay, her shirt and blouse, her into her clothes.

"What are you doing?" she mother cried. "Hurry! It's half past eight!"

"I know why you slapped me. It wasn't because I was slow, really. It was because I didn't get dressed as fast as you. You never even slapped me before. You never even got impatient before."

"I know you are angry with me. I know by what you said at breakfast. You always say that I don't hurry. Only I don't think it very easy for you."

Children do not want to be told that they do not have the courage to do their duty. They want to be told that they are not doing it right.

Can your methods of discipline and the inspection of your child's dress—really self-controlled, honest and fair in nature; your practice with him, his own, according.

He does not feel toward you that respect and love will without which the relation of parent and child cannot be either wholesome or constructive.

It is undoubtedly impossible to avoid being honest and then angry or to be honest and then angry.

But an honest recognition of our own feelings and their causes should never arise from making the child bear the burden of our personal difficulties.

When we feel that we cannot control ourselves, that we must react, we should get away from the child. He should be sent out to play or to go with a friend, or we ourselves may go away until we have quieted our nerves and regained our self-command.
