THE OPEN SEASON

Hurry boys, and get things ready for tomorrow. The day when you open up the season. On the sage hen and the Jay. Get your guns and ammunition. Put some oil on the trigger. Make it shine and glister bright. Round the breaking of the day. It will sound like Coak's army. To the sage hen and the Jay.

Give your dog an extra haircut. Give yourself an extra shave. And be thankful you are living. That you haven't struck the mat. Get the coffee on to scatter. Put some bacon on to fry. For you'll need it in the morning. When the birds begin to fly. Tramp the fields and feel the sunshine. Pull your strings with clean fresh air. Just forget your needless troubles. When you see them flying there.

Bag your limit, get a plenty. For we love lots of birds to spare. You can find them in the air. You can see them in the air. Then, go home and tell the story. How he flew ten fathoms high. Almost vanished in the distance. He'll wait the earth and sky. By a lucky shot you got him. Dropped! His cold and did it fair. And there's not a doubt about it.

Just so on and he lies forever. Thru the zephyr and the tears. And you'll still be gone plenty. For another thousand years.

The Wolf Story

When the writer was a small boy many, many, years ago, going to a little public school, in a small German town in Iowa,

In Our First Reader

there was the story of the boy, going through the forest to his home. On his way he passed a cluster of huts occupied by

Wood Choppers

The boy thought it would be a fine joke to cry WOLF, WOLF, so he did, and the Woodsmen thinking him in danger, ran to his assistance, but found there was no Wolf.

A Few Days

after this incident, the same boy in the same place was actually attacked by a Wolf, and screamed loudly for help, but, thinking it a repetition of the former joke no one came to help him and he perished. This story made a permanent impression on me.

I have not repeated it for the old people as they probably have read it many times. Perhaps some of the Rising Generation have never read it. Its influence has affected my entire business career.

The Merchant

who cries "Wolf" in his advertising when there is no Wolf must surely pay the penalty.

Your Confidence

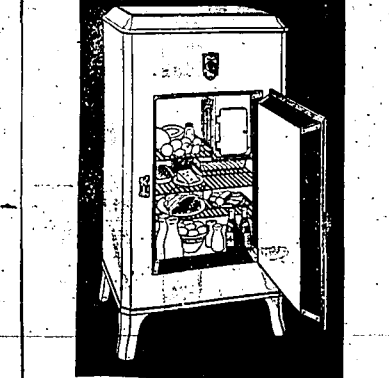

in us and in our each and every statement in our advertisements, we consider our greatest business asset. WE MUST HAVE IT.

Truth

Pure and unalloyed is a great advertisement in itself. It is the only confidence breeder. Watch our "Ads" closely from now until New Years Day. There will be strong statements, alluring price promises, and whenever we cry "Wolf," it will be there.

OLD VIENNA MINE WORK PROGRESSES

Company Operates 56 Claims And Development of Property Becomes Extensive

Extensive development work is going forward on the old Vienna mine property on Smiley creek near the head of the Salmon river and considerable interest is manifested in the work being done.

The entire group of 56 claims is now being operated by the Idaho Mineral Products company, Limited, with John L. Mercer in charge as manager. The company is being financed by a Canadian mining syndicate which is represented locally by J. G. Stedrick, attorney at law.

The Vienna mine is one of the oldest properties in this section of the state and has been worked successfully at intervals for many years. The present effort, however, is on a larger scale than any former operations and valuable quantities of silver and gold are said to be very satisfactory. A car of ore recently shipped to Lake City City for smelting purposes, the value of which is said to indicate the ability of the management to operate profitably.

The property is being worked by means of four tunnels and a large amount of ore has been shipped to the ground comprising a good part of the property has been thoroughly explored. The shaft is being deepened and it is expected to be in shape to operate within ten days.

Seventeen men are employed at the mine. A well-equipped sawmill is being operated on the property which is also used to operate the compressor, electric plant and other machinery. New roads, bridges and a new mill race have been completed. A road from the main highway to the property in preparation for the hauling of the mill machinery to the site has been brought in. Quite a number of new buildings have been erected as a part of the development program.

The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS: Trouble arose upon a Sunday when Mrs. Merriman, who had been secretly married to Mark Anderson, was in the "Cage" trying to become wealthy. Her husband, John Anderson, seems to have become distant, and now her sister Flora, who has been away since she is going to leave her husband, Bea.

Chapter 17
A NEW ANDERSON
Flora was proposing to behave in an abominably selfish way. And you—what do you think of her selfishness, Sondra wondered.

Sondra knew she was not. She cared nothing for Flora's happiness as long as her own life was secure; she had not even cared for Mark's happiness. She had not even been willing to share his life with him, she had shrunk from the hardships and discomforts of a life with him.

"Only she could see him again, just for a moment, only to be resented by his love."
"She hardly closed her eyes all night, and when the maid came in the next morning her first question was: 'Have you seen Mrs. Lomax this morning?'"

"Yes, miss."
"Is she—quite well?" Sondra asked.
"Oh, yes, miss—I am, taking her breakfast up at nine."
Sondra gave a sigh of relief. Last night was a bad dream which she had dreamed.

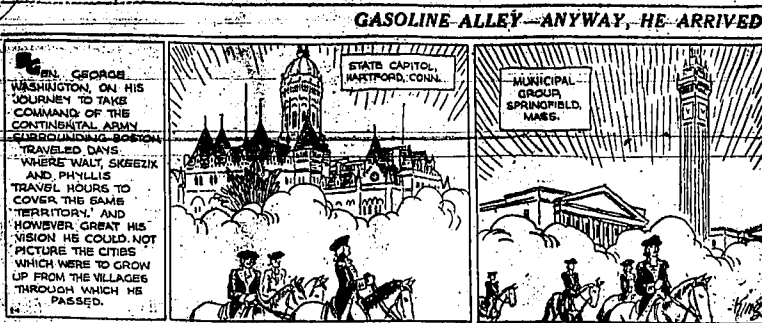

"What has she done since she took up the telephone receiver from beside the bed and called John?"
"Flora said she had no idea where he was; she was concerned; he had parted the bed of friends."

"Yes—Anderson told me."
"She was conscious of a sudden queer feeling."
"I asked you to ring like you said with an effort to speak lightly. 'I'm not up at 9 o'clock, I'm in a hurry—will anything important?'"

"No—only to see how sweet and what I am sorry could not meet you yesterday."
"Oh—there was—had I told you I had an engagement?"
"No—only to see how sweet and what I am sorry could not meet you yesterday."

"I was always a bad hand at writing letters."
"She rallied with an effort."
"Well, now we have met, again, now we are here together, and she asked laughing, 'I'm at an entirely loose end for once.'"

"I'm at an entirely loose end for once."
"She rallied with an effort."

SIMPLE FAREWELL MARKS LAST RITES OF W. ZENAS SMITH

Lawyer, Friend Many Years, Delivers Eloquent Eulogy at Sunset, Graveside Funeral Services Here

With a common purpose to pay a final tribute to one who not only was outstanding in Twin Falls business circles for nearly a quarter of a century but who also had contributed much to the community life, a group of more than 200 friends assembled in Twin Falls cemetery at sunset last evening when a solemn, simple funeral service was held at the graveside by William Zenas Smith, late owner of the Royal bakery, president of the Rotary club and leader in many community enterprises.

Spokesman for the group, former State Senator Martin J. Bawley, said that for many years, delivered a brief eulogy. Then Pich L. Ball read the Twenty-third Psalm, and the service was at an end.

Pall bearers chosen from among old time Twin Falls friends were Mr. M. Maxwell, Burton E. Moran, M. A. Strunk, C. E. Booth, W. E. Nixon and Edwin A. Wilson, surviving child. Juliet Smith at the services, last evening were two other relatives of Mr. Smith, his sister, Mrs. James L. Moran, of San Francisco, and a cousin, Harry Dodge, Los Angeles, and many friends who had come from a distance to attend were Mr. and Mrs. George White, Yakima, Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, Clark, Toponatz, Washington.

Interment was beside the grave of Mr. Smith's wife, Mrs. Johanna Cecilia Smith, one time teacher of the Liberty party school here, who died here August 23, 1930.

Universally mourned "He lives long who lives well," Senator Bawley said; applying this old truth to the life of Mr. Smith. "To deliver any eulogy or give expression to words of appreciation regarding the life, virtues or activities of our departed friend, whose passing is so universally mourned," the speaker said, "would be but to re-peat what has appeared in the columns of the newspapers and been heard on the streets and in the homes of the city since his many years of his life were spent. No more need be said; no little more can be said.

However, from my acquaintance with him and judging by a former experience connected with a like occasion, I feel that he would like to have us gather here on this beautiful summer evening in these peaceful surroundings and speak a word of farewell.

"Of the feelings that effect us most at this time the strongest is that that I regret that he has been taken when there seemed to be ahead of him many years of activity, for as time is reckoned in these days he was a young man. There is an old saying that, 'He lives long who lives well.' Would he not have been content to have rounded out a long life. His nature was a well-filled reservoir from which he drew an abundance of love and dependent upon him the love that makes for happiness. From it he drew and gave to the community beautifully, not only in material matters of every-day business, but in those things that have added to the beauty and character of the community. At all times having in reserve enough to build and maintain a successful business.

"Only a few days ago he had every reason to look forward to many years of business and usefulness for he had much to live for—his daughter who so much needed him and to whom the warmest sympathy of the community goes out so strongly; his business in which he was so successfully engaged; and to whom he was so sincerely attached, but it was not to be. He went at mid-day, long before the shadows of evening had begun to gather, to his home and peacefully and his property the brightest.

Like a Candle-light "No doubt he wanted to live but I question whether he would have wanted to remain here until his natural habits were dimmed with age, preferring, rather, to be taken, as he was, when life was at full tide. Not long since, under circumstances like these, these lines were read. The situation makes a reading of them appropriate now, for I think he would have endorsed the sentiment they express:

"Let me live out my years in heat of blood, Let me die drunken with the drummer's wail, I'm not at all in this soul-house built of mud, Or topping to dust, a vacant shrine.

"Let me go quickly like a candle-light, Snuffed out just at the hey-day of its glow; Give me high noon, and let it be night, Thus would I go.

"And grant me when I face the face of my Creator, One haughty cry to pierce the gray Perseus! Let me be at the tune—except fiddle string, That feels the Master's Melody, and snuff!

"He went at high noon. In the hey-day of the candle light his life went out; the wick—wax string. The that on the instrument he played so well, snapped, leaving us in sorrow but happy in the remembrance that we knew him so long and so well.

"The blessings brought to his case, will soon wither and decay. Their fragrance wither now, the air will quickly pass. They at best are but poor in return for what he brought to his family and associates and through them to the community. In his garden of life he grew the most beautiful products. There was a flower of industry for he attended faithfully to his business and his ex-

"I almost forgot my good deed for today as when it happened to think about them poor kids down by the railroad an' took 'em our soap."

Every day dutifully the flower of integrity for he was honest and true to every trust; the flower of consideration for he was considerate of others; the flower of cheerfulness for he was always cheerful, and without the flower of a clean life in word, thought and act. The tongue which now is silent was never given to bear in false witness or to speak evil, but good of others.

"These flowers which his life has presented to us at this time bind with the ties of sincere affection to a garden to carry with us and send forth as long as memory continues. At this time and in this presence I am pleased to say that a recognition of the virtues of independence in thinking, of unselfish public service, of helpfulness to others, and a cheerful spirit exemplified in the life of William Zenas Smith, makes the wreath which I bring to the service as we bid him a last good-bye.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS LEND AID TO STUDENTS

State Congresses of Parents and Teachers in approximately three-quarters of the states have invested $157,897.88 in student loans and scholarships to "shabby" boys and girls to continue their education, says a statement given out by Mrs. Frank Bonington, Twin Falls, publicity chairman for the Idaho Congress of Parents and Teachers. The statement quoted a report of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. The figure would be considerably larger, it was stated, if information were complete for all of the states.

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers' report indicates that practically all of the 48 states have been exceedingly active in such work. Neither has the assistance given students been limited to what might ordinarily be thought of as student aid. In addition to such funds, local Parents' Teacher associations have helped families in a wide variety of ways in order to enable the boys and girls to go on to school. They have supplied lunches, clothing, shoes, etc. Such efforts have been an appreciable part in the work of practically every Parent-Teacher association during this period of unemployment.
