CARR RUNS 400-METER RACE IN 46.2 SECONDS

United States Collects 22 Points in Day, Increasing Total to 180, as Finland Remains Second With 49

By ALAN GOULD
OLYMPIC STADIUM, LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—In two thundering roars that shook the stadium, Bill Carr raced to spectacular victory over Ben Eastman in the 400-meter final today. Carr, who had won the 400-meter final at Lauri Lehtinen, son of Finland's Olympic runner, barely noted out Ralph Hill, American star, in a widely disputed climax to the 500-meter final.

Lehtinen's tactics, doubly astonishing for the reason that he still comes from the strong enough to match Hill's challenge, drew the wrath of official disapproval.

Beauty And Ability Mingle In Olympics

Michigan Sprinter Sets New Olympic Record

ASSOCIATED PRESS telephoto of the United States' fleet 100-meter men, led by Eddie Tolan, took first, second and fourth places in the century to hang up a new record of 10.5 seconds and add to the United States scoring total in the Olympic games at Los Angeles. The finish of the final, shown above, reveals Tolan beating Metcalfe by a few inches. Left to right: Tolan; John, Germany, (third), Simpson, Los Angeles, (fourth), and Metcalfe, Marquette, Indiana, (second).—(P) Photo.

Displaces Former Olympic Mark

MAKING HIS DEBUT in the Olympic games in Los Angeles, Joe Healey, New York, winning a heat in the 400-meter hurdle trials in 52.2 seconds to upset the former mark of 53.4 held jointly by F. Morgan Taylor and Lord David Burghley. Finishing second here is Adolph of France and third, J. Arekous, Sweden.—(P) Photo.

Canada Wins Olympics High Jump

DUNCAN McNAUGHTON, Canadian who competes for Southern California in college, won the Olympic games high jump championship in the stadium, clearing 6 feet, 5-8 inches, marking the first time in history the title was slipped from the United States.—(P) Photo.

COURT NAMES RECEIVER OF ORCHARD PROPERTIES

E. B. Johnson, Twin Falls, is to be receiver of the Decker Orchard company properties north of Piler for the 1932 season, under appointment by District Judge Adam B. McArthur, terms, in district court here yesterday. Under the court order Mr. Johnson is to receive the landlord's share of crops, rents and profits from the orchard properties which were involved in foreclosure proceedings lately started in the district court here by George Booth, holder of $10,000 notes executed in September, 1926, and secured by mortgage on the property.

The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYLES

SYNOPSIS: Sonda Kent's money is vanishing—and for the first time in her life, she realizes she must support herself. Since her sister Flora left her husband Sonda had no home. Sonda, a woman, in the Congo. John Anderson, who has seemed a guardian, appears distant.

Chapter 21
STUDIED REVENGE
How could people without money manage to live? Sonda asked herself.

"People like Cass for instance; it was a generally accepted fact that he was eternally broke, and yet he managed to live and to enjoy himself. Of course a man was different, and yet she felt a great curiosity to know how Cass existed."

Perhaps Anderson really helped her. She had been so generous and Sonda knew that the two were friends. Six weeks—two months ago she would have told him of her position; but not now; she knew that in the matter of their changed relationship she would rather die than let him know. "It's no longer any friends to me, so what does it matter what I do?" she asked herself usefully, and with frequent courage and determination she would discuss, paid her hotel bill and told the desk clerk that she would be leaving at the end of the week.

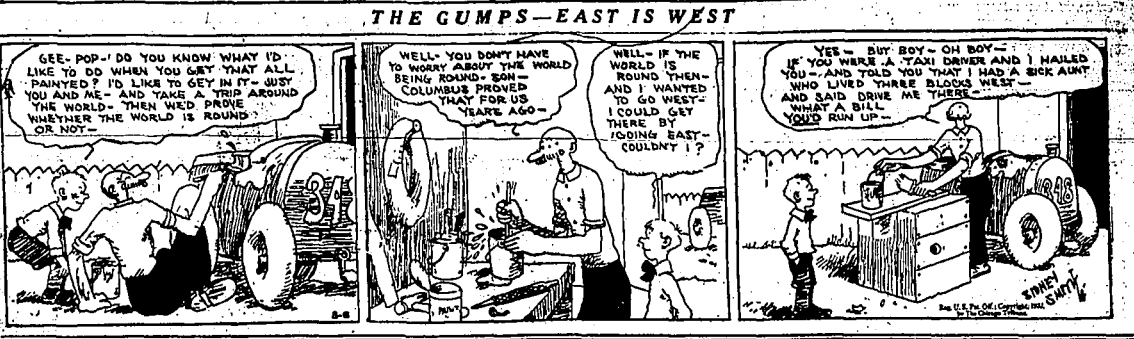

Then she put on her hat and coat and went out to look-for-a-cheaper place to live. It was a beautiful morning, and Sonda's spirits rose as she walked along the sidewalk. She knew that she was alone, and she knew that at the end of the street she would find a bus that was going northwards. She had heard vaguely that hard-up people often found inexpensive lodgings in Cass's neighborhood and at any rate it would be a new and amusing experience after the life of hurry-and-gaitly-she-had-been accustomed to lead.

When she entered Flora was waiting for her. She had a sharp pang to see her. It would have been fun if they could have shared their new independence together. "When one door shuts, another always opens," the words seemed to echo in her mind. She found them comforting.

"After all, I'm young and fairly bright—there must be some sort of work I can do."

How concerned Mark would be when he got her letter telling her of this new, strange upheaval in her life. "Why would you know that she was alone, even though she had not let him know the true facts of her position—Mark had always taken it for granted that she had plenty of money."

She let the bus and walked along. It would be amusing not to tell anyone of her new address—she thought when he discovered that she had vanished; possibly he would not care. Her thoughts soared ahead into a fantastic future. She might possibly make money, some day and be
