SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD
By HUBBARD KEAVY
Associated Press Feature Writer
HOLLYWOOD comes to life in the screen, the future appears, for the moment, anyway, undimmed.

When an actor's phenomenal ability of fallow falls off, the studio which he has been with, and which was mournful at his estate, is not so much as the actor's former manager, but there are very, very few which have this reflected glory.

It is true, the lack of such a provision has not been greatly felt; but now, with greatly improved means of communication and with growing sentiment that the complexity of modern life has not been corrected by the simple, it certainly should be made possible to eliminate unnecessary County lines.

Facility with which American people are reverting to methods of better and to the extent of a hundred years ago and more, is one of the interesting, and encouraging, developments of our present economic situation.

It is an old argument whether journalism is a trade, a business or a profession. Many a good newspaper man will say it is all three. Carl W. Ackerson, editor of the American Journal of Journalism, in a survey of the American press for the past year, maintains that it is pre-eminently a profession, advancing rapidly in prestige and power.

THOMAS CALLS FOR FARM PROTECTION

Idaho Senator Declares Tariff Provides Way to Eliminate Surplus

BOISE, Oct. 1 (Special to The News) — Protective tariff — around which a certain part of the current political campaign is revolving — not only benefits domestic markets but it provides a way for the elimination of the large surplus in agricultural commodities, believes Senator John Thomas of Idaho, who is a candidate for re-election.

Senator Thomas is, and he records in the Senate record, to be a staunch advocate of the doctrine of "American markets for American products."

More than 90,000,000 acres of farm land would be required to produce the agricultural products imported annually during the period from 1923 to 1928, inclusive, he said. "There is no reason why we should import the products of other countries and United States farmers to work and raise these products at home."

Wheat, corn and cotton land could be devoted to this production, thereby reducing the surplus in those commodities. With almost perfect balance between our production and our needs we would be able to return to our surplus and to our labor foreign products out of our markets almost entirely.

Senator Thomas illustrated the growing need of protection of our domestic markets by presenting an example of an increasing agricultural import — wheat — from $70,700,000 in 1900 to $275,500,000 in 1928. "The tariff," he said, "is the only way to protect our domestic markets without the protection of the tariff."

He said, "We must save American industries and American jobs from the dark disaster of a flood of cheaply produced surplus goods of the world. Tariff protection enables United States producers to compete successfully in our own markets with foreign products is imperative."

Belmont to Farmers

The recent congress has given us a route in the way established to protect agriculture. No one contends that this measure is perfect. We have never had a tariff which probably never will have; but the increased rates on farm commodities proved a hindrance to production to United States farmers during one of the most distressing and protracted periods in the history of this country.

The tariff act of 1930 has assured United States agriculture the benefits of our domestic markets; more than 90 per cent of the total value of all goods produced in our country is consumed at home. Imports of agricultural products were strikingly reduced. Comparison of values before and after the tariff act also shows that our tariff was effective in maintaining a high-price level in United States markets.

The charge that the United States tariff has resulted in tariff retaliation by other countries is not only untrue and misleading, the senator declared.

"There has been a tariff retaliation trend since the war which is naturally reflected in tariff rates."

"We declare that no matter how deep back these increases were not, however, retaliation; but a desire to protect the markets of our own domestic producers and products — domestic industries — with a view to becoming a nearly self-sufficing as possible. In fact, as far as farm products are concerned they have gone a great deal farther than have any other products of our country from foreign competition."

Senator Thomas believes that still additional tariff protection would be beneficial to the United States farmer.

"The lower farm rates at this time would work incalculable harm," he said. "Agriculture is staggering under such a heavy burden. It can bear no more. The way to aid agriculture is not to destroy its profits but to conserve them by giving United States farmers complete control of the United States markets."

Current Trends And Happenings Claiming Comment In The Realm Of Women

NEW LENGTHS AND LINES MARK 1932 EVENING APPAREL

Seven-Eighths, Three-Quarters and Two-Thirds Lengths Find Favor Among Discriminating Paris Women

By BARBARA BRAUFORT (Associated Press Fashion Editor) PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—Evening gowns have taken on new lines and lengths this winter. The full length coat sweeping to the hem, which has been in vogue for the last two years, has given way to a number of shorter lengths.

Some Reveal Neck Some Reveal Front Seven-eighth length coats revealing six or seven inches of the front below three-quarter length coats and two-third length swag-gar models are all "greater and newer" this season. For the woman who prefers a really short wrap there are brief waist-length models finished with swirling side-draped capes.

Velvet Favored Fabrics Velvets, in tones as colorful as the contents of a jeweled box, are favored fabric. Most of them are trimmed with collars or swirling bands of luxurious furs, while others, made of a new velvet fabric, have a princess silhouette and a screen-length wrap of rich cardinal purple velvet is designed with a princess silhouette and trimmed with a cushion collar of tulle.

Moderns Borrow Cleopatra's Ideas PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—"Cleopatra corsets" embodied in the design of 1932 evening frocks caused a stir during the recent winter style shows. The corsets, following the exact design of those worn by the Egyptian beauty nearly 2000 years ago, were brastraps of silver sequins appliqued on frocks of black mousseline and velvet with shoulder length capes of the same transparent fabric.

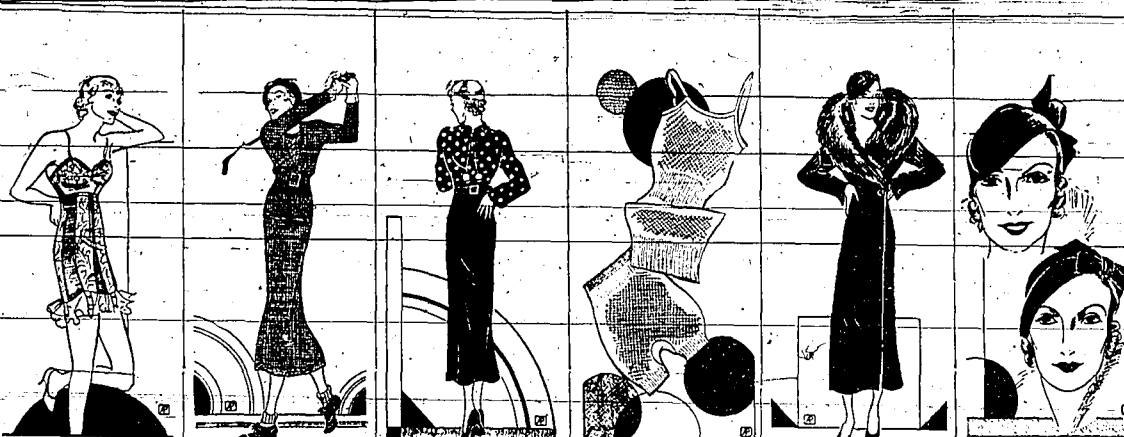

Fur's Come Back In New Fashion PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—Fur is back in style. The new model is a tuxedo from the little eyebrow affair worn this spring, however, for it was draped over the head and fastened to the tip of the nose. Most of these veils are large meshed designs stamped with champagne dots. Black is the favorite color.

VERSATILITY!

The night club gown of white silk worn by Adrienne Ames quickly turns into an evening frock when the ruffled lace gimp is removed. Sable borders the armholes.

STRAIGHT FROM PARIS—Smart Notes From The World's Fashion Capital

Designed for the average figure, this 17-inch girdle conforms to the new long Princess lines.

A smart sports suit is this heavy wool knit in navy blue. The blouse is knitted loosely in a shell design.

White-embroidered polka dots add interest to this brown-flecked wool dress. Note the high neckline.

New wooly underwear in honey-comb mesh is half wool reinforced with silk and cotton.

This black wool crepe coat has a large red fox collar... The sleeve treatment is novel.

The hand draped turban sketched has a hand tied bow. A large double bow also trims the semi-cuff hat.

CO-ED FASHIONS FILL NEEDS OF GAYER CAMPUS MOODS THIS WINTER

Co-eds, returning to college this season or facing their first year work, alike may be looking with favor on an outfit like the one below. The jacket is of natural chambray and billiard green knit is the material for skirt and sleeves.

This dinner dress (below) for college social events is knicker. The material used is rough gray crepe. The color note is struck by the armholes—sleeves—jacket—collar—adorned with wine-colored plated stilette velvet.

Above is a burgundy velvet evening wrap designed for formal college events. The scarf is adjustable, and the sleeves full. A feature is the high collar—sleeves—collar—adorned with wine-colored plated stilette velvet.

Called the official Olympic games beach pajama, this costume combines a striped pullover jersey shirt with narrow ankle-length fisherman's trousers.

This copy of a Schiaparelli sport suit (above) was fashioned for the school-bound girl. Its checked material finds its match in the scarf. The brown sweater coat with yellow checks is of three-quarter length.

A Chanel suit was the inspiration for this copy, directing its appeal to the campus set. The shoulder cape is detachable. The jacket is wine-colored and the skirt is black and white checked.

Unique Chinese Screen Becomes Door

(Prepared by the Decorators Club of New York for the News)

This hall, decorated by Gertrude Brooks, contains two unique things. Most noticeable is the huge Chinese four-panel screen, the two center panels of which are hinged to form a door. The screen is set on the table at the right, formed of two Chinese benches of teakwood, set one on either.

BLACK AND WHITE SILK MAKES BELIERS FROCK WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Mrs. Ogden Mills is wearing a dress of black and white flared silk, with long light sleeves fitted into wide arm holes.

The neckline is softly draped and the dress is belted, but is belted into a ruffled effect at the natural waistline. Her wide black hat is tall.

Even the plecrust table is Chinese Chippendale.

'LIPSTICK RED' GAINS AS POPULAR SHADE

PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—Lipstick red is one of the smartest shades for the moment. Sport's coats and jackets are often seen in the new bright hue. One of the smartest coats of the moment is a coat model designed with three wide tucks on the shoulders and a triangular tucked pocket near the waistline.

MRS. DOCK PREFERS WHITE FOR MORNINGS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Mrs. William N. Dock often wears white costumes in the mornings at her country place, Notre Sid, in nearby Virginia. The wife of the Secretary of Labor may be seen walking in the garden almost any morning in a white dress, surrounded by her snow-white collars and ties.

IMITATION LAMB SCORES AS NEW-FUR SUBSTITUTE

PARIS, Oct. 1 (AP)—Flesh imitation lamb is offered by one designer this winter as a substitute for costly furs. With a black velvet frock she shows a little white capelet and, made up of the plush.

40,000 Fans See Trojans Crusade in Washington State, 20-0

Stars in Contest With Utah Eleven Fail to Carry On

Disappointing Clash Results in Two Touchdowns Both Being Scored on Blocked Kicks and One on Pass

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN (Associated Press Sports Writer)
OLYMPIA, Wash., Oct. 1.—Good fortune handed the stars of the Washington State football team their first victory in the Pacific coast conference football season today as the Cougars of Washington State, 20 to 0.

Forty thousand persons watched the lighter and faster men of Trojans, who were favored to win, and the heavier and slower men of the Cougars, who were favored to win, in a performance boded ill for another day.

The Irvine Warburton, who flashed so brilliantly a week ago against Utah, failed to follow his interest and otherwise conducted himself as just another quarterback, instead of a star. A 147-pound center, who had been the star of the Cougars in the previous season, was not to be depended upon for anything more than a possible although there were at least three opportunities.

Good fortune smiled on the Cougars, who were favored to win, in a performance boded ill for another day. The Irvine Warburton, who flashed so brilliantly a week ago against Utah, failed to follow his interest and otherwise conducted himself as just another quarterback, instead of a star.

Washington State led downed the Trojans by a 20-0 score. The Trojans were downed on a 15-yard penalty. Southern California gained more yards, however, during the game than they did in any other game.
