The Task Before Us

(An Editorial)

SUSPICION and mistrust nurtured upon a diet of rumors, innuendo and baseless gossip constitute a poor sort of background for the job with which the people of Twin Falls are now confronted.

The job referred to is not a particularly complicated task. All it takes is a little less of selfishness and a little more of a spirit of co-operation, good will and mutual helpfulness among the rank and file of Twin Falls citizens.

Leadership in the Twin Falls county is not lacking. Initiative, energy and determination characterize its effort, but this effort will not succeed, cannot aid, unless aid comes too from the people as a whole.

This is the task before us. To lend a full measure of assistance in confidence, good will and mutual friendship to the rebuilding of our mutual interests for the common good of all.

It is a task worthy of our highest endeavors.

FIRES IN TIMBER OF OREGON CAUSE $2,000,000 LOSS

Forestry Officials Report Hundreds of Families Homeless in Wide Area Swept by Conflagration

(By The Associated Press) PORTLAND, Oct. 5.—With several hundred families homeless, forest fires which caused loss of upward of $2,000,000 during the day in the area today and forestry officials breathed hopefully that danger was over.

Great fires which stormed through scattered sections of the Oregon mountains and reached parts of southwestern Washington consuming small towns and destroying giant trees in the days which followed the breath of the flames, dropped to a lull.

The sun was drenched by the rain of smoke which insulated the earth from the oppressive heat of three days of unseasonable weather. The sun was higher.

All this added the living fire fighters who by the hundreds have flamed the area for three days with the blasting advance of the smoky flames and who have time and again seen these flames shatter man-made boundaries.

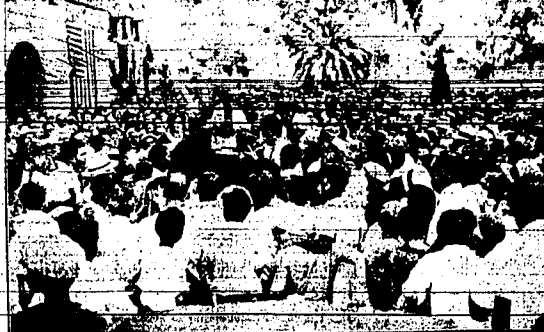

In the timber town of Cochrans, only the main station remained of the buildings which had housed 200 inhabitants and which had been the headquarters of the U. S. Forest Service. The railroad's loss was great and the logging company's equipment and much timber was destroyed.

Wind-blown trees lay in the path which the entire area of the forest and the entire area of thousands of acres from the red destruction.

Forestry officials estimate that 100 families were made homeless by the fires. Red Cross workers cared for the other actions of the day.

Washington's fire and the Oregon fire were the most serious of the day. The danger today was no more over but there was at least a respite in the danger of the fires.

MAYOR POPE MOUNTS STUMP IN POCATELLO

POCATELLO, Oct. 5 (AP)—James P. Pope, mayor of Boise and Democratic candidate for United States senator, declared in an address here tonight that economic recovery would be hastened by a flexible currency with resultant increase in the amount of money in circulation. He said this might be accomplished by renomination of silver.

Pope's address marked the opening of his campaign in Blaine County for the seat held by Senator Thomas. The Boise mayor and Judge William M. Morgan, nominated on the same ticket for state supreme court, put in a busy day with afternoon talks at Blaine, Grace, Lava Hot Springs, and McCall. Judge Morgan spoke at Downey tonight, defending the administration of Governor Hoax.

Pope declared the farmer must get out of the soil. He said Idaho farmers, he said, are unable to harvest their crops because the low prices will not meet expenses. The farmers are bearing the entire burden of the protective tariff system, he continued.

The nominee recalled the record of Senator Thomas and called on Idaho voters to support Governor Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, and the Democratic congressional ticket in order to uphold Roosevelt's program for economic recovery.

PRESIDENT HOOVER SPEAKS
In the light of his great speech at Des Moines on Tuesday evening, President Hoover stands out in relief...

TAKE CARE OF OUR TOWN
In many communities, and particularly in older settled localities, custom as well as common sense supports the proposition that local labor should be given the first chance...

Without a particle of a particle of offense, and in personal apology, the President has lashed out vigorously, cutting the ground clean out from under his opponents...

His Des Moines speech is a fighting talk, fairly bristling with military terms. "The battle against depression is being waged," he said...

In language that all of us can understand, he has told us why it is imperative that our gold standard should be maintained.

His stalwart stand on the protective tariff for American agriculture, the tariff on sugar and on wool, has been a mainstay of the tariff issue...

There are this minute, he said, "two million cattle in the Northern states of Mexico seeking market. The price is about two dollars and a half...

Continuing in readily understandable terms, the President says, "Except for the quadrupling of the tariff on wool, the tariff on sugar is twenty-five per cent below our price; pork, thirty per cent; lard, thirty-five per cent; lamb and beef, thirty to fifty per cent; beans, forty per cent; wool, thirty per cent."

"Ninety per cent of my market is at home," he said, "and I propose to return this market to the American farmer."

So sure is the President of the essential righteousness of the fight he is making for the nation's prosperity, and such is the honesty of his make-up, that he does not hesitate to admit mistakes. Concerning the attempt to peg the prices and cushion the fall of agricultural commodities...

THOUSANDS OF OUR PEOPLE, the eye, "are saying that 'things could not be worse.' No person who has any remote understanding ever utters that remark. Let no man tell you it could not be worse. It could be so much worse that these days would look like yesterday's."

And thank the President points again to the ultimate objective of our present struggle, in consideration of which we may all find an satisfying source of encouragement to continue the fight.

"Our cause is not alone the restoration of property," he says. "I have had to describe the complicated processes of currencies and taxation and other such dreary things. They are but the tools we use to manage the processes by which we manage the old, old question, where will all we live. They are necessary tools, but they are not ends in themselves. We are a nation of twenty-five million people, and we have three million homes, each warmed by the fires of affection and cherishing within it a mutual solicitude for kinfolk and children. Their safety is what we are really striving for. Their happiness our true concern. Our most solemn hope for them is that they may share richly in a spiritual life as well, that puts them at peace with their fellows and also with the will of a beneficent providence. Out of our striving for material blessings must come the spiritual and educational, the moral and the holding of national ideals, the forming of national character. These are the real aspirations of our people. These are the promises of America, and these promises must be fulfilled."

It is true that those high in the councils of the President's party are responsible for his decision to deliver the address at Des Moines, we are all of us under obligation to them for a document that must rank as a classic exposition of the right we are making and the ideal we are cherishing. At this, one of the most critical periods in our history.

Non-resident labor takes its wages out of the community when it goes back to its own home, and leaves the community with its reduced tax base. It is a situation that needs to be corrected by any mandate from outside authority. It is an affair in which each individual member of the community must justify his own record.

White Eggs
An old New York custom is moving westward. Westeners have long been willing to pay more for white eggs than for brown ones, regardless of the effect on the color of the shell. The value of an otherwise good egg. The eye had to be pleased as well as the sense of taste and smell, and apparently it could only be pleased by white-shelled eggs. Persons willing to pay for the cream-shelled eggs procured by this firm.

Now, the Egg Men's Association reports, the correct style in eggs from poultry farms this winter, even in the Middle West and perhaps along the Pacific Coast, is to be white. The egg of the white hen is a brown-egg-or-really-colored-egg will doubtless find their service to humanity confined to the roaster or the frying pan. They will not be wanted for their eggs.

No amount of science or argument will ever make the white egg for any other kind but so delicate and edible. The trend toward white egg dominance is probably not epochal in any way. It merely shows how whims can spread and become national habits. They work that way in politics and other important fields.

Nothing Venture

by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Nan Francis, investigating with Ferdinand Wren, the disappearance of Jervis Weare, her husband, according to the newspaper, she was well. She had learned only that Leonard Crew and Robert Leonard, both of whom would gain by Jervis' death, each have good alibis. Fear for Jervis' life tortures Nan.

CHAPTER 40

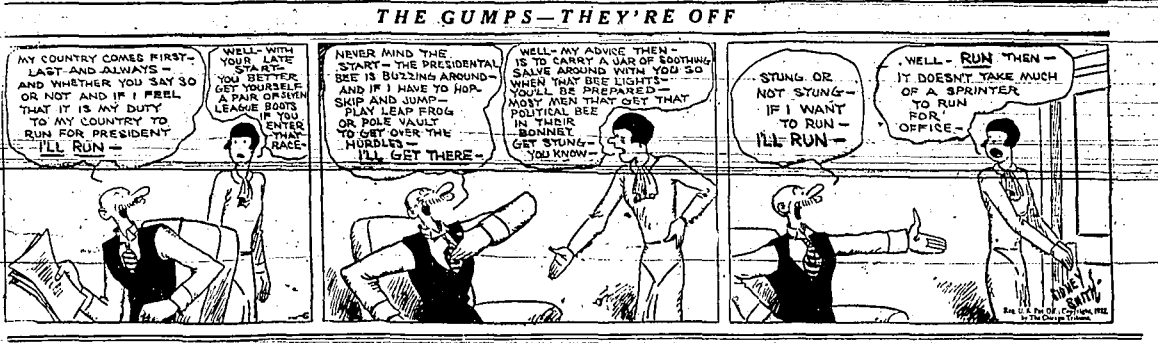

Nan had braced herself against the possibility of the telephone bell so long she had lost account of time. It might have been half an hour, or three hours that she had been pacing unceasingly from end to end of the great hallway. She was so nervous that even persuaded herself that if the telephone did ring, it must be Jervis on the other end.

A prolonged and acute strain such as Nan was undergoing had the effect of exciting her thoughts, fixing them as to root, does a landscape sometimes, with an unnatural rigidity. The thought of Jervis on the other end, and the possibility of his being there, and might be up anywhere.

Nan had walked perhaps fifty times from the table to the window to the table, and from the table back to the window. She became aware of such an impression as if her frozen thoughts were being shaken. She was vaguely and instinctively, but gradually her attention began to focus itself. It was Jervis. Her attention was focused, she felt a slight relief in having something definite to think about.

These tiny tender leaves of "spicy" Turkish tobaccos — and just enough of them! Turkish tobacco sometimes runs hundreds of little leaves to the pound. Chesterfield is used much as seasoning in food for flavor and better taste. You know that seasoning has to be used right — just enough of it, not too much. Chesterfield is just the right amount of Turkish tobacco — the best kinds — Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun. These are not merely blended, but cross-blended with ripe, mellow Domestic tobaccos. Enough Turkish, not too much — that's one reason why Chesterfields taste better — why they have a delicacy of aroma you do not find in other cigarettes.
