University of Idaho Celebrates Fortieth Anniversary

40 Years Of University of Idaho History

INSTITUTION OLDER THAN STATE ITSELF AWAITS CEREMONIES

Surviving Member of First Year's Faculty Plans To Be Present At Rites

STEADY GROWTH MARKS GEM STATE UNIVERSITY

Records Show About 40 Students Began Classwork Exactly Two Score Of Years Ago

(Special to The News) OSWEGO, Oct. 7.—October 12 is a red-letter day in the history of the University of Idaho. It marks the fortieth anniversary of the opening of the institution.

The school, which the founder envisioned as the foundation of a great university, opened in the partially completed wing of the old administration building, without books, desks, or equipment of any kind. About the first of the first year's school standing, appeared for classwork the first day. Registration was an architectural table, the only piece of furniture in the building. Several in this first student body could hardly write their names.

First instructor returned to the school by the return of John E. Ostrander, first faculty member at the university, who held the professorship in civil engineering and mechanic arts. The staff of the university at the opening consisted of President F. B. Gaul, now deceased, and two other professors.

Ostrander now is head of the mathematics department at Massachusetts state college.

The University of Idaho was officially created by act of the Fifteenth First Legislative assembly, approved January 30, 1892, which makes the University of Idaho actually older than the state.

Considerable time was consumed in providing a physical plant and actual instruction did not start until October 3, 1892, with classwork commencing nine days later. The unfinished building, which housed the first University of Idaho stood in the midst of a plowed field.

Branch Addressed "Grads" According to records, Dr. Jesse L. Baines, a member of the class of 1891, was the first to enroll. Dr. Baines now is a practicing physician in Seattle. The first graduating class in 1894 was four in number, exactly 400 in number, the largest in the history of the university. The first States Senator W. E. Borah, then a rising young lawyer, delivered the first commencement address.

Three living members of the first class have been invited to be honorary graduates and to be present at the occasion. Dr. Baines, who died in 1901, was a building contractor; and Mrs. William Johnson, Florence M. Corbett, Portland, Oregon, are the living members of the first class. Mrs. B. Roberts (Ethel M. Allen) is deceased.

Paple and War Hard times accompanied the parents of 1892, adding to Idaho's crop failures, war, despite the difficulties of this first depression in the university history the institution grew.

The outbreak of the Spanish-American war drew 39 volunteers from the first student body, more in proportion to enrollment than any other university in the United States.

An imposing statue near the center of the campus commemorates the memories of two who never returned. Dark days followed the burning of the old administration building, March 30, 1907. Fire broke out at night and only scant, smoldering flames were standing. The following morning the building was a pile of ruins.

Students and faculty were bewildered and somewhat hopeless, but an "open house" was held in the gymnasium where all were invited. Classes were carried on everywhere in town where vacant rooms could be found. Grad was the rallying point. Governor F. R. Gooding wired that the university building would be replaced immediately.

The new administration building, which was completed in 1908 and is known today as one of the most attractive college edifices in the West, Idaho's campus, 100 ft. famous for its beauty.

Growth of the University of Idaho, which has been steady, has reached 100,000 enrollment, had reached 100,000 in 1932. It had reached 100,000 in 1932. It had reached 100,000 in 1932. It had reached 100,000 in 1932.

Eight years ago enrollment exceeded 1000, last year the total enrollment was 1000. This record of growth is astonishing when it is considered that prior to the word war the University of Idaho had an enrollment of only 500. The last student body at the university was four times that of 1917-18. Counting all extension, short course, and summer session students in 1931-32 by 1932-33 the total number had reached 2000, and last year was 2000.

Stimulated by the return of John E. Ostrander, first faculty member at the university, who held the professorship in civil engineering and mechanic arts. The staff of the university at the opening consisted of President F. B. Gaul, now deceased, and two other professors.

Unemployed people will go to work when unemployed money does.
Business can now be depended on to recover slowly and steadily if there are not too many commissions appointed to sit around the sick room studying it.

It is simply the result of an over-charge of that so-called "Twin Falls" spirit.
The government created and for the people. It is not a government of a despotism, controlled, so it seems, by some other than riding some pet hobby, much as to destruction, at the expense of the health of God's goodness to meet with political or financial blunders.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES
The Assistant Secretary of Commerce says that his department cannot reduce its expenditures because it renders essential services. Other department heads feel the same way about their work. That is one reason why it is so difficult to get the national budget balanced—all the expenditures in it appear essential to someone.

MORE DECENTRALIZATION
Decentralization of industry has been proposed as a means to solve transportation problems, to do away with congestion in manufacturing cities, to give employment to more people, to save the farmer, and so on. It has recently been suggested by the advertising director of Procter & Gamble for the sake of the industry itself.

Editor Twin Falls News
Dear Sir:
If a school would come to Twin Falls out of the early minutes from western Nebraska or Kansas and hear us talking of hard times here wouldn't it have the right to be called about. Good crops and hard times would be like Greek to him. We are living in a new era of things have changed. And hard times doesn't appear on the surface anymore until after the fact. It is so late when it comes to us that the percentage of recoveries is small.

OUR SENSE OF HUMOR LOST
Various observers are expressing concern about American humor. A newspaper man reports that he sat through three so-called comedies in a moving picture theatre one evening and heard not a single laugh. One of the plotlines was a cartoon comedy, but no one in that particular audience thought there was a single funny thing in it.

GASOLINE ALLEY—FIRST SKIRMISH

By JOHN L. COOLEY (Associated Press Financial Writer) NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Stocks were downward again today, breaking decisively through the loss of not quite a month back for an average loss of slightly more than 3 points.

Depressed views for what were to be a quiet day for the market heard a couple of weeks ago when it was rumored in brokerage quarters that a panic had broken out in the speculative world in the opposite direction, and stocks found it impossible to buck the current of decline at Chicago.

WOOL MARKET REMAINS DULL WITH QUOTATIONS IN FAVOR OF PURCHASER

BOSTON, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow: The wool market has continued dull and prices are slightly favoring the buyer in some instances. Scoured wools for the woolen mills kept fairly firm, however.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

Although professional "ins and outs" doubtless had their part in the later transactions of the market, it was of a character to discourage weak holders, especially those who had been buying in the latter part of the week.

Prices formed a little in the first hour, but before noon had given up the idea of a rally. The market was heard a couple of weeks ago when it was rumored in brokerage quarters that a panic had broken out in the speculative world in the opposite direction, and stocks found it impossible to buck the current of decline at Chicago.

SMITH URGES CUT IN FREIGHT RATES

Idaho Congressman Calls Attention to Seriousness of Crop-Marketing Situation

Representative Addison T. Smith, in a letter to W. Robinson, Omaha, Union Pacific vice president in charge of freight, yesterday urged a reduction in freight rates on Idaho potatoes, beans and wheat in order to market southern Idaho's crop.

"The railroads must realize the seriousness confronting Idaho growers," Representative Smith said. "A hundred pounds of potatoes will bring $1.05 to $1.10 in Chicago. The present freight rate is 40 cents per hundred, which leaves the grower from 25 to 30 cents for his product. From this sum must pay the cost of packing, carting, marketing, handling, grading, packing, etc."

Twin Falls' Apples Gain Fame In Poverty Stricken in California Town

Twin Falls apples gain fame in strange places as witness the following from a Los Angeles newspaper of recent date. Incidentally the article contains the germ of an idea which might be applied in a practical way in a good many communities here.

Game Exhibition

Those who were able to compare Leonard with the days when he was in his prime credited the former with right king with giving a marvelous game exhibition against one of the finest young pitchers the same has developed in recent years.

Knocked down with a sharp right and taking the benefit of the full count, in the second round, Leonard barely weathered this session as he called on all his old cunning as a blocker of punches. In this, as in subsequent rounds, Leonard was well with both hands from the combined effects of his own experience and Leonard's resourcefulness.

who had for a target was the bald spot on top of Leonard's head. A glancing right opened a thin cut on Leonard's right eye in the fourth. In the fifth Leonard took a bad beating, without offering anything resembling a real counter punch, but then spat blood, stood up coolly and fenced the last few moments with a flash of cleverness.

Leonard tried one of his old-time tricks, talking to Jimmy as he sought to get out of a tight corner early in the sixth. It may have been a humorous remark, but it didn't assist him with Don Rosa and Leonard. Leonard was wobbled and was saved by the ropes from going down. Bracing himself he stepped around, shuffling his head with his arms. Jimmy beat a tattoo on any part of Leonard's anatomy he could find, bent half-over, Leonard was just about out on his feet. He didn't seem to realize what was happening when the referee stepped in. He was awarded forward once more and this time landed squarely in Donovan's arms.

After it was over, Leonard told newspaper men he would not quit his comeback attempt, despite the beating he took and the obvious fact that he was a beaten man. The former champion said he felt he had made a good enough showing, against odds and a great young pugilist, to warrant further activity. Leonard sealed 1500 pounds tonight, three pounds more than McLarrin, having taken off close to 50 pounds by his return to the arena after a seven-year layoff.

"Baby Joe" Gans, California Negro welterweight, scored a quick two-round knockout over Eddie Moore, Pittsburgh, in the first eight-round bout. Gans weighed 145, Moore 140.
