Disarmament Conference to Be Resumed but Many Obstacles Obstruct Plans of Delegations at Geneva

HAMPTON, Va., Oct. 9 (AP) — A message to "Lump," chairman upon whom the German delegation to the Geneva disarmament conference was officially closed to William E. Humphrey today by communists recognition of the executive order.

"Humphrey maintained he still was a member of the commission, asked that the governmental trade officials be allowed to remain to receive President Roosevelt's removal order and laid the foundation upon which he will rule his last claim that the price control act is unconstitutional and for the reasons ascribed. He evidenced no hurry, however, to take the case in court.

Adopt Resolution

The adoption by the commission of its formal resolution holding illegal the executive order, the first of the executive order, was considered by him and his friends as strengthening his legal position for the impending court action.

In a meeting in which the presidential order decided Humphrey could not attend further meetings, to which Humphrey said: "I am not going to attend any more meetings—unless they are requested."

Repudiated leaders in private counseled promptly said Mr. Humphrey has been given a "green deal."

Friends of Humphrey said the most likely legal approach probably would be to attempt to force removal of his salary, they said, and attempt to require the government to show it would not have forced the government to remove him, force the government to prove that he was removed for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office.

The federal trade board, after George C. Matthews, Wisconsin, appointed to Humphrey's place on the commission, was not expected to be in the Twin Falls office for days. Meanwhile, Humphrey retained his office in the federal trade commission building to clear up routine.

Relatives Care For Motherless Children

BUTTE, Mont., Oct. 9 (AP) — Through generous efforts of citizens of Butte and surrounding territory, the motherless children of Anthony Kroc are to be sent to a home of their own in New Mexico.

The mother was injured fatally last week when her family's truck, laden with household goods, ran wild in a snowdrift.

A fund was started which today had amounted to $125, much of the amount having been contributed by relatives of the Kroc children who have been here recently.

Today Kroc's brother, Jerome, and his wife's brother, Tony Wagner, of Chicago, and Mrs. Wagner, and another woman, were sent to the home of the children, and Mrs. Kroc will later with another son, Luke, 8, beday in the crash, and the body of his wife who will be buried in New Mexico.

Indian Legend Of Buried Gold To Be Thoroughly Investigated

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, Oct. 9 (AP) — An Indian legend that a great fortune in gold can be found in a chamber under the earth in Custer Rock bluff is a hunting ground and adventure for William and Homer Swettney of Wyoming.

Many stories regarding the gold have come from old settlers in the country, and the two young men have been through the surface and through solid limestone, hoping of gaining entrance to the chamber through a shaft from the surface.

Old timers say Indians told them that the Indians had a secret room where gold was kept and no one could find the gold.

For years the Swettneys, brothers, have told the story and, pending further search, have not made a scientific search.

A few weeks ago they got an auto motor and a compressor to help them in their search. They have dug a dry well into the ground, about 10 feet deep, and have cleared out the debris.

The dry well has been partially filled with sand and dirt, and the dry well has been brought up the Klastopf and Wisconsin rivers by boat about 1800. While docked here, two Indians came to the boat and told the Swettneys in the cave, and thought they would try to locate a spot to dig for gold.

The Swettneys, however, found it impossible to dig through the sealed passageway with safety.

Then, according to the story, the Indians sealed off a chamber with

Outrageous Fortune

by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: The man picked up his memory gone on the shore after the wreck of the boat he and Carrie had built against each other. After hearing him babble in his scenes of the stolen Yacht, Carrie, Mrs. North had him held as a suspect. Mrs. North had been married to a man she had met at a dance one night. Now he had crept to the man's sleep, having heard that a sleeping person will answer any question after his hand had been placed in a bowl of cold water. Mrs. North's wrists and ankles were broken.

Chapter 18

A CRISIS

Nesta was a brave woman, but she was still a little girl. She hurried to call out to her mother, who checked under his grip. The blood came in great spurts. Then the pain suddenly stopped. She sat back on her heels, gasping for breath. The specter had vanished, but the heart still beat.

"Who's there?"

He repeated the question again at once.

"What's happened? Speak, can't you?"

Nesta stumbled to her feet.

"You've done your best to struggle me."

She heard him say, "I'm drugged," and then, "What are you doing here?" And with that, he was out of bed and stretching for the light.

"I'm going to get out of here," he said, from a sharp cry which took him back to the manacles.

He stood against the door and looked first at her and then at the floor.

"I'm going to get out of here," he said again.

Then he said again that he was drenched. When Nesta threw up her hand to try and push him away he had still held the bowl of water.

"I'm going to get out of here," he said again.

He sent a cold cascade down his back.

The shock of it brought him broad awake. He tried to let go, but she held him fast.

"I'm going to get out of here," he said again.

"What good Lord—where was he?"

What a nightmare! He had been dreaming. But this wasn't a dream; for there was no dreamlike quality about it; and then, tipped up on the bed, was a yellow chin bowl.

The bed itself showed a large wet patch where the clothes were flushed away.

He swung round on Nesta.

"What's the meaning of this?"

She had been frightened and now she thought she could not stand it.

"You're dangerous, brutal. You might have killed me." Her voice broke on a sob of pure rage.

"I'm sorry, I'm sorry. What were you doing in my room?"

"I'm sorry. I'm sorry."

"I don't think you were here as my wife."

She flung up her head.

"What do you mean by that? You had me one minute and insult me the next."

"I don't think it's as bad as all that. You can tell all right." He stopped and ducked sharply. There was a rough lump of pink and grey quivering in his throat.

Doris had seen it off and then sat it back. He tilted it at his door. It missed, crashed against the door, and fell heavily.

Next moment he had her by the wrists.

"Look here, that's enough!"

He stopped.

CITY PROPOSES ANOTHER ROUTE FOR TRUCK LANE

Major Reports Progress In Securing Easements In Five Points Area; Council Sells Right-of-Way

An alternative route for a proposed truck lane entering Twin Falls from the west would not turn at First Street at the end of Main Avenue, but would turn at the intersection of Main and West Main streets, a residence on a long curve to connect with Fourth Avenue West. Mayor Duncan Johnson told city commissioners at a meeting last night that this alternative route had been submitted for the state engineer's approval, although no report was available. Easements for the new truck lane from property owners adjacent to Five Points, and that work he said, is progressing quickly.

Settled Easement

The city has granted a highway easement when council voted last evening to sell Twin Falls highway district #301, 1,000 acres of land at the south end of the city, including the south of town, as a part of the right-of-way for highway route 30 loop through Twin Falls. The highway district will be sold for the city's benefit, which will be paid at the rate of $300 per acre.

The mayor said that he had requested John E. Flynn, director of public works, to submit a detailed report that probably will be available next Monday, dealing on a broad scale with the city's proposed highway project, including the right-of-way for the new truck lane that will be sold at the rate of $300 per acre.

Proposed Roads

Prospects for securing free federal emergency relief funds 30 percent of the estimated $100,000 per year of the state's proposed highway system were dimmed when the highway department director, after consulting with an resident, the engineer's report is expected to cover possibilities for increasing the number of surburban roads, the construction of new roads, the extension of water systems, as well as questions in relation to delivery of irrigation water through ditches that the city plans to have placed that the city plans to have placed that the city plans to have placed

"At present, the attorney said, "an appropriation for this project might be included in next year's street and sidewalk budget, but I am not in favor of it. When I consulted several of the opinion that by next May the government will have eliminated its debt for this sort of work," Mr. McRae said.

Inspector Reports

H. H. Freedman, electrical and plumbing inspector, had been reading copy for the new compilation of rules and regulations, and found, in the plumbing regulations, no provision for appointment of a plumbing inspector. The city attorney found provision made in the compilation for appointment of a plumbing inspector, but in other groups, his offices listed in one group.
