STRIKE DISORDERS ON PACIFIC COAST CLIMAX IN CLASHES

Six Policemen and Eight Striking Longshoremen Hurt at San Francisco, One Killed at Galveston

(By The Associated Press) Strike disorders swept Pacific Coast waterfronts from Seattle to San Diego, Cal., yesterday climaxing in San Francisco in a clash which brought injuries to six policemen and eight striking longshoremen.

Twelve thousand dock workers were ordered back to work in Texas and Louisiana ports, but in outbreak at Galveston, where several lines were unaffected by the strike, one striker was killed and another wounded.

Three guards of the Clyde Mallory line were charged with murder and assault with intent to murder in connection with the Galveston shooting.

The San Francisco injuries were suffered from a mob of several hundred men storming a labor recruiting office on the waterfront.

Governor Julius Meier of Oregon tentatively decided not to order the national guard to Portland, where the United States Marine Corps and board and several others beaten workers in a riotous demonstration.

A group of pickets at Seattle last night, led by a "superintendent" named Elliott, who was not seriously hurt, Major John E. Kelly of Seattle declared that an emergency existed and directed that 100 special policemen be added to the force for the duration of the "public disturbance."

Later he said he would ask Governor Meier to send in the National Guard.

A non-union worker suffered a possible skull fracture when he was beaten by four men at Seattle. A strike of 3000 workers at the New York Shipbuilding company plant at Camden, N. J., was ended Monday at Seattle.

Confederate and Cleveland demonstrators of striking Cleveland gasoline station attendants and of the oil companies conferred for a day at Cleveland, Ohio, Monday, reaching an agreement.

Best-Loved Painting Tribute To Mother

WHISTLER, an American painter, sent his "Mother" portrait from London to the United States in search of a buyer. It was auctioned Monday at the famous painting reproduced above, presents on the first postage stamp issued in commemoration of Mother's day, exactly 100 years after Whistler was born.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE'S MOTHER HONORED

Mrs. James Roosevelt, Guest At Peaceways Dinner; Talks of Destiny

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP)—Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the president and "first mother" of the nation, will observe Mother's day tomorrow at Hyde Park, on the Roosevelt estate where her son was born.

At night she will return to New York to be guest of honor at the country's largest Mother's Day dinner, under the auspices of World Peaceways.

She does not expect a special Mother's Day greeting from her son, she said, because she never made much of the occasion. Her telephone ring often and now and then she spends a week-end at the White House.

"When he was a boy, I had no idea he would be president," she said, "and yet, now that he is, it seems quite natural that he should be."

Her son had courage and strength of character from the time she was a boy, she asserted. His telephone ring often and now and then she spends a week-end at the White House.

Start School Earlier Mrs. Roosevelt hesitated to discuss Mother's day of the present day, saying, "I'm of another generation, and I don't have great-grandchildren."

But she did mention that parents should direct their children off to boarding school earlier than they used to. Her son, she pointed out, had his schooling at home until he was 14.

Whistler's 'Mother' Once Went Begging; Rejected By U. S.

By CHARLES NORMAN NEW YORK (AP)—The reproduction of Whistler's painting of his mother on a postage stamp commemorating Mother's day adds another twist to the struggle and success pattern of James Abbott McNeill Whistler's life.

—although she always—the ever loved for Mother's day, "Mother" has been called "the best loved painting of modern times," the portrait did not achieve popularity at once.

In 1881, 10 years after the American painter completed it in London, the portrait was sent to the United States in quest of a purchaser. The Pennsylvania academy of fine arts hung it "not in the place of honor," writes Joseph Pennell, famous etcher and Whistler's biographer, but in the narrow north corridor beside a staircase.

The painting made an unsuccessful tour of America. Employers of the paper said the box was placed here sometime between 4 o'clock and 4:45 o'clock this afternoon, when it was discovered.

Third Dynamite Plant Officials of the Cowles Publishing company, publishers of the two newspapers, said they had no knowledge of the explosive.

Explosives Found on Loading Dock of Spokane Publications

SPokane, Wash., May 12 (AP)—A clear box containing seven sticks of 40 per cent dynamite was found today in a corner on the loading dock of the Spokane-Manila and the Chronicle.

There was no sign of penetration caps in the box or other indication that the explosive was intended as a bomb, but police said it could have been detonated by a blow of heavy jar. That quantity of dynamite, the detective said, would have wrecked that part of the building had it been properly packed and exploded.

Employees of the paper said the box was placed here sometime between 4 o'clock and 4:45 o'clock this afternoon, when it was discovered.

SENATE APPROVES STOCK EXCHANGE CONTROL MEASURE

Bill, Adopted by 62 to 13 Vote, Goes to House With Committee's Amendments

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 12.—The stock exchange control bill, placing virtually every phase of the securities business in the grip of governmental regulation, was approved 62 to 13 today by the senate.

Attached were amendments adopted in response to the contention of certain stockholders that the securities act of 1933 was straining capacity by preventing a free flow of capital into the lagging heavy industries of the country.

These proposals, offered by Chairman Fletcher of the banking committee with administration approval, would place extensive limitations upon the liabilities which the original act provided for the issuers and underwriters of faulty securities.

The bill now goes to conference for the settlement of several amendments. The bill would place extensive limitations upon the liabilities which the original act provided for the issuers and underwriters of faulty securities.

WAR CLOUDS SPREAD TO TROUBLE EUROPE AND SOUTH AMERICA

Hungarian Protest Against Yugoslavia Comes on Top Of Tense Situation in Paraguay - Bolivia Clash

(By The Associated Press) These hostile clouds no larger than a man's hand which have been lying just below the horizon of the world have expanded suddenly on westward and northerly winds.

A little war in South America—little but killing and maiming—has broken out in the south, particularly in the American republics, to join in refusing to send war materials to the combatants.

The report urged arbitration before the permanent court of international justice at The Hague, and pointed out that this was the way of agreement to this by the two countries involved and asked the League of Nations to bring it about.

Bolivia recently bombarded two Paraguayan cities and the Paraguayan government by sending bombing planes over Bolivian lines. The nation has since been in the League of Nations of violating the practices of civilized warfare.

Little Juan, granddaughter of reputedly wealthy old Bernabe O'Brien, one-time Spanish grant land baron, was being taken to California by airplane according to the convict's story, as forwarded here by Warden Ed Swape of the New Mexico penitentiary.

Acquainted With Plans The convict, whose identity was not divulged here, asserted he was acquainted with the personnel and the plan of the abduction, and it was understood he named two or more of the alleged participants.

Isabella Greenway, the New Mexico girl, was the victim of the "snatch." Then attention was directed to the person named here to be Lewis W. Douglas, Arizona congressman who resigned in 1929 after the conviction of a woman who was succeeded in congress by Mrs. Greenway.

The convict's stolen statement, forwarded by the New Mexico penitentiary, led to believe here the kidnap plot possibly was not hatched on the part of the Greenway-Swape duo but was the outcome of several months of planning by a well-defined gang.

APARTMENT HOUSE Manager Accused Of Ransom Grab

Gettle—Attorney Announces Contact With Abductors

(By The Associated Press) LOS ANGELES, May 12.—Accused of the bold plot of attempting to get the $75,000 ransom demanded for release of William F. Gettle, kidnaped Beverly Hills millionaire, Fred C. Kelley, 32, apartment house manager, was booked tonight on suspicion of extortion.

After lengthy grilling, Kelley was sent in jail by Captain William J. London of the sheriff's homicide pending further investigation of the case.

Information, a squad of sheriff deputies swooped down on Kelley's mysterious suite over the wire and two other men and two women. The other four, however, later were definitely released as they had no connection with the plot.

Not Implicated in Kidnaping Captain Gettle said he was not implicated in the kidnaping plot, when the wealthy oil operator and former mercantile magnate was abducted from his apartment house.

The apartment house manager is accused of telephoning Ed Swape, director of the California State Penitentiary, to get the name of a man who had been named to negotiate with the kidnapers.

On the heels of an official ultimatum that 5000 law enforcement officers would begin taking California's notorious mob over the wire, Gettle, oil millionaire, unless he were returned by midnight tonight, he said, a contact had been established and negotiations would start "next week."

The two sudden developments left the status of the case somewhat obscure in view of a previous promise that the case would be closed.

RELIEF PLANS MADE FOR DROUGHT AREA

Predicted Showers Promise Alleviation to Farmers of Mid-West

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Predicted showers in the Mid-Western drought area promised some alleviation for farm families, as government agencies whipped relief plans into final form with the rainy season in mind.

Even hard general rains over the entire area from the Ohio valley to the Rocky mountains and from the Canadian border to Texas would not be enough to burnish the parched water supplies from the low level they have reached in live storage reservoirs and unassessable heat.

The weather bureau reported light showers in Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri, and predicted showers tonight and Sunday in Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Kansas. The fall was forecast for the North Central states, largest hit of the entire area.

The federal relief administration and the farm administration were working hand in hand on surveys of the extent and severity of damage to determine steps which must be taken to direct relief for farm families and more permanent plans for aiding them through the coming summer and winter.

Largest Crowd in History Attends Blossom Festival

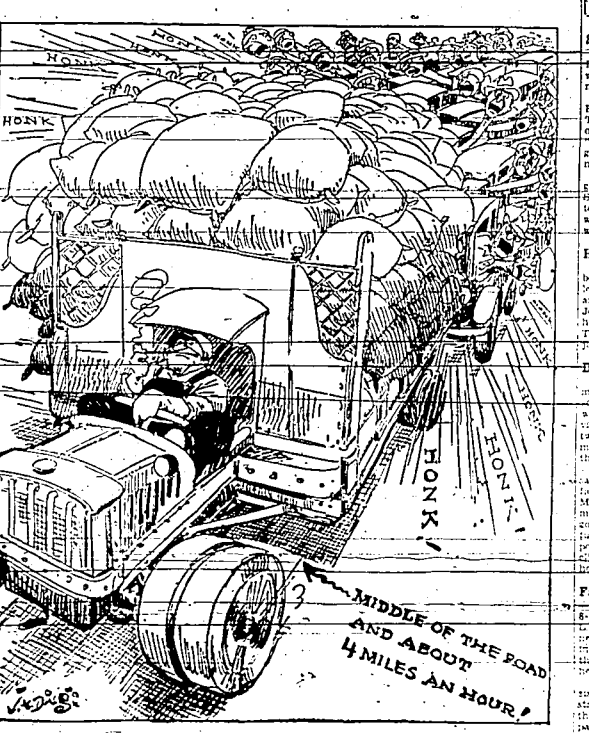

LEWISTON, Idaho, May 12 (AP)—To the jubilation of Lewiston, the mingling with the blaze of jazz bands, Lewiston's cherry blossom festival and Indian fair drew the largest attendance in the history of the event.

A crowd estimated by the police as the largest in the city's history gathered today to witness the crowning blossom parade, which was more than an hour in reviewing stands. Governor C. Bon Ross was a guest of honor, paying tribute to the royal court of Queen Mary and making a brief address.

The grand parade takes place in the parade grounds in Lewiston, a float entered by a local department store, symbolizing a giant rainbow.

GUNMEN—RIDDLE KIDNAP SUSPECT

Negro Indicted in Abduction of Dr. Kalley Shot to Death

ST. LOUIS, May 13 (AP)—John C. Johnson, 47-year-old Negro, indicted with five others as a kidnaper of Dr. Isaac D. Kalley, abducted three years ago, was slain by machine gunners today as he sat on the garage steps at the home of a deputy sheriff.

Three other persons were fired upon by the two machine gunners as they fired at the doctor. Johnson was killed instantly.

The Negro had been staying with the deputy sheriff, Harry D. Reed, of St. Louis county, since his release on bond a month ago. It was understood he had been making his home with the sheriff for safe keeping because of a confession he supposedly made involving others in the kidnapping.

Officers said two machine gunners parked their car about 50 yards from the Newbold home and behind a low fence until they were within close range of the Negro, then stood up and fired 12 shots from a sub machine gun, eight of them striking Johnson. The killers ran across a field to their automobile and fled.

As they passed the Newbold home three shots were fired at Mrs. Newbold and two women companions, but they were unharmed.

Johnson was the owner of the St. Charles county farm where Dr. Kalley was held the first night after his abduction.

WHISTLER'S 'MOTHER' ONCE WENT BEGGING; REJECTED BY U. S.

Painted, the portrait of his mother had been submitted to the British Royal Academy. A committee decided to reject it, but one member threatened to resign if the picture was not shown, starting a scandal, the committee reversed its decision. This was the first time Whistler ever sent a picture to the Academy's annual show.

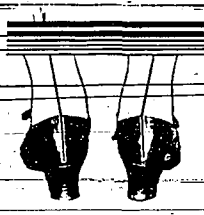

In the Paris salon of 1883 Whistler's "Mother" won third prize, a "high" honor for a foreigner. Quietly he told friends he would like to see the picture purchased for the Luxembourg museum.

In 1884 he said Clements, who even then was a figure of consequence in Paris, induced the Ministry of fine arts to purchase it. Whistler was offered 4,000 francs (about $800) with royalties, and accepted in a letter full of gratitude for the consideration the French had shown him and his work.

Thousands of reproductions were made and sold, and the publishers grew rich on the proceeds. Too late Whistler discovered he no longer had the copyright. The French government still owns the portrait.

Of Whistler's love for his mother there is another bit of evidence besides the famous portrait. He added her maiden name to his own: she was Anna Maria Bennett, a descendant of the McNells of Skye, who emigrated to America after the defeat of the Young Pretender.

"Franked" West Point Whistler was born in 1804 at Lowell, Mass. For a time he studied at West Point, but devoted more attention to drawing than to his lessons. He finally was asked to leave. This period of his life he later jested about.

Martin Insull Visits Brother At Hospital

CHICAGO, May 12 (AP)—His forced attendance in court rooms over for a while, Samuel Insull held a court of his own in his hospital room today for his brother and the three-year-old grandson he had not seen in two years.

It was his first day of freedom from custody since Turkish officers took him off the Greek freighter St. Louis in 1932.

The opportunity to come from Morocco, Indiana, the first visit since their paths of flight separated.

The spare, erect junior partner of the former money wizard met Sam Insull's hospital and told the attendant he wished to see Samuel Insull.

"Very sorry," the clerk said, "but Mr. Insull is absolutely forbidden to see any other relatives."

Even telephone calls to his bedside have been cut off. But Martin Insull identified himself and was admitted to the fourth story bedroom his brother occupies as a hospital guest, a reciprocal gesture in appreciation of past gifts by the charity festival of "A School for Sam" and the $100,000 that was St. Scandal.

Martin chatted with his brother since a decade or so back, when for an hour and 20 minutes he saw Mrs. Insull, the former Claudia, in a taxi without offering Walls, returned to the stage for comment on their reunion.

We Honor Mother

By AGNES JO LYONS

Perhaps today someone's burning the years
Back to the old home—maybe the farm;
Where dad stood the care, and mother's love
Was a haven from all kinds of ill and harm.

Then thoughts wander on to the time you went
Out into the world with firm purpose bent;
And on up the steps ascending to heights
Of success, which came only by your rights.
Your guardian angels you then felt someone
Were her loving prayers—you know it now.

Leave your business cares for awhile and go
To see her while yet she is here—you know
Her habit of looking and waiting for you!
'Twill greatly add to your happiness, too,
To see the joyful surprise on her face
And feel again that familiar embrace.

To rest once more in her pure atmosphere
The sweetest because her God is in her.

Then when you go back to your world again—
Something she did—something she said—
And never like blessings around your heart.

Flowers red and white—one, or the other—today we honor you, dear Mother!

Here's the reason: Chevrolet engineers have tried out all the various makes of cars in today's low-price field. And they have proved to their complete satisfaction, the same things that hundreds of thousands of Chevrolet owners are proving in their daily driving. How much more smoothly a car travels with genuine, fully-enclosed Knee-Action. How much more comfortably it handles, with shock-proof steering. How much more restfully you ride, in a Fisher Body car. How much more safely you drive, with cable-controlled brakes. And how much finer performance and better economy are secured from an overhead-valve Six! In other words, Chevrolet engineers know for sure that the Chevrolet ride simply can't be matched by any other in the low-price field. THE NAZI CLIMAX The best description we have seen of Nazi Germany is this little paragrah in a New York paper: "Germany is said to be rapidly approaching the stage where there will be nobody left to stand on the sidewalk and watch the paraders go by."

The present German enthusiasm for marching will probably last as long as there is a grandstand left, and as long as there is one man in that grandstand. Everyone has a guess as to who that man will be. From present trends, we may expect the day to come when the whole German nation, including invalids and children, will pass in review before the All-Highest Brown Shirt.

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: It seems obvious that the man who ambushed Pierre Dufresne, contractor and political power, is who has been sending Dufresne threatening letters. But Bergan's theory is not so sure, and is puzzled by Dufresne's hint that he was going to him on May 11. Dufresne is about to open his house on the edge of the city as built for the man; "Sheriff" Doyle, reporter, arrives at the 14th Precinct police station just as Officer Hamill fails to pull his box for the first time.

Chapter Seven
ENTER HILLARY
Lewis said he would mention those names, while the others ceased their activities to hear him. Detective Bergan was virtually in command of the plainclothesmen in the Central District, while Bergan, Doyle and Hamill were the particular bright and shining light of the homicide squad. "What would they be doing up here?" Lewis asked. "You're not here to read the papers, Bergan," he teased. "This is front-page stuff and the great lives of your own behalf. I see you've got my paper there. Page one, column three. Another scoop for Howard Doyle. I've got a date here tonight with either Barry or Harper—and what a party it will be. I'll be grinning through a puff of blue smoke."

Lewis spread out the newspaper and turned to the indicated spot. Reading the column was a picture of Dufresne's brown coupe, with heavy circles drawn around the bullet marks. Inset was a photograph of the dapper Pierre Dufresne himself. Lewis followed a double-column account of the anonymous and threatening letters and their dramatic ending, which had to narrowly averted tragedy.

They read through the account, while the wanted man paced and blew smoke rings toward the ceiling. Before they could question Bergan, Hillary stepped in. "This was a blast from an automobile—siren as a car—police—along on abating and halting outside. Voices were heard and the slamming of an auto door."

"Two men came standing in, still and cold from a long drive. They were Officers Smith and Hillary, the crew of Hamilton's No. 10. Now clearing and changing outside. Hillary knew the reporter, and he knew the reporter. He directed for a minute," he explained to Bergant Lewis.

Lewis had begun to worry about the unresponsive Officer 1646. "On such a night it is termed a call to account for No. 1645's detection from duty on any grounds short of accident or willful neglect. On the one hand, Officer Hamill was known as a conscientious man and a stickler for rules and regulations. On the other, where, in that howling wilderness of deserted pavements and cold, inhospitable mansions could he have taken shelter and lost track of the car?"

The sergeant came to a decision. "One of my men failed to report on the last 'pull' Hillary, no explanation. Could you tell me, Hillary, here over the beat and find out what the trouble is? It would take a few minutes in the car, wouldn't it?"

"Sure," the good-natured Hillary answered. "There's only room for two, so it leaves Smith here to get in with me. After a minute's breathing spell, Hillary buttoned up his coat again and drew on the gloves, while Connolly bundled himself up similarly. At 8:45 they set out on their search. The Bandit Chaser had been gone but a few minutes when another car pulled up outside, and as Doyle had predicted, Sergeant Stephen Harper of the Homicide Bureau entered the Station House. Rapidly he turned the policeman's notes as he advanced to the railed-in desk, where Lewis rose.

He was just about to ask the Sergeant some question when the mediator regarding him with the peculiar smile of the cat who has just smothered a canary. Harper checked the question. Standing erect and silent, he pulled off his gloves, while he and the reporter exchanged a long, non-committal stare. Harper unbuttoned his overcoat and tossed the murder, revealing to him the man who had been Doyle's questioner at last.

"How did you get out here, Doyle?" he questioned at last. "You're wearing the last mile or so, why are you hanging around here?"

"I've brought a folded newspaper from my pocket and handed it over," Page one, column three, he advertised, reaching for another. The reporter permitted himself another mocking smile to try again. "You're right, but I've got a date before they became aware of a booming sound. Pardon, they were hanging out the window, when they recognized the sound as that of a car. I saw the car near the far end of the block—was unbuttoned and the wind was banging it to and fro with tremendous force."

Some prompting of instinct induced Connolly to break into a run. He called up, pointing at the entrance to the front lawn, a faint, desolate level of virgin snow, flanked by bare bushes and shrubs. The flashlight showed that the footprints had turned in there. He also picked out the bronze terminals, "34," on one of the stone pillars at the gate. "The massive front door after the rain, the door stood open invitingly, due to a full in the wind."

"You light the candles again, Hillary," he said. "The door is open, but the light is not on the inside, but he found that the lock had been open, and that, consequently, the door could not be closed until that was set back. He placed the key and locked the door. He also noticed an old-fashioned key hanging beside the door jamb, and an trying to find that it was for the ordinary lock below the knob. In his hand, they lifted the candle and looked in all the rooms opening from the central hall. The door was unlocked, but they found nothing in the way of interest. There were two doors in the rear of the house. Each was not only locked, but bolted on the inside. Connolly found a key that fitted both doors and put it in his pocket. There were no other keys. Connolly stepped quickly across the threshold—across the inner vestibule doors were closed. He turned the knob and peered into a dark, well-lit hallway. "Hello!" he shouted, and pointed toward the rear of the inner door. One of the cold glass panels hanging under the vibration and came limping down over the floor. "But there was no answer. A dead silence reigned within. The flashlight, sweeping from side to side, saw pairs of slippers and a skeleton deep hall with paneled woodwork and richly furnished—but there was something queer about this strange place with its screeching door and the snow keeping over the all. Then, as if by magic, the door opened and Hillary stepped into the hall. He had a long look at the floor or light under the door, farther down the hall. He tried the knob cautiously, then flung the door back with a quick motion. Hillary had found the electric light switch near the front door, but it could get no response from any of them. Armed and alert, Connolly peered into the room—and only a door rose to the threshold. Over his shoulder came the sharp hiss of his own coat. Connolly's brain was split in reaction. A moment's examination of the room confirmed his worst fears. "Don't touch anything here," he warned. "I've got a telephone out in the hall. If it's disconnected you'll have to wait for the telephone company's satisfaction, when he lifted the telephone receiver he heard the familiar ring of the bell. His call was through to the Fourteenth Precinct."

Connolly had no sooner replaced the telephone receiver than the clammy glance of this tragic figure beamed down upon them again. "I've got a folded newspaper from my pocket and handed it over," Page one, column three, he advertised, reaching for another. The reporter permitted himself another mocking smile to try again. "You're right, but I've got a date before they became aware of a booming sound. Pardon, they were hanging out the window, when they recognized the sound as that of a car. I saw the car near the far end of the block—was unbuttoned and the wind was banging it to and fro with tremendous force."

manman turned on the beam and flashed it in a circle. Here and there were unmistakable signs—and the height of the ceiling was outlined, the imprints a hole had left in the air. He was going a little farther after he could distinguish the tracks of the old tracks, presumably made by Hamill's coming to the pillar for his gun and his subsequent departure.

There were a few three-markings in the street, but no other tracks along the sidewalk, and, having struck the scent, Connolly automatically started across the street. He found the car at an angle on a parallel line. For two blocks they continued their search, but no intervening signs. Connolly found that he had lost the trail. Retracing his steps, he found that a radical alteration had taken place in Hamill's course. The old tracks showed that Hamill had crossed about thirty or fifty yards from the street, when something had induced him to make a sharp angle. The lines of the footprints led along the intersecting street.

The trailers followed this tangent, but only after they had been very far before they became aware of a booming sound. Pardon, they were hanging out the window, when they recognized the sound as that of a car. I saw the car near the far end of the block—was unbuttoned and the wind was banging it to and fro with tremendous force."

Screen Life IN HOLLYWOOD

By HUBBARD KEAVY

By HUBBARD KEAVY
HOLLYWOOD—King Vidor tried to interest one movie maker after another in producing his story about a cooperative farm venture. "Farm stories are out," they said. And one or two suggested that if he had something like "State Fair," they might be interested.

So Vidor decided to film the story himself, which isn't quite so simple as it sounds. Movies are a cash-on-line business. Film must be paid for the day you get it. Laborers and technicians and actors must be paid every Saturday. Extras must be paid every night—second and third night is $1.50 a day, cash.

Vidor says he has a lot of faith in his story, but that he raised the necessary cash by converting nearly everything he owns. He didn't borrow a cent, but "hocked" nearly everything in his possession. He had to have about $200,000. "Yes, he doesn't call it gambling," Hank says. "He believes the story will sell 'em. He believes the government likes 'em. He believes that anyone who can act, 'natural'—No what difference does it make how you get rid of your money?"

"There is a difference, though. The having fun getting rid of it this way. If the picture is a flop, I will at least have had the satisfaction of getting ideas that are strictly my own ones pellucid. If I lose money on this venture, I know I can get a job of some kind and start all over again."

Many of Vidor's pictures have been important, artistically, as well as successful. "The Big Parade" and "The Crowd" still are remembered as among the best silent films. "Reddish," "Street Scene" and "The Champ" are talked he directed.

Back to the Land? The picture he now is putting his fortune into is based on the back-to-the-land movement, a story of a peace-time army fighting an economic instead of a bloody battle. "Our Day in the Country" is the significant title.

Vidor says the headlines gave him his material, but the first suggestion came from a magazine article two years ago in which a professor suggested the government use some of its land to take care of the unemployed. "The farmers' strike in the Midwest and the mortgage reforestation are among national affairs Vidor has 'copped.'"

Vidor's cast is not one of names. "Hank says, 'He believes the story will sell 'em. He believes the government likes 'em. He believes that anyone who can act, 'natural'—No what difference does it make how you get rid of your money?"

Mutual Benefit Sues For Interpretation

BOISE, May 12 (AP)—The Idaho Mutual Benefit association yesterday filed suit in Ada county district court for a declaratory judgment interpreting the section of the 1923 law bearing on such organizations, particularly as affecting proposals to write accident and health benefit policies.

W. H. Baker, state director of insurance, was made defendant, and the suit was filed by the benefit association may not use the term "insurance" in connection with their policies.

In the suit, the benefit association requested a ruling of Baker that the organization must not be less than $5 nor more than $10 a member in fees. The association said in the suit that 500 of its 6,100 members had applied for health and benefit policies, paying $1 each in fees.

It Takes Seven Cars to Make a Ford V-8

The New Ford V-8

Is Not Merely a Low Priced Car

It Is a High Quality Car at a Low Price

THE ONLY CAR IN WHICH YOU FIND ALL THESE ADVANCED IMPROVEMENTS IS THE NEW 1934 FORD V-8

V-TYPE 8-CYLINDER ENGINE:
The ordinary 8 cylinder engine is found on a dozen makes of cars. The V-type engine of eight cylinders or more is found only on the New 1934 Ford and on few makes of cars that range in price $2,395 to $5,000.

EXTRA STRONG X-TYPE FRAME: is used in some other more expensive makes of cars as well as the Ford, but we do not know of any car except the Ford in which the X members extend the full length of the frame making four full length members instead of two.

THREE-QUARTER FULL FLOATING REAR AXLE:
Several cars ranging in price from $1,310 to $6,250 use this type of axle also. One maker puts it in his high priced cars, and not in his low priced ones. IT IS STANDARD ON THE FORD.

TORQUE TUBE DRIVE:
Six other makes of cars, only one costing less than $1,000 use the torque tube drive. It has always been on the Ford.

HORSE POWER PER POUND OF CAR WEIGHT:
According to S.A.E. rating there is only one other car having more horsepower per pound of weight than the Ford V-8, and that is a car selling $4,925.

YOU CAN BUY THIS IMPROVED FORD and not only save at least $500.00 but you can feel certain that no car in America offers more value, in any essential transportation factor, than this 1934 Ford V-8, no matter what price is asked for the competing car. So many Ford V-8 owners have made this statement that it has become recognized as a proof of satisfaction.

Surely no other car can make you more proud of ownership, nor more certain that you have selected the utmost in automobile value for your dollars, than this improved 1934 Ford V-8. The best and most economical car we have ever offered to the public.

'Ten Commandments' For Smart Attire

LUCIEN LELONG TELLS WOMEN TO ADAPT FASHIONS TO THEMSELVES

By BARBARA BEAUFORT PARIS, (AP)—The "Ten Commandments of Chic" have been compiled by a designer who counts queens among his fashionable clientele.

Lucien Lelong set forth the commandments on the eve of midseason fashion showings, calling attention to the advisability of ignoring definite fashion points if they are unbecoming to the individual. He points out the importance of using accessories and cosmetics properly. His admonitions are stated and pictured below:

- 1. Study the silhouette in regard and adapt it to yourself. If it calls for accentuated busts or hips which you over-emphasize your figure, eliminate them altogether or accept them in modified form.
2. Avoid clinging to a certain "type" lest you limit the range of your personality and charm. What you think are your defects may be made your virtues.
3. Do not exploit quantity at the expense of quality. One costume of excellent material and workmanship "in the hand" is worth a dozen inferior ones hanging in the clothes closet.
4. Do not choose the fashionable colors of the season unless they are suitable to you. Far better, select a shade appropriate to yourself.
5. Choose your fabrics carefully to harmonize with your personality and coloring.

Scenery at the Seashore

ANYONE with imagination can tell what the wild waves are saying about these smart, new ocean-going insubmersions for summer. It's one you'd like to wear a high neck, finely knit suit with tiny nautical knots providing a bright pattern. The rope-like shoulder straps are small, with a bow on the left shoulder. The suit buttons down the right side and is gathered in at the bottom. The new romper bathing suit is worn by Frances Drake (center) with white stripes on a blue background. It buttons down the front with a belt of the same material and trunks loose at the bottom. "Sun-yellow" is the color of the ribbed suit worn by Elizabeth Young (right). Its trunks have a novel lacing arrangement approved for 1934 beachwear. The suit is backless, with a halter necktie tied in a bow.

TO BID ON BEANS

Relief Buyers' Call for Pinto Variety Only Brings Protest

Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce wants bean buyers for the federal surplus corporation to take the surplus of Great Northern bean crop into consideration when calling for bids. Protesting against apparent discrimination in the corporation's call for bids to be opened May 22, the chamber yesterday addressed a letter to all members of Idaho's congressional delegation. Pointing to the corporation's call for bids on 675,000 pounds of Pinto beans, the chamber said in this letter: "The calling of bids for beans of this specific 'Pinto' variety which is grown in only a few limited communities results in the paying by the government of a higher price than is necessary, precludes this bean from being sold in quantity and constitutes a serious discrimination that is not necessary since the Great Northern variety is equal or better in every respect as to quality, and is used for every purpose that the Pinto bean may be used."

Mrs. Sloane's Entries Run Thrilling Race at Pimlico With King of Kentucky Derby Just Behind at End

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Staff Writer
BALTIMORE, Md., May 12—In a thrilling nose finish, two great three-year-old thoroughbreds from Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable today settled a personal dispute as they soundly whipped five other fleet colts in the $25,000 High Quest, making his first start since winning the Wood Memorial, won the race but only a nose back was Charles Woodrow, the Kentucky Derby, seeking the elusive turf double.

Outcomes Meet Expectations
Leaving their ways speedily colts as Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery and Mrs. Frank J. Heller's Theodoratus, who were held the confidence of the majority of 80,000 fans, who packed the big track to witness the event. The sportsman declared to win with Cavalcade but little Bobby Jones had no such intention in mind as the High Quest is the first of the rise of the barrier and kept him there through a great stretch drive as has ever been seen in the 45 years of the famous stake.

A length back at the end of one and three eighths miles was Discovery, bound to Cavalcade in the Derby and fighting toward off the stablemate.

ON THE SIDELINES

This isn't exactly the season for it, meaning football, but there's more than passing interest in the action of the "Federation of State Intercollegiate Football Associations" in the matter of the rule allowing forward passes from a point back of the scrimmage.

College football could see no need for such a change when the intercollegiate rules committee deliberated during the season. The high school and prep school authorities could see no need for such a change. Possibly because high school and prep school coaches are in charge of changes that might bring forward things they can't catch on at the next level, the summer coaches welcome the contest for the upper hand.

St. Andrews Tilt

Visitors Capture Six Out of Eight Singles in Two Day Play Against Great Aggregation of Britons

By FRANK TALBOT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 12—Tearing into their opponents with a sudden succession of subpar scores at the outset of the afternoon round of singles competition, the crack brigade of American amateur golfers today completed the crushing defeat of Great Britain, for their eighth successive Walker Cup triumph, before the homebreds had a chance to rally or put up any sort of defense.

Captain Francis Quimet's light cavalry, changing ruthlessly about 65 St. Andrews, captured six out of eight singles matches over the 30-hole route as they overwhelmed what was supposed to be the strongest British and yet put together for the international competition. The Americans had a 6-2 lead and halved the remaining match.

Westland Fallers
The Americans had taken three of the four singles matches in the day's play, and the final score, 6-2, was in favor of the United States, exactly the same margin by which the British were routed two years ago at Brookline, Massachusetts. The only reason it wasn't 10 to 2 was because Jack Westland of the United States, who had won the 30th green of the day's concluding match and they had to be satisfied with a 1-1 tie in the 31st hole.

Country Club May Remove One Team From League Race

Board Petitioned for Permission to Enter But One Outfit in South Idaho Golf Scramble

Decision to withdraw one team from the Southern Idaho Golf League was reached late in the week by members of the Twin Falls Country Club. Ernie Schreiner, club professional, announced last night.

Country Club May Remove One Team From League Race

Decision to abandon one team was reached after the Twin Falls Country Club Red and Blue aggregations went down to defeat in a tournament play last Sunday.

Country Club May Remove One Team From League Race

In the meantime, Schreiner said, a journey will be undertaken to determine the low-estate qualifiers who will enter the race for the traditional "President's Cup" award.

PROVING themselves perfectly at home on the famous St. Andrews course the American Walker Cup links team scored an overwhelming triumph over the British contingent. It was the Yankees' eighth consecutive win in the international contest. In the center is a view of the eighteenth green at St. Andrews where the match was held. Captain Francis Quimet of invading group downed Leonard Crawley 5 and 4 in decisive struggle.—(AP) Photos.

SCOUTING SPORTS

By RUSS NEWLAND

San Francisco, May 12 (AP)—The Scouts of the Pacific Coast have announced that the season opened but credit for the fine showing of the purple cow does not belong to the pitchers.

Did You Ever See A PURPLE COW?

They are just about as plentiful as mechanics who can accurately set the Steering Mechanism and front wheels of the modern car (be it conventional front axle or the new individual front wheel suspension) unless they have special precision tools such as we have (and they cost plenty of money).

Absolutely Without Cost To You for one week beginning Monday, May 14th, we will give your car a free inspection, and even though your car shows need of correction you will be under no obligation to have it done in our shop.
