SIX ROBBERS FACE DEADLY GUNFIRE IN SMALL TOWN IN BANK

Guard Shoots Bandits After Waiting Four Months to Avenge Son's Death at Hands of Same Outlaws

(By The Associated Press) CHICAGO, May 25 (AP)—Six robbers who shot their way out of a suburban town of South Holland today found themselves facing a bank guard who had waited four months to avenge his son's death.

They took a bloody retreat. Before they could fire a shot, one of the robbers was mortally wounded—and a third was hit and staggering. The three others dragged the lesser wounded man from the bank, and fled in flight.

Armed with all the paraphernalia of a bank robbery, the robbers found themselves trapped. They were at the mercy of a bank guard eager to avenge the murder of his son who was killed in the same bank four months ago, the police said, by the same holdup gang.

South Holland was prepared for the robbers. Shortly before opening time on Friday, June 1, 1933, a speeding car slowed before the Jefferson bank owned by the Jefferson family. The car was a 1933 Buick, and the driver was a man named Iadore Pincus, one of the South Holland gang. Hospital attaches said he was near death from loss of blood.

THE NEW NRA POLICY

The unexpected storm of protest which followed the announcement that NRA would stop trying to control small business led Administrator Johnson to promise that protection would still be afforded such industries and trades where it was needed.

As the lesson sought in the NRA experiment has been really learned, most of the small groups should be able to do their own regulating from now on. The basic idea of this institution, anyway, has been supposed to be self-regulation for industry and trade.

The more democratic the codes can be made, in letter and enforcement, the more typically American the control will be. It is preferable, if possible, to have either federal or state government merely arbitrate between conflicting groups under a code, or protect one code group against another, or protect the public from any of them.

Yet in any such system, final authority must rest with the government, as representative for the whole nation, lest these modern "guilds" grow so powerful as to dominate everything, flouting the government and gouging consumers as medieval guilds sometimes did.

NATURE WILL TEACH NUDISTS

As the weather gets balmy, people get balmy, too. So nudism seems to be breaking out again all over in nudist societies, colonies and camps.

People, it seems, have a right to doff clothing if they don't offend neighbors. Kentucky lawmakers undertook to defend public decency by a law prohibiting nudist colonies unless they were surrounded by 20-foot walls; but the clerk accidentally left out the "un" off the "unlawful," and the governor never noticed the omission, so that effort failed.

Apparently the only way to get along in a world with so many balmy people is to pay no attention to them, and go on about one's own business.

It is probably an ephemeral fad, anyhow. There are plenty of good reasons for clothing, even in the summer time, quite aside from modesty. Most converts to the new cult will soon get enough of ants, bugs, flies, bees, thorns, poison ivy, sunburn, chilly weather, stumped toes, skinned shins and stone-bruises. Nature is probably competent to handle this problem.

THREE-CENT PIECES

Another cycle is completed. The almost forgotten three-cent piece appears again. In prospect Senator Vandenberg of Michigan has introduced a bill to have the government mint a new three-cent coin.

Many of us, with an effort of memory, can visualize the old three-cent piece, discontinued early in the present century. It was a useful coin, as a convenient step between the cent and nickel, but had the handicap of being so nearly the size of a silver dime that it was often mistaken for one—or the dime was often mistaken for three cents. So it disappeared along with the two-dollar bill, which went for much the same reason.

The present idea is to use the same alloy, mainly nickel, that is used for the five-cent piece, and make the coin about half the size of the "nickel," different enough from the dime to be easily distinguishable. It should be useful in making change and therefore should facilitate business in stores.

TAKE ARMS OUT OF MARS' HANDS

Embargo on export of arms in which President Roosevelt proposed that the United States interdict other nations would be an effective way to stop suppression of war. It should end the Chaco war, for Bolivia and Paraguay are landlocked countries, therefore can import arms only through the ports of surrounding seaboard nations—Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Chile and Peru.

General embargo on arms exports would have wider effect than suppression of the Chaco war. It would break down the political influence of the arms manufacturers on the military nations. It would prevent the great munition-making nations from buying alliances with smaller nations with loans to be expended on arms to be bought from the greater nations. In that way it might prevent neutral nations from carrying on trade in arms with belligerents—a traffic which directly caused the United States to intervene in the World war.

The long, drawn-out disarmament conference and negotiations have brought to light the manifold difficulties of bringing all nations into agreement. The problem is to make a beginning in however limited a degree. Argentina is the only nation in the world, especially to prevent sale to nations at war, may be the most practical beginning.

THE PRICE-VALUE OF UNPAID WAR DEBTS

As payday again approaches for European nations indebted to the United States, American eyes will naturally look upon the installments due us and unpaid, and upon the tremendous amounts those nations are spending on arming themselves for the next Armageddon.

For instance, Great Britain will draw one up in unpaid installments, 183 millions; last year she spent 368 millions preparing for war, France will be behind 76 millions; last year she spent 700 millions on her "autumn offensive" as she describes it. Italy is behind only 15 millions, but last year she spent 393 millions for clothes and "guns and powder" and bullets with which to arm tramping hosts. Poland is behind but seven millions; she spent over twenty times that amount in developing her army.

Those who wish to wipe out this debt tell us that it is just about established that inter-governmental loans in time of war are seldom possible for payment. No debtor ever finds it possible if he wants to use the money for something else. It would be a pity to pay this money; it would be a tragedy to forgive the debt. Those billions owing to us constitute today the world's greatest defense against war.

No nation dares to contemplate a war which might figure in the countries' attempt upon bringing a number of other nations in.

From whence will come the money to fight such a war? Who will extend the credit? Who feed the troops at the front?

So long as the international state is loaded with figures there may be no war—because the soldiers would starve upon the field of battle. Perhaps it would be best to keep the debts alive.

HAS THE NEW DEAL FAILED?

Clarence Darrow is an old man—cynical, tired and disillusioned. He has been a fighter for the underdog all his life, and his conviction there is something incurably rotten in Denmark has been firmly crystallized, these many years, to be readjusted now. He has a great mind, but it has never been a judge on one's life is now, and always been a violent and uncompromising partisan, convinced of the stigma of original and incurable sin, as far as Big Business is concerned.

His underlying social and economic philosophy is well expressed in the following excerpt from his report: "Fair competition is merely a rewording and illusory phrase. All competition is savage; within and without and can be nothing else. One may as well dream of making war idyllic, as of making competition fair."

This paper doesn't believe that. And of course we know the Roosevelt administration doesn't believe it. For if that is true, then nothing can save this country but the destruction of competition, which would mean eventually complete ownership and control of all industry—i. e. socialism, communism, or whatever one wishes to term the overthrow of the capitalist system.

This paper believes there is another and a better way out. We believe the competitive capitalist system can be retained, and so controlled and regulated, that its abuses will be eliminated; and its various advantages preserved.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS) (Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

WASHINGTON By George Durpe

FOURTH: Political Washington goes with complex uncertainty in the action of the LaFollette brothers in setting up a Progressive Party in Wisconsin to contest directly with the Republicans and Democrats.

Three Senators leaders— one a Democrat and the third a Progressive from another State—summed up the situation by expressing an identical view: "First, that the movement is purely local and has no national significance; second, that the LaFollette were forced into hosting a third-party label because they had no place else to go."

Senator Bob LaFollette is in a peculiar position. Virtually every member of the upper house, whether Democrat or Republican, personally would like to see him come through this fall. Privately the so-called Progressive Democrats would prefer him to a Democrat, such as they fear might be elected.

Having actively supported President Roosevelt last election the Republican banner is no longer available to him. National Democratic leaders would like to give support but Wisconsin Democrats are being driven to a point at the table, are demanding their share of the pie in too loud a voice to be disregarded.

POLITICS: All three of the Senate leaders interviewed agreed that Senator Bob has a tough fight on his hands. The Progressive foresaw the possibility of a "standstill" Republican being elected.

What intrigues the observers here is the picture of the two most famous political families in the country— the Roosevelt's and the LaFollette's— falling to get together 100 per cent. As has been their custom in the past, the Roosevelt's and the LaFollette's support he got in Wisconsin in 1923, referred to young Bob's father as one of his political heroes. Back in 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt led

Guiding Your Child

ALICE GUARISEA RICHMOND

Practical Economics Many, if not most, of the modern schools teach social sciences instead of geography, and some form of civics to supplement the history course. Groups of children, guided by teachers, may be seen going through factories and plants learning the mechanics of the world in which they live.

But with all the care and attention given to machinery and politics, somehow, as in all educational systems, the children have no personal application, and the children emerge from the mill unaware that they— they— and— should take part in the growth-up world.

Every street and public square or amusement park is a proof of the irresponsibility of youth and unfortunately the attitude, bred in youth, hangs over into middle age, for there is no exact dividing line between the stages of life.

It is excusable for little children to pick flowers, trample grass and dig up worms, but when they begin to do those things that they must have their first lessons in practical civics— they— they— are— doing— them that it is against the law, or that the policeman is looking, immediately they must be told that they are doing wrong and that they are doing wrong.

Parents should be taught that parks and playgrounds and streets are their own property; that their parents are taxed to keep them in order and well-policed; that indirectly those taxes affect their own pocket-money, clothes and even food; and that they by their own untidiness and deprecations are not only injuring their own belongings but increasing the cost of upkeep. Trust some of the joy would be taken out of the sport of lawbreaking.

STERLING: Britain has privately agreed not to interfere with our silver program (as indicated recently in this column) but she's pushing hard in other directions to reestablish sterling supremacy.

New Yorkers with connections abroad and evidence of this in Central Europe. The British have actually presented themselves as financial middlemen for the trade relations of the United States and Europe, where the latter quote nearly all their foreign business in terms of dollars.

LaFollette is 39 years old. Cutting in 45, Johnson is 48 and Norris is 71. Washington politicians call attention to this because normally a man in the President's position, trying to rebuild his own party, particularly would embrace the younger men in the same breath they remind one that long-hungry local Democrats cannot be denied a shot at glory, and add— Politics is like that.

EXEMPT: Aides to George Peck, special foreign trade adviser to the President, are indignantly over what they term a widely spread misapprehension, namely that the Johnson act hamstringing the Russian Export-Import Bank.

Although the Johnson Act prohibits financial assistance to a defaulting nation they point out that a final clause specifically exempts governments exporting to the United States. The Export-Import Bank may do business with Russia if it sees fit. (It hasn't seen fit because the Bank's own directors adopted a resolution against dealing with the Soviet while it remained in the defaulters' class.)

ESTIMATE: Public Works, as previously reported here, has been slow to show concrete evidence of widespread unemployment although the men returning it had so anticipated from the start.

In recent days some of Administrator Peck's assistants have been chafing under the slow process of visible expansion. For some months they have been complaining that the program is employed indirectly for each night who gets a job on a PWA project. These aides decided to call on the government statisticians for a detailed breakdown of this indirect employment.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, reported that the ratio was 2.1 to 1 on road-building work. This increased the ratio to 2.5 to 1. The latter figure might run twice that high for building such things as bathhouses and subways.

With the general problem was put to such figure-jugglers as Senator LaFollette, Commissioner of Labor Statistics and William W. Fisher, chairman of the Central Statistical Board, they ran into a stone wall.

It developed that the Federal government has a long-standing statistical estimate that would require terrific research to prove on any appreciable scale.

GALLANT: Senator Carter Glass took a beating from his own staff on his nurse during a recent illness on Senator William E. Borah's age.

The nurse asked for the information. Glass said "it is worthless" and when the nurse questioned the answer, offered to bet. The young lady said "I'll bet you'll be in the hospital by the time you're 70 until June 29, 1935."

Notes: The demand for a Congressional investigation of NRA is likely to raise more smoke on the Hill than in the White House. The Wall Street Journal says that Wallace probably will win out eventually on his plan to place all farm products under a tariff bill.

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

CHAPTER 19

"The answer might be found in a certain room upstairs," you remember what Doyle told you—

"Yes, I'll grant all that, but we'd still be sitting in the box. We do not know whether the marks on the other side of the wall were left by man or woman. They've been covered up too well by the later work. On the other hand their condition proves that they were made about the time of the murder, and that for their condition is approximately the same. It may even be that the 'X' marked off this wretched hole—

WORLD WAR DEAD WILL BE HONORED

Popples, Made by Idaho Veterans, Offered Today by Legion Auxiliary

Today America will pay honor to its World War dead. Millions of Americans every part of the country will be brought red popples to show that they still remember and are grateful for the fact that those men gave their lives in defense of the country 15 years ago. Here in Twin Falls this custom of the Twin Falls unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will distribute memorial popples in all parts of the city throughout the day.

The popples which the Auxiliary will distribute have been made by disabled World War veterans working under Auxiliary supervision at the United States Veterans' hospital at Boise.

NEW TERRAPLANE SIX ARRIVES IN TWIN FALLS

Jack Blade's Motor Sales of Twin Falls announces the new model Terraplane Challenger six which is now on exhibition in the company showroom. The new Terraplane is heralded as a "full-size, full-powered car in the extreme low price field."

Announcement was received here recently from Roy D. Chapin, president of the Hudson-Motor-Lorain company, that the new Terraplane sales for May are showing an increase over April. He maintains that the "Challenger will account for a heavy volume of business this summer, and that the delivered price of this car is actually lower than that of all other makes of similar size and power."
