SENATE DEFEATS EFFORT TO BOOST FUND FOR RELIEF

Administration Forces Beat Back All Expansion Efforts, Except Increase For Drought Operations

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, June 15.—Two and a quarter billion dollars were voted by the senate tonight for the administration's public works and relief programs, but attempts to double and quadruple that sum were beaten back.

The funds were carried in the deficiency appropriation bill which the senate passed without record vote and sent back to the house.

Approval of the big supply measure left two major bills, the federal housing bill and the temporary labor disputes proposal introduced today by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader.

Drought Relief Increased

Administration forces overruled every effort of a group of independent Republicans and Democrats to expand the funds available for the recovery and relief program.

The measure, which would increase the drought relief fund from $250,000,000 to $500,000,000, was recommended by President Roosevelt.

Despite efforts of the same group, the senate placed a rigid limitation on the wide-open power granted the president by the house to divert unexpended assets of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to public works and relief.

The chief executive was given permission to use only $500,000,000 of the RFC's resources in this way, but this was an increase of $250,000,000 over the amount authorized by the appropriations committee in reporting the bill.

Warms Of New Stamp

Senator La Follette (D-Wis.) led the move to increase drought relief funds, but his amendment was defeated. He said that the measure would be a "new stamp" on the relief program.

Senator Byrnes (D-Okla.) estimated the bill would make $1,222,000,000 available for public works and relief, $1,064,075,000 for relief and $157,925,000 for public works. He said that the bill would provide for the reconstruction of the drought-stricken areas.

One of the main purposes of the day came over a proposal to appropriate $500,000,000 for cooperating with Latin American countries in building the Inter-American highway. The fund was cut to $100,000,000 on motion of Senator Borah (R-Iowa) and the amendment was defeated.

Problems of Recovery Come In for Attention at Convention

BOISE, June 15 (AP)—Address by Frank H. Brown, president of the American Bankers' association executive council for Idaho, and T. B. Kerr, professor of political science and business law at the University of Idaho, were the highlights of today's program of the Idaho Bankers' association thirteenth annual state convention.

Bankers from most of the cities of Idaho were here for the meeting which, opened this morning, and which will continue until tomorrow night.

Bergesch, head of the investment and analysis department of the United States National bank at Portland, gave a talk of technical matters pertaining to investments and told of purchasing profitable investments.

High bond prices as they appear to bankers who invest large institutions funds.

State-Run Laid on Forest "No one attempts now to look more than 60 days ahead; and any opinion as to future trends would be purely conjecture," he stated.

Walker discussed relations of agriculture with the state and noted certain domestic politicians had caused a rift between the two industries of Idaho.

"When a farmer borrows $300 from a banker," he stated, "he gets $300. But when he buys $300 worth of goods from a merchant, he gets a note for $300, and actually gets about $100 worth of goods, in terms of his present necessities."

"The afternoon session was partly devoted to appointment of committee on legislation and the Idaho Bankers' association executive council, which was held at the University of Idaho, where they spent the day visiting relatives and friends."

Blast Kills Worker At Idaho Road Camp

IDAHO CITY, June 15 (AP)—Tom Adams, 40, a powder-man at the Adams road camp, 25 miles east of here on the middle fork of the Boise river, was killed this evening in an accidental explosion of dynamite, according to word received through the fire-dispatcher here tonight.

The explosion occurred about 9 p. m. when Adams was making a primer with which to set off a blast by electricity. Three companions were near at hand and were said to have reported the explosion occurred as Adams was handling a cap and a stick of dynamite.

IDAHO CELEBRATES FIRST SETTLEMENT

Franklin Turns Back Pages
Of 75 Years of Hardship, Progress

FRANKLIN, Idaho, June 15 (AP)—Dramatic eyes brightened today and pioneer memories were quickened as Franklin, Idaho's oldest settlement, turned back the pages of three quarters of a century of hardship and progress.

With Governor C. Ben Ross among them as the principal speaker, residents from miles around assembled to pay homage to the band of 50 sturdy pioneer families who blazed a trail into this then verdant but desolate wilderness.

The visitors came to Franklin to rejoice with residents over the progress that the community that once knew all the perils of a western outpost of the states.

Idaho's "Oldest City"

Franklin is described in "The History of Idaho—The Gem of the Mountains," published in 1899, as "the oldest city" in the state. It is located in Franklin county, the smallest in the state, and a subdivision of old Owyhee county which was re-apportioned by the 1913 legislature. The village is located one mile north of the state line and about 100 miles north of Salt Lake city. It was settled by members of the Latter Day Saints church, a band of them having arrived at the present site April 1, 1860.

Distribution of land was by lot. "The History of Idaho" indicates, "five acres of meadow, 10 acres of upland and an acre and a quarter in the village were given to each man." The band of pioneers built modest little log houses in the form of a hollow square, the historian continues, "the backs formed the sides of the walls of the fort."

For some time a guard was kept, for fear of Indian attack. The days through plagues and hardships, but the little colony, the Gem of the Mountains, grew and prospered.

The railroad was built to Franklin in 1874. Agriculture and livestock industries provide the principal mediums of livelihood.

MARRIED STUDENTS EARN HIGHER SCHOLASTIC HONORS

GOLDEN, Colo., June 15 (AP)—Two may be able to study better than one, believes J. C. Doolittle, Colorado School of Mines rector, pondering statistics which show higher scholastic averages for married undergraduates than for others.

In 1928, when the school first began to compare classroom marks of its married and unmarried students, 18 bachelors had an average of 85 per cent against 77 per cent for the entire school.

This year the average of the married men is lower, but still ahead of the mark set by their bachelor brethren, Doolittle said. There are now 80 married men in the Mines' student population of about 500.

Rich Men, Births, 'Phone Calls Decline In America

By F. S. COLSON

(Associated Press Science Writer)

CHICAGO, June 14.—Marriages are on the increase but births are declining; millionaires are fewer; more people are going insane or to jail; more children are going to high school but people are making fewer phone calls and sending fewer letters.

These are some of the trends in present-day America, compared with recent years, revealed in a survey by Prof. William F. Ogburn of the University of Chicago, formerly in the consumer's division of N.R.A.

The results of his study are published by the American Sociological association.

One of his outstanding discoveries is that the population of the United States has been practically standing still during the depression.

Here are some of his other findings:

Births declined steadily from 88 per 1000 in 1920 to about 18 in 1932. Deaths in recent years have varied.

Immigrants swelled the population by 600,000 people in 1922 but did not increase it all in 1932.

Eighty-two per cent of all qualified voters in 1928 actually went to the polls, but only 68 per cent voted in 1932.

More than half the children of high school age actually were in high school in 1928 as compared to only one-fourth in 1930.

Madness people rose from 45 per 100,000 of the population in 1921 to 55 in 1932.

Prison term—served—increased from 35 per 100,000 in 1920 to 50 in 1932.

Travels of the average American were 1,700 miles in 1921, 3,530 in 1928 and 2,430 in 1932.

There were 80,000 American millionaires in 1928 but only 5,000 in 1932.

Percentage of the population engaged in production—of material goods, compared to the total of employed people, was 75 in 1920 but dropped steadily to 50 in 1930.

THE JOY OF BATTLE

The primal urge was in the ascendancy Thursday night when a crowd of sixty-five thousand spectators howled and shouted and gave themselves up one hundred per cent to the age old glory of a good fight.

The "Big Game" battle will probably go down in fight history as one of the greatest ever held. There was no hanging back, no effort to avoid punishment. Imbued with the determination to kill or be killed, the resulting exhibition was of the soul-satisfying kind for which fight fans yearn.

The man who first said that civilization was only skin deep perhaps had in mind just such an example. Fighting deals with the elemental instincts. There is nothing aesthetic about it. It awakens passions which have slumbered since caveman days and it satisfies an urge in the human make up which is just as deeply implanted as any instinct to which flesh is heir.

Morality may react the business of fighting but if the race ever reaches a point where there shall be no further interest in human conflict this will be a different sort of a race.

A CONGRESSMAN'S VACATION

Home-bound congressmen may well speculate a little anxiously about the reception they are likely to get. It isn't that they haven't done their best, individually and collectively, according to their own lights and their constituents' demands. But there are likely to be a lot of questions asked that even a congressman can't answer. Problems will doubtless be presented which even a congressman can't solve.

Imagine a man about to get to work getting himself re-elected being confronted with such questions as these:

Why don't you support the President? Why don't you think for yourself? Why don't you do something about the weather? What do you think we sent you to Congress for? When is it going to rain? What about the job I asked you for? When will I get my home loan? When is the depression going to be over? If so or isn't there a brain trust? And so on. And so forth.

Vacation, for a congressman, isn't what it is for ordinary citizens.

WHEN DICTATORS MEET

The world customers who, after all, are paying for the show, have a right to take umbrage at the decision of Mussolini that his meeting with Hitler must be behind closed doors. It was a pity that all this excellent setting and material had to be wasted.

Riccioni, the selected meeting place, is a small sea-bathing resort on the Adriatic. There Mussolini, clad in a bathing suit, received Chamberlain. Duxius, last summer. The world is curious to know whether a cool sea bath is an integral part of Il Duce's dictator curriculum. One cannot help wishing it were as he thinks of Henry Adams.

Will Il Duce kiss Dr. Fischer on both cheeks or extend the back of his hand? Will it be "Ben" and "Ad", or what is the accepted salutation between dictators, anyway?

These and like questions the world wants answered.

VIGILANTES IN AUSTRIA

The news that the Austrian government has asked citizens to organize vigilante groups to protect it against bombings and outrages should not be accepted as indicating official break-down, any more than would intervention by our state militia in labor disputes mean that local police were to be superseded. Police forces are not maintained in sufficient strength to meet abnormal emergencies such as exist in Austria today.

Austria's measures compare more closely with our American Protective League activities in World War days than with the vigilante groups of our pioneer times. The A. P. L. was an aid to law enforcing officers; the vigilantes were free lances.

GEOGRAPHY AND THE "NEW DEAL"

(Childs News-Tribune)

The trend of the Literary Digest "New Deal" popularity poll seems to indicate that the "New Deal" is developing geographical complexity. Last week's tabulation showed unmistakable evidences of increased popularity of the administration's program in the industrial east and just as apparent recession of that popularity in the agricultural middle west.

Probably the fact that farm prices haven't been able to keep up with NRA-suggested industrial advances has something to do with it. The NRA is not popular with the American farmer. It killed the price he had to pay for things rather abruptly and the gap has never quite been spanned, despite the fact that agricultural prices are, on the average, ahead of last year.

Whatever the cause may be, it is unfortunate if this geographic discrepancy should become aggravated. We have trouble enough in the United States today without complicating them with serious geographic differences. The "New Deal" was conceived for everybody. Maybe it won't work. But it is much too early to give up with a compromise friendly industrial east and an antagonistic middle west and west.

CAME JAMES BURNS

(Boise Statesman)

Multiplicity of satisfactions in a troubled, uncertain world are brought to Boise by the Idaho national guard now camped for a two weeks stay. There is a sense of security, industrial conditions are being smoothed and the state is being brought to a state of "normalcy" which has no counterpart in state organization. There is a feeling of being in a dynamo of controlled power for peace or battle. There is honest citizenship in the making, thinking less of its dollar a day than of the fundamental necessity for competent preparedness if there is to be government and "industrial security."

Each day that the national guard drills brings greater efficiency to the reserve military forces which will become the backbone of the nation's fighting strength in case of war. It is with no intention of warring a red flag at other nations, however, that the traditional, old-time forces of military strength have been prepared. For many of the continued peace are soldiers who have fought. The national guard has been vital action many times. Yet its constant hope is for no more war. The guard which is camped here now dates back beyond the war with Spain and through the turmoil in Europe. Scores of former guardsmen gave their lives on foreign soil. To prevent a greater sacrifice the new men now striving for competence in military tactics are learning and absorbing the lore of the sword. Preparedness in the long run is the most sensible method of securing tranquility.

No one likes to imagine a day when these artillery, cavalry and engineers will be sent to active duty. Many of the men are mere boys. That is all the more reason the state should be proud of its national guard. An ounce of prevention installed at the proper time is worth pounds of cure when a mutiny is ordered.

STREET CARS AND LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(Spokane Spokesman-Review)

Lawson gave up his street railway five years ago, and now a winking crew is taking up the tracks, preliminary to paving of Main street.

Abandonment of street railways is a national transition that started several years ago in small cities and now has progressed to the larger cities as the heavy street cars are junked and rubber-tired buses are taking their place.

It is further evidence that nothing is static in life, government or matter. Changes are coming on in everything, imperceptible, for days, months or decades, but remarkably real. There is an everlasting grinding between the laws of decay and obsolescence, and the laws grind on political systems and governments as well as upon material structures. There is a stubborn fact that league of nations idealists overlooked at Paris and Geneva. They acted on the assumption that they could remap Europe and a great part of the rest of the world, and "freeze" their edicts in a league of nations. It is strange that a statesman of Woodrow Wilson's knowledge of history was carried away with that delusion. Lloyd George, Clemenceau, the tiger of France, were better, but followed Wilson's lead, since it seemed to suit their national interests, and by playing in with him they could more effectively manipulate him to acceptance of their designs.

"I wonder why there are so many more auto wrecks than railway accidents."

"That's easy. You've ever hear of the fireman hugging the engineer?"

While bathing at a French seaside resort, an income-tax collector was attacked by a school of jellyfish. He said: "I was a school teacher."

"My wife had a dream last night and thought she was married to a millionaire."

"You're lucky! My wife thinks that in the daytime."

"Say!" exclaimed the man of the house. "Who told you to plant potatoes there?"

"Your wife," said the yard boy.

"Pretty, aren't they?"

Sunday School Teacher: "Why was Solomon the wisest man in the world?"

Barker: "Because he had so many wives to advise him."

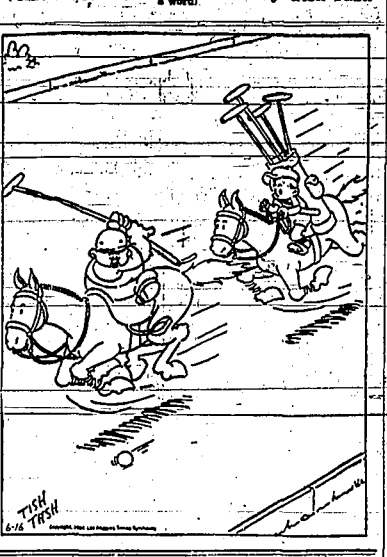

"We've enjoyed when you first asked your husband for money?"

"Oh, no! It was calm and collected."

WASHINGTON CLOSE-UP

By KIRKE SIMPSON

"A WASHINGTON BYSTANDER"

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt picked up the double game battle thrown by the Republican national committee "creed" framed almost before it touched the ground.

That creed put recovery first and thereafter the problems of a wide spread of prosperity, of old age and unemployment security, of "avoiding these things."

Added a warning that social progress did not mean socialism. It is to be observed, also, that no immediate comment was available from Southern Democratic marked conservative tendencies.

Some of whom have become more openly critical recently of phases of the administration program, yet without outright bailing.

Hoover's Reply

WASHINGTON—Herbert Hoover's reply to the telegram of greeting sent the "former president" by the Republican convention in Chicago shed no additional light on his plans.

Although some newsmen at Chicago, in their first analysis of the national committee message, found in it a political philosophy that Mr. Hoover's reply placed up the opportunity to make a "do-nothing" presidential comeback idea which might be in his mind.

Obviously the 74th congress, which the president intends to charge with execution of the program, reconstruction program he outlined, is to be elected on a party platform that can be framed by these two pronouncements, with the farm-labor national socialization plan in Minnesota and the Wisconsin progressive party demands on a sidekick. The popular mandate on the Republican creed will be written in the election.

In the longer view of the situation, however, it can be argued that the president's message launches his long expected effort to lead the forces which carried him into office in 1923 into a permanent policy of liberal, progressive, radical or what you like, as opposed to conservative or reactionary thought. His new deal creed for 1933 is specific both in objectives and in point of time of action.

It is obvious that the president's judgment of the temper of the country is that such a declaration, so dominated by a majority specifically pledged to carry out the program.

Reaction of both left wing Republicans and moderate conservative tendencies to the presidential communication prove interesting.

Western Republicans who have gone along with the Roosevelt program to date approved, some with caution on details. Even the Vandenberg of Michigan, before whose eyes loom alarming prospects of 1933 availability of the league of nations, moderate liberal presidential nominee, saw it as a statement of the statesman's social responsibilities of government, but

There are other indications that about that he had made it clear to them he was not considering any other presidential nomination. The greeting from the national committee to the (future) leader of the party might merely imply knowledge that such was his purpose.

In any event, framing a national committee "creed" was enabling all the attention of the Republican leadership to be directed to the required tact and some spirit of compromise as between clashing views of party factions.

A New Yorker At Large

By MARK HARRON

NEW YORK—One minor gripe that was placed on the list of employed class was the Wall Street investigator.

It was not the case, and it is not a gripe. It is the fact that the major banking institutions disapproved very strongly of any of their employees who patronized the stock exchange and its derivatives.

The lady who went out to gather reputations as being big spending Broadway playboys found herself on the carpet.

To keep check on any of their men who went astray amid the bright lights, the banks hired a small corps of private detectives who continually checked all the better-known clubs and drink-taverns.

Riding round on the bank employees' backs, they also maintained a lookout for men who had borrowed large sums from the banks and discovered that they had a sharp downfall if he was found to be the type who tossed $10 bills to floor show chorus girls.

A pilgrim returning from Hollywood brings reports of the hilarious flower feud between Jeanette MacDonald and Joan Crawford. It seems that the same cameraman works for both of them, and Miss Crawford was much put out when the cameraman refused to follow her when she was out of the picture.

One of Miss Crawford's well-known habits is the practice of presenting gardenias to all her friends with particular gusto. She is so sure that she will get away to work she would stop off at the flower store where they were filming the MacDonald picture and pin a gardenia on the lapel of their mutual cameraman.

Miss MacDonald's retort was to pin a cluster of orchids over the head of Miss Crawford. She is so sure that she will get away to work she would stop off at the flower store where they were filming the MacDonald picture and pin a gardenia on the lapel of their mutual cameraman.

Guiding Your Child

By ALICE CLARISA RICHMOND

Theory

When the first baby came to the Jones family, Mrs. Jones was full of theories which she had learned in classes and books on the care of children.

And more and more anxious young mothers were seldom seen, the scarcely dared move without consulting her authorities, and lived in constant terror of doing something which would injure the child for life.

The baby must never be taken up and petted; must never be punished; must live according to chart. If it gains too little one week, too much another, the diet must be wrong. If the inside of a bottle was touched while preparing food, it must be rebuffed lest some enterprising germ had gotten into it. Toys were discarded every day until all the rubber animals were like limp rats.

Mrs. Jones was constantly in a fever of nervous anxiety. She was worn out and ready for bed. To her husband, faced with a wife turned nurse-maid, the baby was a source of constant irritation.

The psychology of too much attention, even of the most scientific kind, is bad for both child and mother. Too much attention is a constant irritation and ends by spoiling the family relationship.

Children are not machines which can be treated in the mass and trained to turn out a product. They are individuals from the moment of birth, and need love and understanding of their special requirements.

Let the young mother read and study as much as possible before the baby is born. Then she would be able to turn out a product. They are individuals from the moment of birth, and need love and understanding of their special requirements.

Jack Dempsey's Plan Proves Big Factor in Fight

"He Did Everything Planned—He Never Did Make A Single Mistake," Says Old Manassa

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, June 16.—A few years ago there was a lean, thunderous, rawhide champion of the world named Jack Dempsey and his fighting slogan was:

"Hit 'em in the stomach, hit 'em on the chin, hit 'em in the stomach again, hit 'em in the stomach again."

Today there was a new heavyweight champion, Adnan Adnan, a new black-haired, lean, iron-fisted fighter, and his slogan was: "I will win the fight."

Jack Dempsey told him to fight less than an hour before he was to fight. He was to fight less than an hour before he was to fight. He was to fight less than an hour before he was to fight.

New Deal Club Hears Two Candidates at Open Meeting

Turner E. Hackman, Twin Falls attorney and candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman from the second Idaho district, was applauded at an open meeting of the Twin Falls New Deal club in the high school auditorium here last evening when he praised President Roosevelt above all others as a "conscientious, well-meaning man of courage in the White House," and declared, "I want to see my party re-born with leaders who will bring it back to the principles of Abraham Lincoln to take the shackles off and give us an opportunity to make a living with the sweat of our brows."

Asher B. Wilson of Twin Falls, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, said the new deal appeals to everyone "because everything stopped dead until the day President Roosevelt took office and made fair not to start again." The president, he said, should be supported in his plans and efforts to work out the continuing emergency so that "we will never again be dominated by those who live by grabbing cash and cramping the little fellow so he can't live." The president, he said, wants a "common-sense price level," which when attained will bring about a situation where "the work-a-day man gets a gold or silver dollar." The "big boys," he said, oppose this plan because it would make an end of their opportunity for "grabbing."

Hits Hoover Record

Using an educational program to familiarize the people with political methods and principles and expressing hope for rebirth of the Republican party, Hackman said he had opposed ex-President Hoover's re-election "because he was against the people's interests."

His praise for Roosevelt for consideration of constructive criticism and "suggestions" he has submitted to the chief executive in the "hope that he could do something to better our condition."

H. O. Howell, former state vice president of the letter carriers union, spoke briefly, and T. J. Lloyd, Idaho observer and ex-convict, Johnson, Twin Falls mayor, were introduced.

J. W. Taylor, Buhl attorney, briefly discussed the new deal and its declaration of principles.

The meeting adopted resolutions submitted by James D. Whelan, renewing recommendations of a recent meeting of officers of New Deal clubs and Federal labor unions for a monthly allotment of at least $50,000 for direct relief and work program of FERA alone in Idaho. Conditions in regard to unemployment have as a whole become more serious since the original action, the resolutions said.
