(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 16—Congress came squarely to the edge of adjournment to night and there met demand for enactment of so much additional legislation that a recess was taken over to Mon-

With all of the key pieces of legislation that the administration had insisted upon out of the way, senators pressed demands for action of a farm mortgage moratorium bill and railroad labor legislation so hard that Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, gave up hope of finishing up tonight.

At 11:30 and a half hours of work had been done by the senators and thirteen and a half by the house when the bells clanged out the word of the recess.

During that time housing, deficiency appropriation, labor arbitration and other major measures sought by President Roosevelt had been all but disposed of. But a few minutes more, some of them

"There are a number of important bills the administration would like to see passed but is willing to defer until next session," Robinson said.

"A great deal of work has been done."

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: Although he is still unable to identify the stranger, who, with a policeman, was killed in the Dufrene's home, he at least has some "leads." One is that at the time Ellen Becker, a servant, left the Dufrene's employ, Mrs. and Mrs. Dufrene had a quarrel. Another is that there was something strange about Ellen's leaving, and a third is that Donaghy, the chauffeur, has recently been seen with a large amount of money in his pocket.

Chapter 41

PUZZLING AMBUSH

Donaghy suddenly recaptured his jaunty manner. "Certainly, I've got a big roll of bills, a regular man's also stake."

"What of it? There wasn't any money missing, was there? I didn't win it on the horses. That's just a yarn. I slipped to money John, to make his eye pop. This is money I've saved up from my wages and I'm planning to buy a new suit."

Now, if you want to count it, or write down the numbers, or look for fingerprints on it, it's all right with me. But if you want to know what I'm doing with it, that's another matter."

Harper waved aside the mocking, offered wallet. "So you carry your hard-earned savings around with you, yet you borrow small sums of money from your fellow servants to tide you over to the next payday? I must say I like the horse story better, Donaghy."

This time the chauffeur's temper blew up. "I don't give a damn what you like or don't like," he snarled. "It's my business, if you think you've got anything on me, go ahead and raise it by a pinch. You can't bluff me and you're not going to hang any thing on me, either, by hanging around the kitchen and wheedling gossip out of the help."

"Put the screws to the servants, madam," he jumped in, "and you crack the whip. Ask anything we've got to answer. But I haven't heard you making any noise like that upstairs. Try badgering them and see what you get!"

Donaghy went on, unheeding. "There are lots of things you don't know about, Mr. Sergeant of Detectives, for all your snooping. I'll give you a couple of hot tips and you'll do something about them."

"You can't question Mrs. Dufrene because her face is all over the news," he said. "She's the one who's been in the room, Wednesday night, when the murder was committed. She's the one who's been in the room, Wednesday night, when the murder was committed. She's the one who's been in the room, Wednesday night, when the murder was committed."

"Here's another! Mrs. Dufrene hasn't been near her since she came back to this house last night. He's staying out, or is he being kept out? If you can spare a little time from the butter, the cheese and the cook you might look into a few things like that, going on right under your nose."

Harper got down from the table. "Donaghy, I'm running this case in my own way. Right now we're discussing your part and I'm going to tell you what I think, in plain words. It's for your own good."

"I am convinced you hold the key evidence in this case, because you know who that dead man was and why he came here. If you have accepted a bribe for your silence or leveled blackmail on the strength of that knowledge, I warn you that you're playing with dynamite. If not, those murders were treacherous, cold-blooded affairs. There may have been a strong reason for him the first killing but Officer Hamill was murdered for one reason, and only one—he knew the killer's identity. Any one who will kill, and kill again to cover the first crime, can keep right on killing so long as there is a chance of Watson, to whom Dufrene had first reported the affair, and they had found exactly nothing whatever. No cars had been seen, no trains had passed that could have served the hidden gunman, and all traces of the killer at all by the street. "It looks as if we're up against an invisible man," Lafferty remarked.

"Make it plural," returned Harper with a sharp look. "The invisible vanishes in a few minutes in the midst of a bare, flat country. But he must have been back in the city almost as soon as Dufrene, who drove like mad."

And then a still snarler man murdered the miler, and escaped from Dufrene's house without leaving a track in the snow. Either it was of someone's been dragging red herrings across the snow."

"You mean some of our clues have been planted?" "Exactly by the way, you haven't told me how you made out at Mrs. Morlock's."

"Well, Mrs. Dufrene's alibi is just as strong as her unsupported word. Here is the situation, eleven minutes called up his wife about 4:30 and told her about the ambush. He said he was safe, was staying in the Austreiter for the night, and that there was a police guard."

"She seemed greatly upset by the news, complained of a nervous headache, beat off attempts at Mrs. Morlock's dinner party and immediately retired to her room."

"About five o'clock the maid left a tray outside her door. When she passed a little later it had been taken in. The point is that no one actually saw Mrs. Dufrene from five o'clock until the maid went to announce that Doyle was asking for her."

"Dinner was served at a even and while they were dining one of the chauffeurs gave the alarm about the fire in the garage. The telephone wires were strung at the back of the garage and the phone was dead."

Right after that the police came to the Department. Naturally, the whole house was in an uproar, but what Mrs. Dufrene and one in the house seems to know."

"That wouldn't take any prize as an alibi, would it?" Harper asked quietly. "I always thought that when a murder was planned the murderer usually turned up armed with the best alibi—not the worst. It's almost a law of criminal nature. Now, how would you say, had the very best alibi in this case?"

Lafferty groaned. "Sherlock Holmes is in again!" Harper continued with a sly smile, as though he had been answered. "You're quite right, Steve. Dufrene and Donaghy. And what portions of our evidence have been most troublesome to place?"

"Personally," Lafferty said, "I could get along better if I knew nothing of the case that dated prior to sundown yesterday. That fellow buying the disguise months ago, the crank letters, the ambush, those damned things make everything clearer."

"Right again, Jack. And why? Because those three events should be linked in a sequence, the logical outcome of which would have been Dufrene's death! That's why I've felt so uneasy about the letters—those playing with dynamite were written by our dead man."

Lafferty nodded. "I see. The letters furnished Dufrene with his alibi. If the letters are 'phony,' then the alibi I get your drift. Where's our next stop, the Austreiter?"

"Not yet. First we have to pay a little social call on the mysterious housemaid, Ellen Becker."

Harper told a slip of paper from his vest pocket. "Ellen, lives at 1221 Magnolia Street. I don't think we've expected and I doubt if we'll be wrong."

Filer, June 16—Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Scholten entertained Thursday evening at 7 o'clock at their home with a stag dinner honoring Lewis Hack. The table was decorated with ivory lilies, Golden Gleam nasturtiums and corianders.

Pinch was the evening's diversion with W. R. Short receiving high score. The guest of honor received a gift from the host and hostess.

The police car threaded its way through the city lanes until the driver pointed up at the opening of a narrow street. "Here you are, Sergeant," he announced. The detective got out and Harris emerged at once from a tobacco shop on the corner and joined them.

"Any sign of activity?" Harper asked. "I think so," Harris reported. "Miss Becker has been called to the phone in that store twice. There's a booth, so I couldn't hear what she said, but she looked excited."

"Good enough. Wait here for us," Harper directed, and he and Lafferty turned into the narrow street, guided lined with neat, but small, two-story houses. They mounted the low steps at 1221 and pulled the old-fashioned bell up.

They had a wait before the door opened about a foot and a middle-aged woman with iron-gray hair looked out at them suspiciously. Harper greeted her politely. "We would like to see Miss Ellen

COUNTY OFFICIALS' SALARIES BOOSTED

Commissioners Restore Part Of Slash Made Two Years Ago

An increase in salaries for most of the Twin Falls county officials to be elected this fall was approved by Twin Falls county commissioners yesterday. In the past the salaries approved will restore one-half of the 10 per cent reduction that the commissioners ordered two years ago. An exception was made in the case of the sheriff's office where the salary was restored to the figure of two years ago at $2000 a year. This exception, a member of the board explained, was made because of the fact that the sheriff is subject to call 24 hours a day, whereas other officials work from 9 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The new schedule of salaries in other offices is as follows: Superintendent of public instruction, $1710; probate judge, $1900; treasurer, $1900; assessor, $1900; clerk, auditor, $1900; $1900. Salaries of the commissioners and of the prosecuting attorney are fixed by law, according to the county's classification.

ALLEGES NON-SUPPORT

Alleging non-support and asserting she was being compelled to earn her own livelihood the past two years, Emma Jones Wilson yesterday filed for divorce from Edwin E. Wilson, to whom she was married at Great Falls, Montana, June 18, 1931. There are no children and no community property is involved. Edward Babcock of Twin Falls is Wilson's attorney.

FORMER OWNER FIGHTS DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT

Battling against a possible deficiency judgment claim, Fred C. Olsen of Pocatello, in the district court here Friday resisted a suit brought by the Federal Land Bank of Spokane to foreclose a $10,000 mortgage on a 100-acre Buhi district farm with 1400 acres water right.

Olsen owned the farm from July 29, 1920, until December 6, 1921, assuming the mortgage when he purchased the property and received by the Federal Land Bank of Spokane, when he turned the farm back to Johnson. He asserts that he reconveyed the property before any action was taken by the mortgage holder and that he was thereby relieved of any liability.

In an amended complaint the bank asserted the present value of the property to be $4800.

The mortgage executed in September, 1919, was to be paid in 60 semi-annual payments of $24.70 each, the last payment falling due in March, 1934. Olsen alleges that only the first 43 semi-annual payments were made, and that payments are due since September, 1931.

Among nine defendants named in the foreclosure suit, only Olsen entered an appearance at trial. District Judge W. A. Babcock took the case under advisement.

Pacific Coast Joint Block Land bank foreclosed mortgages on two farms formerly owned by J. O. Rice, one near Pocatello and the other $362.25. No resistance was offered at trial.

CHILDREN UNWILLING DIVORCE WITNESSES

Unwilling witnesses at a hearing in divorce court in Twin Falls yesterday, Viola Blanche Olsen, 16, and John Howard Olsen, 13, heard their father, John M. Olsen, deputy United States marshal and former railroad employee, defend himself in contempt proceedings against charges by their mother, Mrs. Elyria D. Olsen, who claims that Olsen had failed to meet $40 a month alimony payments since January, 1930, and now owes $1920 on that account.

Olsen's testimony that he had been willing but was unable to meet the payments, was supported by that of his second wife, Mrs. Elyria Olsen, whom he married after the divorce decree was granted to his first wife in August, 1929, on grounds of cruelty.

District Judge W. A. Babcock took the case under advisement. During the day, a decree of divorce was granted to Elyria Olsen from Anna Olsen, who, Olsen alleged, took her two daughters, 13 and 15 years old, and went away with another man in September, 1931. The Oltzes were married at Oakley, January 15, 1921. The petition for divorce was not contested.
