CHEAP MONEY

Cheap and abundant money may be the way out of the depression as Senator Borah appears to believe but cheap money alone will not spell an end to the economic chaos which looms ahead if present governmental policies are adhered to.

If prices continue to rise money will of course grow cheaper. The two movements are one and the same thing. But as far as the consumer is concerned there is no economic advantage in doubling individual incomes if the cost of living is also doubled.

It is a big subject and it is doubtful if very many men in the entire country understand it in all its ramifications. Added to which, among these two agree, apparently, as to just the means to be employed in order to bring about the precise result desired.

Everybody agrees that money should be cheaper, meaning thereby that prices in all lines should be higher. But to attempt to stimulate prices by means of a debased currency seems to carry with it a too heavy penalty.

Given such increase, and there is plenty of evidence that such a movement is already under way, and money would grow cheaper without aid from the Government or anybody else.

TRANSPORTATION

It is hoped that Congress, before it adjourns, will get the railroads organized for the future, eliminating wasteful duplication, giving rails a fair chance along with lines that operate on water, air and highways, and enabling all together to develop into a well-rounded national transportation system.

There is no reason in the nature of things why trains, trucks, buses, ships and airplanes should interfere with each other. They ought to supplement and support each other. All should have a square deal, and the public should support them all.

At present the railroad lines are most handicapped and deserve the most sympathy. They suffer from two great evils, overcapitalization and merciless competition. If their capital and debt charges were down to a reasonable level and some of the competitive pressure were eased, they could modernize their equipment and probably hold their own in competing for passengers and freight.

roads to pay a profit. If they cannot do that, they will inevitably go into the government ownership, which is unwise except as a last resort.

RECOVERY AND REFORM

The same old conflict that has perplexed the country since the depression-boba-up-again. Shall government and business pursue a policy of recovery or reform?

The popular reply has been, and still seems to be, "We want both." This has also been the attitude of the government. Business has never been so keen on reform, but was willing to endure a considerable amount of it for a while, being very sick and doubtful of its recovery.

Reform came first in point of time. There had to be certain drastic reforms of old business procedure in order to start the business heart to pumping and the blood to circulating again. The aim of most thoughtful people has been to make such permanent adjustments, material and moral, as would lessen the danger of falling back into the old methods and ending in the old failures.

It is possible that if the new compulsions to business fairness and social safety were relaxed now, and no more corrective legislation were attempted, there would be a business renaissance that would launch the nation more quickly into a new prosperity. But there is still the fear, in millions of hearts, that the ultimate results would be, before many years, another collapse more disastrous than the last one.

It seems to be a question of practical temperance. Just how fair and decent, on the whole, are the American people willing to be in their business procedure, for the sake of better health and longer life in their social and economic system?

A GOOD SLOGAN, BUT WHAT OF IT?

"No north, no south" is the slogan of the Idaho dentists. Quite properly the slogan is expounded by the southern section dentists who seek to bring into the fold of the state association members of the profession from north of the Salmon river.

It is an old, old story—the "south" is always wanting to get the "north" together with the south—until it comes time to pass around the gravy. It has held true in all sorts and types of societies from groups of editors to the more professional divisions, right on down the line to the selection of senators and governors.

Let the dentists of Northern Idaho join their brothers in the south "we can't get away from using those terms," and then let them hope that the northern section will be favored, and let them be chary of the terms that are offered. And we speak not from bitterness—Southern Idaho is dear to our heart, but facts nevertheless are facts.

ORGANIZATIONS OFTEN DON'T SPEAK FOR THEIR MEMBERS

The president addressed the national Chamber of Commerce with considerable effect when he asserted its leaders assembled in Washington do not speak for the business men of the country generally. He claims a majority of business men are still supporting his program.

There is much more truth in the first assertion than in the second. Business men are still sympathetic with the president's purposes and they hope he succeeds because their own fates are tied up with his. But they are becoming increasingly concerned about his spending and the failure of several of his "radio experiments" have aroused increasing doubt, as to whether he knows just what he is doing and where he will take us.

And if the president is wise he will keep in mind that it may be just as true of organizations voting support of his policies as of those criticizing him.

Swinging To The Left Again

A New Yorker At Large

By JAMES B. RESTON

NEW YORK—Christopher Morley is back at his desk in 45th street after a holiday in South America. He has written a thin little book about his sojourn called Haste La Vie.

Now his big black pen is flying at a companion volume to Human Being, with occasional interruptions while he explores his trunk of unfinished projects and takes another swipe at a long satirical play he has been taunting himself with for years.

Despite his success, Morley is a wonderfully human person. Few men in the world can match his wit. Though I admit I have seen him seldom, whenever I have he has been all sparks. Four days ago he came out at his little house on Long Island. The other three he comes in to his rightful little office at the Century City building.

An indefatigable worker, Morley expressed his writing creed, I think, in his first successful novel, Parnassus on Wheels, which ran through a delightful character Roer Miffin says, "A good book, like Ere, ought to come from somewhere near, for there, there ought to be a heart vibrating in it."

A classic among newspaper anecdotes concerns the feud between Morley and the late Cyrus II. Curtis. The time came to Morley to write a column. The Bowling Green, in the Evening Post, he wrote the column out from 1920 to January, 1924, when Curtis bought this paper. When the purchase was announced, Morley's resignation had explained that he had a volume of correspondence to clear away, and asked permission to stay several weeks.

Permission was granted by Curtis' general manager, but when Curtis heard of it, he was furious and sent Morley a note saying that "no more" columns would be for his. Morley immediately started his typewriter. Having nursed his wrath during all these years, "Chris" finally decided to write a column. He remembered that somewhere in Shakespeare was a character named Curtis. He laid through a volume until he located the character in The Taming of The Shrew. He found this speech with which he closed his column:

"A cold world Curtis, in every office but thine. And therefore, fire."

RUBBISH

Guiding Your Child

By ALICE CLARISSA RICHMOND

"Yes, his education is complete. He's got his degree." All over the country, parents are thinking of saying the same thing. To them the struggle, often an exhausting one, to give the child the best possible education, is over. Their responsibility is done.

But all the time they are sitting back in the calm assurance of duty done, the program of the day's education starts them on the "Commencement." Of what? The speakers, one and all, will rattle and declaim on the "Commencement of life." But is it life that starts at 18 or 20? Surely one cannot waste so much time getting ready and maybe then be told that life begins at 40.

Life starts at birth and should be a continuous process. But education starts when school and college are over, and one's tools for learning, learning through a process of education. School and college cannot give education. Boys and girls are not fitted to take in the vastness of human knowledge at the age when they are being taught.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS) (Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

WASHINGTON By Ray Tucker UP—Administration advisers are watching price trends as anxiously as a doctor feels the pulse of a patient. The slow movement of prices in living costs might easily prove the vulnerable spot in whatever recovery comes between now and 1936. That would be inflation which every housewife could understand.

Price experts say they find two reasons for rejecting the gap between the production rates of durable and consumption goods industries is slowly narrowing. Both are moving up. Durable production was 38 points to the lead on the index chart in March of 1935. Now the spread is only 14 points, and the two may be heading for a rendezvous.

Farm products are responsible for the major upturn in living costs. Of increases recently noted in 94 commodities, 54 are on the agricultural list. The others have dropped or increased only slightly. The textile industry—which is parading its troubles before a Cabinet committee—has shown a 10 per cent pay roll and employment gains. Several Cabinet committee members want an explanation for that before recommending higher tariffs and NRA changes.

AIM—President Roosevelt fixed the 1926 price level as his objective when he inaugurated his experiments in a "managed currency." You don't hear much about that arbitrary goal any more. Talk now focuses on the 1923-1925 level, which is the basis for all governmental index computations with the exception of the "Wholesale" are still tied to the 1926 figure.

The unofficial explanation is that the 1923-1925 level represents a normal condition of production, employment and prices. In 1926 we were on the doorstep of the boom. However, the index of 1926 is higher than that of 1926 and probably easier to attain.

Marriner E. Eccles, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, would drop the price level guide entirely. He rates it an illusory guide to the future. He has already argued that the question of the pending banking bill becomes law.

CHANGING—Governor Eccles feels sure the banking bill will pass in a form pleasing to the administration, despite the bankers' opposition to it. He has already arranged for a publicity program designed to "sell" the measure to the public and the country.

For the first time in its history the Federal Reserve Board has been attacked by the public. The "Innovation probably stuns the bankers as much as Title II. In the past the Board has been lionized in its success. But Eccles believes his "special side" can do a lot to smooth his path in the administration of novel financial authority.

Elliott Thorndike, the man drafted to establish cordial relations with the bankers, has surprised everybody. He has been writing financial articles for the Washington newspaper owned by the McClellan family. When Mr. McClellan was Reserve Board Governor he saw reporters as infrequently as he could. "No news is good news," was his motto.

Times—and bankers—are changing. STANDARD: The much-ballyhooed unemployment census has struck a marvellous snag. Government statisticians were surprised to discover quite by accident that no money had been set aside for the study and no authorization given.

Mr. Planners at the no long-time program of government or private undertakings can be started without a knowledge of the kind and cause and total of unemployment. Ignorance of this problem is abysmal. Nobody knows how many women have retired and discovered the depression, although they have widely supplanted men in small-machine production. There is no estimate of the number of babies who have come of reproductive age since 1929. Nobody can verify or disprove the rate of technological advances.

A. F. of L. estimates say that slightly less than 11,500,000 were out of work in April and this does not include those on PWA, FEPA and CCC rolls. National Industrial Conference Board figures run about 10 per cent less. An authoritative estimate is more essential now than ever before if the country is to have a standard of living which will permit economic growth by which to judge the effectiveness of the $4,000,000,000 relief program in providing a "full dinner pail."

ANOTHER: Gold troubles again. A New York attorney thinks he has found a scheme for beating dollar devaluation despite the Supreme Court decision upholding revocation of the gold clause. To the gold bond covenant it is provided that the bond shall be accepted in payment of federal income taxes. That as well as the provision, he has advised certain clients to offer a $1000 gold bond in payment of $1600 in taxes on June 15.

Government lawyers anticipate no difficulty in defeating the attempt in the courts. They doubt if action on the basis of the provision before the Supreme Court. But they don't like the idea of another trip down the long gold trail. Once was too much.

RESEARCH: Congress has passed an act authorizing Colonel W. L. Ketter, Medical Corps, retiring on full pay and pursue research work at Walter Reed Hospital. Keller stands at the top as a surgeon and has been offered a $100,000 a year at private hospitals, but he has turned down these offers and continued on his modest pay treating disabled soldiers. He will now be in a position to make researches which will benefit all humanity.

NOTES: John W. Davis, Morgan's keenest scout, has been investigated by the Congress and the banking bill. Temporary buildings are being built in the Potomac will house some of the New Deal overflow activities. Henry L. Rowell, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is doing the job that Franklin Roosevelt performed during the World War—looking over the action of the Navy. They don't know which one is to handle investigations of work-leave.

WEDDING BELLS TO RING FOR PRINCESS

Marriage of Newly Divorced Woolworth Heiress and Court Expected

RENO, Nev., May 13 (AP)—Wedding bells are expected to ring tomorrow for the newly divorced Princess Barbara Hutton, heiress and her handsome Danish nobleman fiance, Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow.

From a reliable source it was learned the count who has denied he intends to marry the princess—has already arrived in Reno and is making plans to take the Woolworth heiress back to Europe with him as his countess.

The count was understood to have arrived in Verdi, Nevada, 12 miles west of here, on the Pacific Limited this afternoon. At Verdi he was met by George B. Tinsley, Barbara's Reno attorney, and came back to Reno by automobile.

Residence Guarded

It was learned he had already gone to the private residence of the princess, where the grounds were being carefully guarded to keep questioners away.

The famous young princess, who divorced Prince Alexis Adivalov today in a trial that required just 10 minutes in the court, was secluded in the private home. Her father, Franklin L. Hutton of New York, and her stepmother were expected to be in the big rambling house.

In the meantime a crew of workmen was engaged preparing up the plans for the $10,000 private railway car in which Mr. and Mrs. Hutton came to Reno from New York.

Officers Escort Princess

In a constitutional move to avoid disturbances and rumors, the princess came to court early this morning with an escort which included the chief of police of Washoe county and Chief of Police John M. Kirkley of Reno.

Residence testimony was given in about three minutes by the count, an employe at the Thatcher residence, and one of Barbara's maids. The latter testimony ordered everyone to clear the upstairs hall, the princess hurried out the way she came through the jail building and into Thatcher's car, which was parked in the garage. She smiled as she brushed by photographers and reporters.

Prince Playing Polo

In Paris today, Prince Alexis' valet said the prince was "too busy playing polo" to make any statement. He is living in a smart bachelor's apartment near that of his sister, Madame Jose Bert, overlooking the French Chamber of Deputies.

The prince is frequently seen in the company of feminine companions at the famous restaurants and at the movies in Paris.

Barbara inherited an estimated $42,000 from the vast fortune of her late grandfather, E. W. Woolworth.

built up by selling five, ten and fifteen-cent articles in Chain stores located in all parts of America.

She married Prince Alexis, member of an Asia Minor family that has married extensively in America, in Paris, France, June 22, 1933.

Her father joined her in London less than a year later to counsel her in a life between her and her polo-playing husband.

"Happily Married"

When she became 22 years of age last November, Prince Alexis gave a lavish all-night party in Paris for her and expressed the hope—"every man will now realize we are happily married and love each other."

A few weeks later, however, the prince left for America and his polo playing, and the princess sailed for New York.

She said at the time she had come to America "to visit my parents," and added that the prince had "just gone to shoot tigers or something—that's all."

ing invitation for the others not to follow, but again to take advantage of our disunity."

To arguments that the government should declare "that we will not change the present gold content of the dollar," he replied:

"The fact is, however, that a competitive devaluation race with the other nations, we hold out to them a currency of such steadiness that the normal tendency may very well be for the rest of the world to move gradually toward practical exchange stabilizations and regularity."

Morgenthau spoke much of gold and foreign trade. Of silver, which the government is directed to buy until world prices reach the coinage value of $1.29 an ounce of treasury stock a one-to-three ratio with gold, he had principally this to say:

"We also are endeavoring to restore silver to greater usefulness as a monetary metal. It is the money of a large part of the world's population."

Morgenthau summarized his own analysis of the dollar in these words:

"First, you have an absolutely sound dollar."

"Second, the monetary policy of this administration rescued us from chaos; held the fort during the most trying period of our recovery; program, and now is the spearhead as we advance steadily toward our goal."

"Third, of the great trading nations that revealed their currencies, we were the last, until quite recently, when Belgium joined us."

"There are many indications that world trade will continue to increase," the secretary said. "Our monetary policy in relation to world trade is not intended to capture business but merely to protect our normal share."

Morgenthau said the United States is far from a dollar nation of $3,000,000,000 before the war to a creditor nation in 1929 of $21,500,000,000 of which "two-thirds" is today in partial or complete default.

"In estimating the future of our foreign trade in relation to our monetary policy, we may as well face the question whether we wish to see abroad vast quantities of goods that the buyers cannot pay for unless we lend them the money."

"Of course if we want more paper there are plenty of international bankers to arrange the details. We felt rich on that paper during the roaring twenties. Now we know better."

EVERYBODY'S KISS

MYOPHOBIC Guy Westman has rescued Allison Redd from a deserted summer house, and brought her to the home of her relatives. But after her father, Mr. Westman, while the mystery of the deserted house is increased by the appearance of the man in the window, a woman who superintends the work, and finds something very strange in the case, Allison's father is horrified to know that she has received a telegram ostensibly from "him directing her to come. He has better go such telegram."

Chapter 13
ABOUT DAPHNE

"I don't know what it should've done without Mr. Westman," said Allison sweetly.

Robert Redd took his cue. "It is extremely grateful to him," he remarked.

"I don't know what else I could do," said Allison, "they must be feeling the two honest eyes were summing him up. Anyway, it was a pleasure."

Major Redd nodded in approval. He liked young men to call him "sir" respectfully, and he liked a modest, complimentary insertion in their proper places.

"I hope you'll come and look up," he said to Guy. "Live in London, don't you?"

"Mr. Westman's an architect," put in Allison.

"Ah! An architect. Well, I hope you'll come round and see us when you live—when you're married."
