Officers Throughout State Take up Trail of Albert White Who Sowed Way Out of Jail at Flagstaff

WASHINGTON, July 20—President Roosevelt was accused today by House Republican Leader Snell of having come "perilously close to what some people call impeachable grounds."

In a statement palpably projected toward next year's election, Snell lashed the administration's entire legislative program and particularly the president's "latest vagary," the proposed taxes on wealth.

"No administration in the history of this country," he said, "has had such a confused record and I hazard the guess that none ever will be so inconsiderate of the statute, the constitution, and generally, what the people really want."

"Every event has been made to circumvent the courts, a clear attempt to nullify the constitution and the worst for its legislation."

"In pursuing this head-on course, Mr. Roosevelt has come perilously close to what some people call impeachable grounds."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 20—A "poor relative" told police today of a $10,000 kidnaping-extortion plot that failed because of mistaken identity.

Robert C. Byers, 42, a Columbus sales and advertising counselor, said he was snatched here Thursday night by five men who later told him they intended to kidnap his brother, George, who had a large automobile distributing agency.

"It sure is tough that a poor relative like me should be taken for my brother," he said.

Byers Promises to Pay $500 if released here near Cleveland Friday, after he convinced them he was not George and promised to pay them $500 here.

Police reported that so far as they knew no effort was made to collect the $10,000 ransom.

Robert C. Byers is president of the Byers Distributing Service, Inc. His brother is the head of the George W. Byers Sons, Inc. automobile distributors.

Byers told his story first to Cleveland police, and later to Lieutenant Thomas Scully of the Columbus detective force.

He asserted he was about to enter his automobile in a parking lot near his office Thursday night when three men, two armed with guns, entered the car.

Near Medina, the men blindfolded Byers and took him into a building where they held him for several hours.

Byers told his story first to Cleveland police, and later to Lieutenant Thomas Scully of the Columbus detective force.

Today's was the third major accident for the Royal Dutch airline in the past few months. December 1934 the giant American-built Douglas "flying boat" crashed mysteriously in the Syrian desert, carrying seven of their deaths.

"I DIDN'T REALIZE THE FORD V-8 HAD SO MANY FINE-CAR FEATURES"

"IF I HAD KNOWN A FORD V-8 WAS LIKE THIS, I WOULD HAVE BOUGHT ONE MONTHS AGO"

"It was a big surprise to me—the Ford V-8. I'd seen it on the road and heard some mighty fine things about it. But there was still a little doubt in my mind. I just couldn't believe a low-price car could be as good as that.

"Forget about price," a friend of mine said. "Things move fast in the automobile business and the Ford has stepped way out ahead. Look it over carefully and you'll see that it's different from every other low-price car. It's a new kind of car for Ford and for the whole automobile industry."

"So I decided to do the job right. I went over the Ford from bumper to bumper—studied every feature—took it out on the road and put it through every test I knew. Took my wife along, too, to get her views. And say—if you think I'm enthusiastic—you ought to talk to her! In every way, the Ford V-8 is far beyond our expectations.

Many other motorists—men and women—have said the same thing about the Ford V-8—"it is far beyond our expectations."

We'd like to have you drive it and see for yourself. Many distinctive features put the Ford V-8 in a class by itself in performance, comfort, safety, beauty and satisfaction.

FAIRFIELD, July 20—Thursday afternoon a party of 20 of interest in the Sawtooth national forest was conducted when J. E. Milner, district ranger, led a group of 18 interested persons from Fairfield to the Soldier ranger station as the first stop, where the new buildings were visited, and then to the Pioneer camp ground which is being improved through CCC labor.

Next a visit was made to one of the barriers which have been constructed in stream improvement work preparatory to fish planting, under the direction of S. F. Bergard, in order to make artificial pools in too swift streams which do not naturally provide shelter for the trout.

At the next stop, Big Mica CCC camp, 7-79, Lieutenant Jenkins, commander, explained the purpose of the camp and its various functions. Including the infirmary where extreme cleanliness is insisted upon. Mr. Atkinson, educational director, described the courses which are taught, and displayed the library which is available to the men. About 300 books are kept on hand, using traveling libraries, and a number of magazines.

Lieutenant Walker led the group through the large log mess house which has just been completed, and which will help solve the problem of keeping fresh vegetables, fruits and meats. This building is covered with a foot of straw and 2 feet of earth.

At 12 o'clock lunch was served in the mess hall to 35 guests and officers, demonstrating the skill of the cook and the efficiency of the mess officer. After this party, led by G. H. Ramage, camp superintendent, moved down the new road to the south fork of the Boise river. Here 14 holes were being prepared in a rocky path, and following the explosion, the party returned to see the effect.

A visit was made by most of the party to the Little Smoky Dredging company's holdings on upper Little Smoky creek where the superintendent, H. F. Beckler, led the visitors through the dredge, explaining its machinery and functions. Here a crew of 12 men, working in three eight-hour shifts, engaged in dredging to bed rock. The motive power is electricity, generated by a small power house on the site.

Members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pank, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pond, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gaskill, Clarence Barkley, and Mrs. B. J. Valentine's hospital in Wendell for Nucleoderm, Kalambuhl, 28, aged resident of Wendell who succumbed Wednesday evening following a lingering illness.

Here is True FARMALL POWER

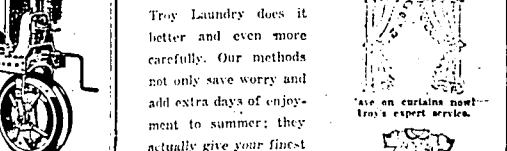

reduced in size, weight, and capacity to take over the power problems of tens of thousands of small farmers, and to serve as an auxiliary tractor on larger farms.

The tremendous success of the McCormick-Deering Farmall tractors naturally created a demand for the same efficient Farmall power in a smaller size. International Harvester engineers have produced such a tractor. The new McCormick-Deering Farmall 12 is the result. It has surprising power for its size. Weighing a little over a ton, it displaces four or more horses in field work. It handles all the operations in growing and harvesting all crops. Pulls a 16-inch plow bottom or two 10-inch bottoms. It is an ideal tractor for planting and cultivating corn, cotton, etc., the capacity on these operations being 25 to 33 acres a day. Wheels are adjustable to a wide range of row spacing. The Farmall 12 is ready to middle bust, handle heavy operating, pull a binder and corn picker, cut engine, grind feed, etc. Like every other Farmall, the Farmall 12 is a true all-purpose tractor. Ask us for full details as to specifications, equipment, etc.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Mark Albery, who employs both Rex and Laurie Moore, has learned from Gavin Drake that Rex and Laurie are not married, as they had told him. The deception originated because it seemed necessary so that Rex might hold his job. Now Laurie is telephoning Rex that she will have dinner with Albery. The difficulty is that both Rex and Albery are in town with Laurie, and she is in town with Rex.

CHAPTER 20 ATLANTIC FLIGHT

"And I have a message from Mr. Albery," Laurie went on.

"He wants you to go down to Fen Gratton for the week end."

"I can't do that," Rex said shortly. "I've got my friend, Alec Wade, from New York, spending the day. Sunday, I told you, I can't put him off. He sails early in the week. You can go all the same."

"Mr. Albery makes rather a point of it. He got someone he wants you to meet."

"Can't help that," Moore's voice was almost rude.

"All right, I'll tell Mr. Albery."

It was well after midnight when Laurie came in.

Rex was sitting over his maps.

"Is Gladys back?" was Laurie's first question. It always was.

"Yes, and gone to bed. You certainly have been working late."

"Gladys's working late the time. It was so late when we finished that Mr. Albery took me to the Elksote to dinner and we stayed on for the cabinet and a really good show."

Moore had been drinking around black coffee in large cups, which was very bad for his nerves.

"Do you think it wise to run around with Albery the way you do?" Laurie asked.

"I don't know what you mean. I can't refuse to work late when it is important. It's my job. Mr. Albery offers to pay me overtime, but I won't take it. He has done enough for me—and for you."

"I'm not suggesting that he should pay for your company. You haven't been far as that, I suppose," he retorted abruptly, with a steely glance from his grey eyes. "I merely wonder whether it was necessary for you to dine with him."

"You are insinuating."

"I am only suggesting that, under the circumstances, it would be wise, or a little while, not to be so close about so much with Albery. I don't like the idea of my wife being talked about as a girl secreted by her employer has taken a fancy to him."

Laurie went crimson.

"How dare you? What business is it of yours anyhow? I'm not your wife."

"You are supposed to be. You are living here with me as far as anybody knows, we are a normal couple. Of course, it is no business of mine."

"It is no idea you paid so much attention to my appearance. She was quivering with indignation."

"I don't like looking a fool," he answered brutally. "And with you supposed to be my wife, I'd rather you didn't get talked about."

"I know who's been talking!" she flamed. "Mrs. Steele. She was at the Roma the other day when I was lurching with Mr. Albery to take some notes from him when he was only up for an hour or two. I saw her watching me. Of course, she's jealous, because she's crazy about you and she thinks I am really your wife."

It was the man's turn to grow red in the face. Laurie had hit the mark. Rex had asked her to suggest to him very delicately that his "dear little wife" was perhaps being a trifle indiscreet.

"Back of it," Laurie went on, at white heat. "I'm going to quit tomorrow. You can say, I left you—or anything else you like."

But the next day there was another turn to the affairs. Moore spent the morning with Albery at Fen Gratton, and came back late in the afternoon, to find Laurie with her books.

"You can stop that," he said. "I'm off again. You'll be glad of me for a week or two. Albery wants me to try to lose the Atlantic record for the double crossing. He has heard that Bruce Merris is preparing secretly to make the flight, and he wants me to get in first. He says the Pacific can wait."

He was excited. He was going to unfold his wings again. He was good-humored, almost friendly.

"You don't need to turn out, do you?" he asked, with a touch of compunction in his voice. "I'm sorry I roused you yesterday."

She looked at him steadily.

"You need it would look bad if I left the flat? That it would be damaging to you?"

"I don't want until I come back—that's all I mean." He looked at her in the shamed face which he had when he asked her to do anything that he considered like a man, who knows he is in the wrong. "After all, I can't annoy you when I'm not home."

"All right," she said. Her face was forbidding because she had to blide a little tremor in it. "When do you start?"

"Tomorrow night — for Ireland. The weather looks as if it will hold."

Laurie turned away, putting her back to Rex. She did not come back to which she had taken them.

His spirit was already in the air. He was not thinking of her. He was thinking of the flat the next day until it was almost time for him to start. All day long he had been making his arrangements at Albery's private air field.

He found a tempting meal laid on the dining-room table, but Laurie was not in the room. She came out of his bedroom with the small haversack that he was going to take with him in her hand.

"Mrs. Budd is no packer," she said lightly. "So I packed your things myself. You'll have something to eat, won't you? I'm scrambling some eggs for you, like them, with mushrooms. I'll go and fix them now."

"Where is Mrs. Budd?" he asked.

"I sent her away. I didn't know how late you would be."

She disappeared into the kitchen.

When she came back with the dishes on her tray, Rex had changed into his flying kit.

"I won't have you waiting on me," he said angrily. "I can do all that myself."

"That's rather foolish," she retorted evenly. "I'm fond of cooking. Now, please, sit down and eat."

She poured him out a cup of coffee, with the thick cream that he liked on the top.

She ate very little herself. When she had finished the eggs, she offered him fruit and a special light sponge cake that she had made.

They hardly spoke. Laurie seemed to have something on her mind.

"Is it dangerous—this Atlantic flight?" she said at last.

He laughed.

"What ever put that into your head?"

"All long-distance flights must be dangerous."

"Do you know the most dangerous occupation in the world?" he asked, with the mocking smile at the back of his eyes. "The one with the greatest percentage of casualties? A plate-layer on a railway."

But Laurie was looking at him with a curious concentration.

"Rex, you're not using this new fuel, are you?" she asked.

"What on earth do you know about that?" he countered.

"I've had to do a lot of work in connection with it for Mr. Albery. It isn't safe, is it?"

He looked startled.

"Has Albery talked to you about it? Why didn't you tell me before?"

"Because I know it's a secret. Mr. Albery asked me not to talk about it. He asked me if you had told me anything, and I told him that you never discuss your profession with me. But I just wanted to know."

"Of course, I'm not using it. The tests aren't nearly satisfactory yet. What a funny girl you are! I say, I shall have to get a move on. Albery's car is coming to take me to the airport. He's coming with me."

"Why do you hurry on that, Laurie?" he asked. And then there came a reaction so violent that his dazed eyes actually turned pale. "I don't understand," she said, "but he told her she turned a white face to him.

"I'm sure—it's dangerous!" she said under her breath.

FIGHT ON NAMPA SUBWAY REVIEWED

Property Owners, Claiming Destruction of Values, Ask Injunction

BOISE, July 20—Plans of the state highway bureau for resumption of work on the Nampa subway, one of the highway projects for which a special session of the state legislature was called to consider, received a setback today when property owners along the site of the proposed subway filed suit in Ada county district court, asking a permanent injunction against the construction of the project.

The first court action against the subway, filed by the same plaintiffs, in April, was based upon two contentions that the subway would destroy property values of the plaintiffs' buildings along the route and that the state had no power to expend state highway funds within the corporate limits of municipalities of a certain size.

Leads to Legislation

Judge C. F. Koelich upheld the plaintiffs' second point and as a result the special session of the legislature was called to amend laws permitting such expenditures.

Yesterday the highway bureau instructed the James J. Burke and company of Salt Lake City, contractor for the $150,000 job, to proceed with construction and plans were made to resume operations Monday.

The suit filed today was based upon the matter of damages to the property owners.

Plans for the subway, the plaintiffs contend, call for an excavation 24 feet wide and with 14-foot overhead clearance which will shut them off from the open street.

They also call for a roadway 18 1/2 feet wide and with 14-foot overhead clearance with a seven-foot sidewalk.

The subway, the plaintiffs state, will be closed during construction, which will further jeopardize property rights and the project when completed will render their property "valueless."

HE'S MY HUSBAND

4. Malcolm Campbell Loves Speed, Adventure, Thrills

This is the fourth of eight articles discussing famous men from their wives' viewpoints.

By EDWARD J. NEILL (Associated Press Sports Writer)

The prospect who is no hero in his home town, the celebrity who is just a husband to his wife—have nothing in common with Sir Malcolm Campbell—Britain's wealthy master of the fastest speeds man ever has attained on earth.

Leaves Nothing to Chance "His love speed, adventure, thrills. He could never be content living the life of an ordinary business man unless for a time each year he did all the things he wants to do. I'm not sure he will do them. I never worry because there is no use in that."

"He is tremendously capable and thorough. He leaves nothing to chance. He is the only man in the world today who could do what he is doing."

For days at Dayton, when Sir Malcolm was running, Lady Campbell sat in the seclusion of the limousine, unable to stay with her friends in the box seats along the fastest section of the course without displaying her fears.

Every day, when he decided to try for the record, she dressed him in their hotel suite, almost as you'd dress a child. Everything he wore by her choosing, was blue, to go along with the Bluebird car—Mal-

During all the 15 years of their married life, Lady Campbell has been watching Sir Malcolm drive his racing cars at terrific speeds—and trying not to worry. She says he has promised to quit racing when he hits the 200-miles-an-hour mark, but she doesn't believe him.

chester's symbol of the unattainable. His socks, his underwear, his shirt, his suit—everything was blue, even to the scarf he knitted last around his neck. He wore a necklace of goodluck charms she gathered for him.

A typically British wife, she does about as he wishes and is content to subjugate her wishes to his. She likes dancing, and he doesn't so they don't dance. She likes to play cards, he doesn't, so she plays cards only at bridge parties in the afternoon.

He rises early each day, and when in London, drives some 200 miles to his insurance offices. They rarely go out at night. He spends most of his spare time tinkering with motors in a huge garage behind their estate at Porey Cross.

He calls anything set before him and enjoys it. Sometimes, when he feels slightly under the weather, he likes to be babied, and she enjoys that. Her whole life is wrapped up in him and her children, Donald, 14, and Jean, 11.

RALLY SUGGESTED FOR REPUBLICANS

Eastern Idaho Groups Propose 'Grass Roots' Convention

POCATELLO, July 20 (AP)—Republicans of seven eastern Idaho counties were awaiting the reaction today to a suggestion that a "grass roots" convention of intermountain party workers and leaders be held "at any time or place that may be arranged." A resolution to this effect was forwarded today to R. P. Parry, of Twin Falls, Idaho Republican central committee chairman.

Those present at a meeting here last night, including former Governor E. C. Moore of St. Anthony, mayors and officials of eastern Idaho towns, former state legislators and others, favored Salt Lake City as the most convenient location for the meeting to plan for G. O. P. reorganization in the intermountain area.

Methodists Plan Vacation Schedule Of Early Services

The First Methodist Episcopal church, at the suggestion of the new minister, Rev. Raymond S. Rees, is conducting early services during the remainder of July and through August, if the popularity of the services merits continuation.

Beginning this morning, the usual 11 o'clock Sunday morning service will be duplicated at 8 o'clock each Sunday morning. The same music and sermons being presented at both services.

"We hope to provide a worship hour in the cool of the morning for those who find it hard to attend in the heat of the day," Rev. Rees stated, in explanation of the new venture. "We are also aware that Sunday is the only day that many can spend with their families on outings. For those who wish to attend church preceding these Sunday trips, the invitation is 'Wear your outing clothes, bring the children for whom a story hour is provided, and be on your way to church with a renewed sense of God in your lives.'"

Copies of the resolution were sent to Walter Rubey, chairman of the Idaho Young Republican organization; Mrs. Beth Laubaugh, president of the Idaho Women's Republican League; and Ezra White, national executive committeeman.

Roy L. Black of Pocatello, Bannock county chairman and former Idaho attorney general, presided.

CAMPS FOR WOMEN LARGELY ATTENDED

Mrs. J. E. Hayes, One of Speakers, Concludes Engagements

Mrs. John E. Hayes returned last evening from Pocatello where she gave the first of a series of addresses to women's camps, sponsored by the Federal Agriculture extension division, and conducted in this state by the University of Idaho, under the supervision of Miss Marjorie Hepworth, of the extension division.

At both Pocatello and Lava Springs registration cards were mailed 400, according to Mrs. Hayes. Registration at Fish Haven was more than 200. Many of the women came more than 100 miles to attend the two and one-half day sessions, and a number, accompanied by their families, camped out in the woods and groves surrounding the camps.

The theme featured at camp this summer was "Home and Family." Mrs. Hayes spoke on "Human Investments," "Idaho Literature" and "Mothers' Leisure" at all three camps.

IMPRESSIVE RITES PAID MRS. POWELL

In keeping with the request of Mrs. Harriet Powell, wife of Allison B. Powell, simplicity marked the services held in honor of her memory yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the graveside in Twin Falls cemetery. A number of relatives were present from out-of-town for the rites.

The many friends of Mrs. Powell, including a number of young men, friends of her son, who had appreciated her companionship in past years, joined the family in paying tribute to her memory. Rev. H. J. Reynolds officiated. Two numbers were sung by Mrs. Herman Yarborough and Mrs. Henry White.

One of Mrs. Powell's hobbies was "being a pal" to her son's associates, and it was especially appropriate that six young men should serve as pallbearers. Pallbearers were Bob Stephan, Bob Bacon, James Dawson, Clyde Boughton, Opal Randall and Ellis Craner. Quantities of floral offerings bore messages of the esteem in which she was regarded.

She is survived by her husband and three sons, Milton Powell, Jr., Washington, D. C., and Jack Powell and Ralph Powell, both of Twin Falls.

Mrs. Powell died early Thursday morning at her home, 311 Fifth avenue east, victim of a sudden heart attack, which came without warning after she had retired.
