U. S. SKY DEFENSE PROGRAM APPROVED

System of Huge Air Bases Becomes Permanent National Plan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt's signature yesterday put into law a permanent national policy of bulwarking America's defenses with a system of huge frontier air bases.

A reservation that no funds to build powerful new army air centers would be recommended immediately accompanied Mr. Roosevelt's approval of the Wilcox air base bill. He made the stipulation Friday when he indicated he would sign the bill as matter of policy.

Representative Wilcox (D., Fla.), author of the measure, said that he needed $100,000,000 would be needed to construct new bases authorized and improve established ones. He hoped some of the money would be provided from the Public Works appropriation.

Six Strategic Areas

In creating new bases, the war department is directed to consider six specific strategic areas: the Pacific Northwest, Alaska, the Northwest, the southeastern states, the southeastern Atlantic and Caribbean area adjacent to the Panama Canal, and the Rocky Mountain region where a supporting base for trans-continental plane maneuvers and storage of supplies might be located.

In addition, intermediate bases are authorized to back up the frontier, most concentrated at the general headquarters air force and facilitate cross-continent flying.

A brief international flurry, bringing inquiries from the Canadian government, was prompted by a disclosure that Major General Charles E. Kilbourne, while assistant chief of staff of the army, had told the House military committee the provision for intermediate fields was "camouflaged" to allow locating a base on the Canadian border.

House members were quick to point out Canada has several bases within a hundred miles of the American boundary.

Young Hitchhikers Rescued On Desert

BRAWLEY, Calif., Aug. 14 (AP)—Their food supply and water exhausted as they hiked under a pitiless desert sun, two youths were rescued from possible death today by a Los Angeles Pacific freight train crew five miles east of Florence, Wyo., East Niland.

When noticed by trainmen, Russell West, 17, of Brawley, Illinois, was lying unconscious near the track. His companion, Jack Benson, 17, of Atlanta, Georgia, faint from lack of water, was trying to revive him.

The freight train halted and the pair was taken to Niland, where county authorities gave them medical attention.

The youths said they were hiking back home. They had been two days without food and one day without water, they said.

Loan Association Acquires Property By Dividing House

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 14 (AP)—Carpen's began dividing a house in two here today, in order that a loan company might take possession of a lot and part of the house under a mortgage foreclosure.

The house was built by the late W. M. Chadwick and his wife Fern. At the time of construction, the Local-Federal Savings and Loan association took a mortgage covering lot 16, block 35, Linwood Place addition, and the improvements on it. Later the Chadwicks added a 10-foot extension on the house which was placed on adjacent lot 15, which was not covered by a mortgage.

The loan company bought the house in at sheriff's sale February 10, and early in March District Judge Ben Arnold approved the sale and gave possession to the loan company.

A writ of assistance was issued June 4 directing the sheriff to evict the occupants of lot 16 and obtain possession of the loan company's property.

Deputy Sheriff Ross Biggers, sent to serve the order, reported that Mrs. Chadwick, now a widow, had mortgaged her possessions into the extension of the house built on lot 15, claiming that her move constituted vacation of lot 16 and the property on it.

So the company started today cutting the house in two to have profitable use of its property.

FIRE DESTROYS STORE BUILDING AT OAKLEY

BURLEY, Aug. 14—Fire Chief Seth F. Harper with five of his firemen of the local department responded to a call to Oakley Tuesday evening to assist in controlling a fire which broke out about 6:45 p. m. in the old John M. Price store building below the Worthington hotel on Main street.

The call for help came in at the local fire station about 7:15 p. m. when Chief Harper and his party left here within fifteen minutes with hose and equipment to reinforce the Oakley department.

Upon their arrival, the Price building had burned to the ground. The adjoining Triangle garage was, however, saved.

A chicken hatchery maintained in the Price building had all its equipment totally destroyed. So far as could be learned by Chief Harper, no insurance had been carried on either the building or contents.

The fire was of unknown origin, having started in the northwest corner of the Price building.

LABOR PEACE In one city alone—Cleveland, Ohio—in the last two years there have been five hundred seventy-eight strikes. In the first six months of this year seven hundred thirty two thousand working days were lost by strikers.

The theory of a strike may be good enough—its effort to improve working conditions. When it is an honest strike against bad conditions it gets a good deal of sympathy from the general public.

The strike as it appears to the average man today is one of those misguided efforts at making men or corporations share wealth which end by making everybody poorer.

DANGEROUS SAFETY An insurance company reports that more than half of the sixteen thousand industrial fatalities occurred in occupations generally classified as safe.

ACCIDENTS IN SUPPOSEDLY SAFE OCCUPATIONS must be largely preventable. They occur when the victim or some one else does some careless or absent-minded thing which need not have been done.

COMMUNISM GOES LIBERAL It is an astonishing thing when Pravda, newspaper organ of the Communist Party which controls Soviet Russia, declares that party should help maintain liberal democratic government in other countries where it still exists.

regard as the great foe of their own system. It seems to be a move against German Nazism particularly. If the new attitude is practiced in Europe to bulwark struggling small democracies, the result should be wholesome.

ICE CREAM CONES FOREVER

Another curious bequest, made in 1927, involves a long-range benevolence which is being carried out satisfactorily so far. The late Josiah Boyden of Conway, Massachusetts, established a trust fund of one thousand dollars in honor of his daughter, who died in childhood.

No one would begrudge a bunch of kids ice cream cones, and it is doubtless a good thing to encourage Sunday School attendance. For the sake of the trustees, however, it may be hoped that that particular church doesn't merge or close and that ice cream cones do not become extinct.

A PRICE ON SPIDERBREEDS

An Oklahoma town seeks to protect its youngsters from harm by announcing a bounty of 25 cents each for killing black widow spiders. This may work in a state where a quarter seems like small money to citizens in the habit of becoming millionaires by the simple process of being wealthy.

WUNDERKINDER (Portland Oregonian) A perennial in the news columns is the child prodigy; the current blooming is the story of a Utah boy of 13 who has an intelligence quotient of 208, which, scientists explain, means he is one in about 10,000.

The infant phenomenon, which Dickens termed "the baby in the bonnet," has been the subject of open-mouthed wonder on the part of his contemporary elders.

Parents in general, however, need not feel too utterly downcast if little Willie or Sallie shows no budding genius—or even appears to be rather "dumb."

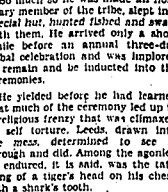

At the time when Mark Twain was editing a Western newspaper a merchant in the town wrote him asking whether a prodigy in his town would be an omen of good or ill fortune.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—Whippers of great bravery on the part of one of the most celebrated of the young men-about-town, Billy Leeds, continue to predominate from those outer fringes of the world known as the South Sea Islands.

He yielded before he had learned that much of the ceremony led up to a religious frenzy that was climaxed by self torture. Leeds, drawn into the maze, determined to see it through and did. Among the agonies he endured, it is said, was the fastening of a tick on his chest with a shark's tooth.

I had a glimpse of New York's notorious vice queen, Polly Adler, recently in court. She was the personification of the faded glazy lady, dressed in the Broadway smart, elegant, recking of beauty parlor ministrations and a voice with that thin tinkle that suggests cigarettes, raw gin and late hours.

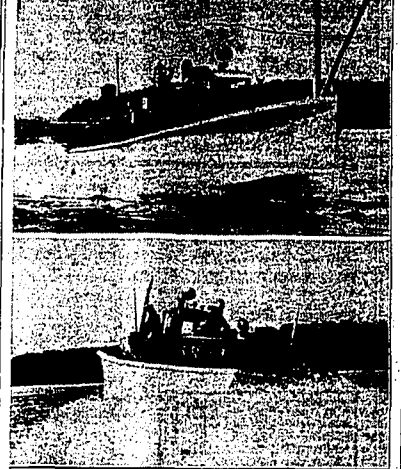

Jack Curley's wrestling matches bring out the most thoroughly masculine crowd the metropolis offers. They come to see a human massacre, and anything short of violent tortures inspires the roaring razz.

They were indulging one of those headbanging spurs at the curb edge near John Gould's home—embarrassed by an inability to get. From a bus top a smart yelled: "Change partners and do it all!"

Rare humor pops out around the prevailing ringtone in unaccustomed bluffs. At a recent bout when gladiators were locked in a cave-man struggle of eye-gouging and bone-breaking they suddenly fell apart in exhausted retreat.

The Dog From Missouri

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS) (Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

WASHINGTON By Ray Tucker WHIRLIGIG: You want find a clue to the New Dealism most annoying headache in the headlines these days. It's too sore a spot for them to discuss except among themselves.

But the President's closest friends are still up to the neck in the coordination among the fifty odd regular and emergency agencies tentatively assembled for the job. Mr. Roosevelt cannot manage all of them, and each ambitious subordinate goes ahead under his own steam.

DISCOVERY: Nature has dealt the Roosevelt administration some heavy blows. It has dashed out droughts, floods and blight. But now it seems that it's a dot storm which will cause some economic and political good.

Commerce experts have noted for some time that the country was going in for extremely heavy purchases of farm implements, automobiles and appliances.

Now weather bureau dolesters predict that the country is being destroyed or damaged vast stores of goods in homes, stores, factories and on the streets.

TAXES: Henry Ford, Calvin Coolidge's fellow traveler, is rapidly becoming the premier of the New Deal. He helped to destroy the NRA and now he may smash the administration's tax program.

Although the Ford, Fairer and Soederstroms are the mainstays of the Washington scene, their representatives have presented their views. They are holding out the possibility of unemployment which he would result from a 73 per cent inheritance duty.

With little trouble. For contagious diseases, the symptoms of which are the most annoying. But chronic troubles are often preventable if precautions are taken before the active symptoms appear.

NEW DEALERS SEEK CONSTITUTION TEST

Survey to Measure Sentiment For Broadening Powers Of Government

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP)—Soundings to measure national sentiment for a constitutional amendment broadening powers of the federal government were disclosed today to have been undertaken by Democratic strategists.

Informed persons said the survey was being made by neither the Democratic national committee nor the White House, but that results probably would be passed along to President Roosevelt before he leaves on his western trip in September.

They added that the results of the survey probably would have much to do with guiding the president's decision on whether to call the constitutional issue to his standard for the next campaign.

Cross Section Sought

There was some speculation in Washington over whether former President Hoover had not heard of these plans before issuing his Chicago statement. It is that he called upon the president to declare what he intended to do about the constitution.

Many partisans in widely scattered areas were said to be involved in the survey so as to present the rounded picture of the situation that the president has desired ever since the supreme court overthrew NRA.

At that time in his famous "horse and buggy" press conference statement, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he might take the question to the country by proposing a constitutional amendment which would give the federal government much wider powers upon which to base social and economic legislation.

Eyes on South

But there has been little talk of the question around the White House for some time now. Some published reports have said that the response to the president's original statement was lukewarm. Other such reports have said the matter depended on what other New Deal laws were discarded by the supreme court.

Advocates of such an amendment were watching closely for the reaction in southern states. States' rights have been a Democratic talking point in this area for years. They went to war about it once. Republicans have predicted that several southern states would desert the Democratic party in 1936 if it espoused greater federal powers.

Settlement Revealed In Tibbets Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 14 (AP)—Lawrence Tibbets, stage and screen singer, when he was divorced from the first Mrs. Tibbets in 1931, decided her family residence in Beverly Hills then valued at $48,000, and agreed to pay $23,000 annually until 1941, and after that time, when his two sons will be of age, $20,000 per year.

The details were made public today, over the protest of Tibbets, in an answer filed in a suit brought by Joy Chenoweth, assignee of Dr. Willis Jones, who seeks to collect $300 for treatment of a compound fracture of the wrist of his son, Richard. Tibbets sought to have the answer to the suit sealed so that the details of the property settlement would not be made public.

Tibbets, in answer, denied liability, setting forth that the settlement amply provided for the welfare of Mrs. Tibbets and her twin sons, both of whom are in her custody.

Oldsters and Youngsters Alike "In the Swim" at City's Pool

By Ruth Haller

A white-haired old man slips carefully out of the bathrobe and overalls covering his rather giddy red bathing suit, and proceeds across the pool with gentle, dignified strokes, a smile of enjoyment on his weatherbeaten face. A three-year-old, caged into safety by a heavy wire fence, rushes dashingly back and forth in water that barely reaches his waist, screwing up his face each time he is splashed and emitting periodical little boy shouts.

It is morning at the new swimming pool in Harmon park, and still so cool that the wind makes little triangular waves. But as the day and heat advance more and more bathers come in twos and fives and twentys. By mid-afternoon there are over 200 children in the pool, and little heaps of clothing and towels dot the grass for yards around.

Sun-bathers sprawl on the warm, tannish grass, and are greeted feebly and indignantly by players. They recline in groups on the grass, and perhaps linger to eat a picnic supper.

Showers 'N All

A line forms in waiting for the showers. The air is full of little shrieks and gasps, called forth by the first delightful shock of the cold water falling from above and sprayed expertly from a hose on the side.

The sun glitter off the green water into the eyes of spectators who sit, half-drooped, on surrounding benches, watching little Johnny's beautiful smile as he floats about, peacefully stretched out on an inflated inner tube.

"Come in, come in," the water seems to murmur to perishing spectators, somewhat to their astonishment. "It doesn't matter if you can't swim. No matter how motherly your suit looks you'll find another much warmer. And if you haven't one, wear a dress. Or your overalls. The prettiest child here all day afternoon was wearing a pair of slacks made from an old flour sack."

Chapter One REBELLION

HELEN Emily Felton was eight years old she ran away from home with the intention of joining a street carnival.

Her flight was not precipitated by neglect; at home she had every care and attention that a child of eight might expect or wish.

But the street carnival, which held forth on a vacant lot belonging to her father, seemed at a glance to be extremely gay and noisy and unrestrained, and Emily's home was none of these things. It was correct and luxurious, with a great deal of emphasis upon the loftier virtues, such as Duty to One's Parents, and Responsibility to the Poor.

Fortunately, or perhaps unfortunately, the owner of the carnival was not an opportunist. Instead of angling for a reward he immediately found out her name and conducted her back to the paternal roof.

Mrs. Felton was incredulous. "Emily; how could you possibly want to leave your beautiful home and go away with those dirty vagabonds?"

In view of his sporting conduct the evening of the carnival, she considered this a bit thick. He retailed:

"If you ask me, there's worse than dirt."

Francis Felton had the grace to look abashed, but his back was up. He continued his assault.

"Not being able to laugh, for instance, or to slip the least occasionally."

Mrs. Felton bridled. She felt that he was presuming upon the obligation she was under. "You see what happens when a child of eight does all the trash, as you call it."

"Now, this is what happens when you don't slip it occasionally."

Mrs. Felton's pretty chin looked stubborn. "I'm not the judge of that." She produced a bill and handed it to him. "I'm really very grateful."

He took the bill and looked at it thoughtfully. "I wouldn't take this," he said at last, with a disrespectful twinkle. "If your husband hadn't charged us too much for that lot."

"With that one brief bid for freedom Emily's career was spent."

"When Emily was sixteen she questioned college society, Mrs. Felton considered it judiciously with her husband."

"Ardmore is really an excellent school."

Mr. Felton considered it too. Besides being president of the soundest bank in northern Alabama, he was big and proud and twinkling; but he was no match for this wife.

"Ardmore's no pink tea," he murmured.

"I'd like to go to Bryn Mawr," Emily put in, knowing quite well that she would win where Francis decided to send her.

"But Ardmore has almost as high a standard, and it's near enough for us to see you ever week or so," Francis pointed out.

"That, Emily thought to herself, was the end of the matter. In Bryn Mawr, Bryn Mawr was twenty-four hours from home, and she wouldn't have that uncomfortable feeling that her mother was apt to drop in at any time.

Her mother was wonderful, and Emily had no intention of doing anything of which she might disapprove, but college was supposed to foster independence, wasn't it?

Francis Felton didn't think so. Her idea of parenthood was careful supervision until the day when she could commit her daughter, in a state of pristine innocence, to the arms of some fine, young man selected by herself. She was plump and pretty and deceptively soft; that type of woman who boasts of not cutting her hair or shortening her skirts because "John won't let me," thereby preserving her own illusion of complete submissiveness.

She expected to rear her daughter in the same illusion; to hand on the torch to a young man of unimpeachable morals. A decade ago there were a great many women of her type; it is probable that there always will be. And Ardmore was chosen as her daughter's Alma Mater.

The next fall Emily entered Ardmore. She was seventeen, then; slight and dark, with a small, exquisitely chiselled face that might one day flame into beauty. Mrs. Felton had selected her wardrobe carefully; excellent garments appropriate for a child of seventeen.

She herself had been married at seventeen, but the fact had escaped her mind, and Emily's clothes, although quite as expensive, were not at all those of a bride.

Her first acquaintance over the night before she left to say good-by. She had played tennis with Edwin on the Felton court; had gone swimming with him in the Felton pool; but he had never so much as held her hand. Although he would have enjoyed it very much, Edwin had no idea of grocery business; surely it required more aggressiveness than that. "And can I see you when you're at home?"

"Of course. You always have."

Edwin was discouraged. He rose slowly from the swing. "Well, you'll want to get an early start tomorrow, so I'd better be going."

At the door of his car he turned and took her hand. "I—hope you enjoy it a lot," he said unselfishly.

She saw in his eyes that he wanted to kiss her, and her small face was suddenly alive and vivid. "I'll try."

He leaned swiftly towards her, and Emily's lashes drooped over thing eyes. Then as swiftly he caught himself and stopped. He pressed her hand, but he didn't insist. That was the worst of Edwin; he never insisted. He put forth a request or a suggestion as tentative as an insect's wing, and at the first sign of opposition snatched it quickly back. Emily wondered idly about the ed in one of the greatest outdoor classics, "The Virginian," which opens an engagement at the Orpheum theater tomorrow. They are Gary Cooper, Walter Huston, Richard Arden and Mary Brian. Each has had phenomenal success in the years since the picture was produced, but their performances in "The Virginian," the first all-lalking outdoor picture, made these stars the favorites they are. "The Virginian," a novel by Owen Wister was first published in the 20's. It was rewritten for the stage and, as a play, it earned widespread renown. In 1929 Paramount brought "The Virginian" to the public in a new and more engaging medium—a medium that gave this romantic theme a Miller and a much more realistic treatment. The picture has been reviewed and its repeated successes in theaters all over the country have proven that it is still the great American classic. It follows the current Orpheum engagement of W. C. Fields in "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," which closes tonight.

Prosecutor Drops Criminal Proceedings Against Transient

A felony complaint accusing Jack Monroe, 33, Nevada transient, of attempted robbery at a local service station on the night of last June 27, was dismissed after a board of examiners in the probate court here yesterday found him to be insane.

As an alternative for commitment to the Idaho institution at Blackfoot, Edward Babcock, prosecuting attorney, said last evening, Monroe may be delivered into the keeping of relatives who are expected to arrive from California this week.

CANADA, IDAHO WAR ON HORSE DISEASE

Two Sectors of West Handicapped By Shortage Of Serum

WINNIPEG, Aug. 14 (AP)—Two sectors of the west, the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and southern Idaho, today were battling the spread of the dreaded horse disease with long name, equine encephalomyelitis. A shortage of serum brought worries to owners and state and government officials.

In central Washington state, Okanogan, Grant and Chelan counties have also reported an unusual "range disease" among cattle. State department of health officials said at Seattle today.

Between 250 and 400 horses have died in Idaho the past few weeks. Dr. M. M. McCoy, state field veterinarian at Boise, reported today.

Idaho has been at least 200 horses. Disease Subsidizing

Dr. McCoy said, however, that the disease was "definitely subsidizing" in the Idaho counties which had been most seriously affected, although it was reported to be "spreading eastward."

That's why you need Germ Processed Oil for safe lubrication—it maintains high film strength under extreme heat!

WITH heats of 225° to 425° in your motor, you must have oil that maintains high film strength under extreme temperatures to get safe lubrication. Otherwise, the lubricating film ruptures and the bearings and cylinders suffer damaging wear.

Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing processes have even less. As motor heat goes up, these oils rapidly lose film strength.

It's an absolute certainty that you'll get better motor protection with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. Timken machine tests prove that it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil and that heat above 225° does not lessen this advantage.

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

You'll be certain your motor is safely lubricated even at high temperatures if you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Germ Processed, the oil with the "Hidden Quirt" that never drains away!

In hot weather, your crankcase "runs a temperature" over 225°.
