WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Reports emanated from usually reliable Republican sources that Hoover is expected to be nominated for the next four months.

Temperatures High In Western States The great western high has begun to diminish in strength, but it still dominates weather conditions in most of the area east of the Rocky mountains.

These men contended that if Hoover disclosed his hand at this time, it would seal the nomination of candidates and when the Californian announced his favorite he would have support.

BACK TO SCHOOL

September Days Call for Crisp Lunches for School Children

Crisper days and the routine of school call for easily prepared, exciting lunches during this month. A substantial lunch that includes, at least, one hot dish, a soup or meat dish, and plenty of milk or hot cocoa will send the children back to school all pepped-up for the remainder of the day.

If it is necessary to pack a lunch for the students, a variety in the sandwiches and plenty of fruit help to make it more tempting. Freshness, obtained by the use of quantities of waxed paper to cover the food, is another asset to the school lunch box.

Here is typical lunch which can be prepared easily and which offers the variety of foods which school children need.

Split pea soup
Egg salad

Crisp crackers
Entire, wheat bread
Oranges
Cocoa

The following recipe is an easily made split-pea soup, (serves six persons).

1 cup split peas
1 ham bone or small piece of left over ham
1 carrot, sliced
1 onion, sliced
1 potato, sliced
4 cups boiling water
Salt and pepper

Wash the peas, cover with cold water; soak overnight; add remaining ingredients; cook slowly until the peas are tender (about 45 minutes). Rub through a sieve; season; if the soup is too thick add boiling water. Serve with tiny croutons.

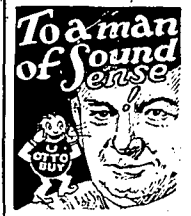

More Potatoes Than Any Other Vegetable Eaten By Americans

Vegetables, like people, can live down their early reputations. This is proved by no less an exemplar than our commonplace but dependable aid to economy, the potato, the common "bud" of the army kitchen which appears on the American table more often than any other vegetable. Potatoes are enjoyed democratically by all ranks and levels. They are served in the most expensive hotels, the cheapest lunch rooms, the wealthiest and the poorest homes. About four bushels a year per person is said to be the quantity the average American eats.

Cultivation, skillful cookery, abundant potato crops and low prices have brought this staple commodity to its present popularity. Its science lies in the popular taste, putting both white or "Irish" potatoes and sweet potatoes high in the list for nutritive value. Although it has a similar history and food value, the sweet potato has no botanical relationship to the Irish potato. It is native to tropical America, and is said to have been discovered by Columbus himself.

In food value the difference between the two kinds of potatoes is chiefly the much greater sugar content of the sweet potato, which contains also more starch. Each contains vitamins B and C, but the sweet potato has more than the Irish potato and is rich also in vitamin A. Both retain, when baked or boiled in their skins, more of their vitamin content than do most other vegetables, and both furnish some food iron and other minerals. Boiling, baking, or steaming are recommended as the best methods to retain the most food value.

When it comes to table uses, the Irish potato and the sweet potato have a different range of possibilities. For Irish potatoes, the range covers soups, main vegetable dishes and salads; sweet potatoes are usually considered suitable only for main vegetable dishes and desserts. After baked, boiled or steamed potatoes, the good cook thinks of mashed, fried, creamed or scalloped potatoes, or the half shell, baked brown, Obrien, or Lyonnais potato. Fried potatoes, of course, run the old-fashioned sliced raw potatoes fried in shallow fat, or they may be Saratoga chips, French fried potatoes in the fat, or french fries, fried in oil, or french fries, fried in oil, or french fries, fried in oil.

Peaches Transplanted from Persia Popular in America

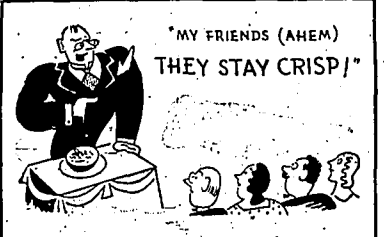

Come from Persia, the land of romance and Omar Khayyam, the peach has found its best growth in America, as well as a new use in salads. The fruit itself has been cared for and cultivated in this country since America now produces the finest varieties of peaches found anywhere.

Raw, cooked, in jelly, or canned, the peach is a universal favorite. And now that fresh peaches are plentiful during their all-too-short season, the housewife uses them every day in a salad, they are delicious. You never can tell until you try, and here are a few tested recipes especially recommended to the lover of the peach:

- Peach Flower Salad
2 large peach halves, peeled
2 packages of (onion) cream cheese
2 tablespoons real mayonnaise
8 short green pepper strips
Place each peach half in a shallow dish and sprinkle with sliced onion and lettuce. Thoroughly blend cheese and real mayonnaise. Outline each peach half with a green pepper strip and a slice of onion (forced through a pastry tube, garnish each with a tiny green pepper strip to represent the stem of a flower). Serve with additional real mayonnaise, thinned with a little whipped cream and peach juice. Serves 6.
- Minted Peach Salad
6 large peaches, peeled
1 cup lemon juice
1 bunch fresh mint
2 tablespoons whipped cream
Dash of salt
2 drops almond extract
1/2 cup real mayonnaise
- Place each peach half, rounded (cut up on a chop knife), on a white gently but thoroughly file in centers of peach halves. Sprinkle with almonds. Toast under broiler for one minute, or until delicately browned and puffed. Cool. Serve on crisp lettuce with additional real mayonnaise. Serves 12.

Green vegetable coloring.

COAL MINERS GET 'LITTLE-NRA' LAW

Discussion Turns on Source of Much Predicted Court Test

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—With President Roosevelt's signature on the Guffey coal bill, coal men disclosed at length tonight the probable source of the much predicted court test of the measure establishing a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry.

One prominent producer, who declined to be quoted by name, said that among those who sell coal in the commercial market sentiment for testing the bill's disputed constitutionality was rapidly waning. "The test, if any, he added, likely would come from "capitve" coal companies owned by rail and utility corporations. The entire output of these "capitve" companies is used by their owners, Council for these companies centered at learners on the bill that a tax on their production, such as the Guffey act provision, would be confiscatory.

The labor provisions of the act also are understood to be held in conditional favor by some of the "capitve" companies.

The bill provides for a tax of 15 per cent on the value of coal at the mine mouth, with a 50 per cent rebate on this tax for producers who observe the wage and hour schedules mandated under the boards established under the law.

Surrounded by members of congress who supported the bill, high officials of the United Mine Workers and Charles O'Neill of New York, chairman of the committee of producers who favor the measure, the president signed it into law at noon today.

The act was designed primarily to keep the price of soft coal at a point that would assure the industry sufficient income to pay its miners at least their present wage.

Last February, the United Mine Workers served notice on the industry they would insist on a 10 per cent increase in wages and a 30-hour work week in new wage and hour contracts to take effect April 1.

Threatening to strike unless their demands were met, the union obtained administration support for the Guffey bill, written in its original form by Henry Warrum, union educator.

Congress was slow to act on the measure, however, and Mr. Roosevelt had to obtain four extensions of the old wage and hour agreement before the senate and house finally approved the bill.

God always made Scotty forgetful, his infrequent, spectacular visits to civilization were marked by lavish expenditures—unlike any other man. His source of gold was a desert mystery.

"Now about the gold," his postscript reads. "I never claimed I had mine."

"I said long ago, and so do today. I knew of mine. I could get gold. I have about 700 thousand or near-around—that cashed away in the mountains. It is in the rock. So you can be prepared for hoarding. I have a miniature mill of my own. I can grind it up when ever I get ready."

"Why am I holding it? Because I don't know where I am at."

"The castle is in the scrap heap. I am just having fun."

"By the way, I have a lot of fire wood. I bought that railroad run from Dearty to Goldfield, 77 miles."

"I can keep 10 fire places here in the castle going steady day and night. I have about 150 thousand of railroad ties here besides the mine for heating and cooling the castle."

"If any of you fellows drift in, I can keep you hot or cold."

"Scotty."

Playing to capacity houses wherever they have appeared throughout the entire northwest, "The Oregon Loggers" give, without doubt, the most unique act of its kind on the road today. Each man in the troupe has seen service in logging camp, and excels in his part.

The performers are: "Hooker," manager and master of ceremonies, also an axe thrower, gives an act which in itself has thousands talked; "Two-Speed," an outstanding fiddle player; "Bull Cook," with a mighty guitar, "Punk" with a big accordion and plain and fancy harmonica playing, "Handsome Harry," a hillbilly yodeler, and "Olaf," with the Hawaiian guitar, banjo and tenor singing.

This group of entertainers has been playing some of the largest vaudeville circuits and radio stations and is considered a one hundred per cent "hit" stage show. They will appear at Uncle Joe's Roxy theater for three days starting Sunday. A splendid feature picture, "Lady Tubbs," starring Alice

MORNING STAR

SYNOPSIS: Emily Felton has found a little interest her in Edson after graduating from college. She has even lost touch with David and Judith Carroll, and the two have been very much in the line, trying to forget the loss of the beautiful Carroll plantation in hard work. Emily is rebelling against another year of hard-killing as the socially very worthy librarian at the Elton public library. She tells her father and mother she wants to go away.

Chapter 16

WORD FROM DAVID

"Where on earth would you go?" Frances asked.

"To Birmingham, perhaps. Anywhere where I could reach. I'm thinking Charlotte was still in Birmingham, eating it up."

"But what would you do?" Frances asked.

"Anything that came up. Newspaper work, perhaps. I can write pretty well." She felt chaffed at the compliment. "I could teach. An Ardmore diploma's quite a boost."

"Frances began to recover. 'I never heard of anything so absurd. Really to leave us—alone—and go off and live in some warren in a city. Without any experience at all. There's only one way to get experience. And that is to experience things.'"

"But Jeffrey was silent. He looked older now than before, and he looked for him. If only she could make them see her side of it! She was almost twenty-four and she wanted first to be free for a while, and then to marry."

And if she stayed in Elton there would be no chance of anything else; only Edwin, somewhere in the world there must be a man with a name and a girl with a stability—a man she could not only love but marry."

"But you couldn't say. 'I want to marry some day and there's no one here, but Edwin. And since the Lord helps those who help themselves I must get on and find someone.' You couldn't put it that badly, even though you knew, and they knew, that you spoke the truth."

"I did hope," Edna's voice had a plaintive note, "that after four years of college we'd have you at home in a while."

"But you have," Emily insisted. "Over two years."

"Frances appealed to her husband. 'I'll tell her to go,' she said. 'Even in the candle-light his face was white and drawn. 'We'd miss you, honey,' he said simply.

Her eyes burned with sudden tears. She loved him unbearably, even though she clung to the thought of independence like the drowning man to his straw. Knowing that she and the drowning man had the same chance. "But it isn't absurd, is it?" she pleaded.

"He said gravely, 'It isn't absurd.'"

"Frances gave up any pretense of being serious. "You're as ridiculous as Emily! You know how you've enjoyed having her here; how you've looked forward to it, and hoped that eventually she would break it. Emily knew the hope! It had to do with Edwin. And now you're taking her and suggesting that she go to some city and live like—a tenant worker!"

"I'm not," Edna said. "I know, Emily knew, within four or five years, his wife's convictions. 'I'd be lost without you, but her wanting to go isn't absurd and I'd see that she didn't live—like that.'"

"They rose from the table. Frances went stiffly out to give the servants orders for morning. Emily and Jeffrey, with their arms about each other, walked slowly towards the garden."

Emily stopped and faced him. "Would you really be lost without me?"

"He didn't answer for a long time. 'I'd manage—somehow," he said at last. "It had to come eventually. But his voice had broken as he spoke."

It was the break that did it. If there had only been six children, she thought, it would have been very different. But she was all he had, and she worshipped him. She flung herself into his arms and against the rough linen of his coat.

"I'll stay," he said. "I don't even trust myself to speak. He held her close and patted the back of her throbbing head."

The following week brought a letter from Judith, occasioned by the momentous news it contained.

"I was going to make another attempt to get my father out of the ditch," she wrote. "But Mother Nature, if you want to be cruel, has been very different. I'm finally going to have the baby—a boy. I hope named David after you. Goodness knows why they call it an interesting conversation. But I'll be glad to hear it. It's the best of the best minute I'm afraid I'm not."

WORK FROM DAVID

"Where on earth would you go?" Frances asked.

"To Birmingham, perhaps. Anywhere where I could reach. I'm thinking Charlotte was still in Birmingham, eating it up."

D. S. PRIMARY OF BURLEY HOLDS MEET

BURLEY, Aug. 30.—Homecoming of the D. S. primary department was held in the first ward church Thursday evening. About 100 children participated in the affair which consisted of acts, songs and dances. Similar programs were given at each of the nine wards in the city and were given for the purpose of showing the work and instruction along educational lines accomplished by the primary department of the various wards. Mrs. Vanette Holyoak was in charge of the program.

At the beginning of the summer season each child in the primary department was assigned a foreign land, to which an image was made to be studied and the customs of that land studied and as a climax the program as presented representing drama, songs and dances of the different countries, was to be given. Songs and dances as sung at given by natives of England, Norway, England, Scotland and the famous "Paddy Whack" dance of Ireland was given and the Sea Gull group presented an Indian ceremonial and dances. Ivan Judd, representing Uncle Sam led the whole group in singing the patriotic songs. Candy and ice cream were sold.

Pirates Scuttle Redbirds; Tigers Bow to Browns

Buccaners Register Ninth Consecutive Victory, 9-3

NATIONAL LEAGUE SCORES
Pittsburgh 9, St. Louis 3.
Brooklyn at New York postponed.
(Only National league games scheduled.)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 30 (AP)—The hold bad Buccaners of Pittsburgh again scuttled the league-leading Cardinals today, shooting the full complement of 14 hit attacks to win their ninth straight victory, 9 to 3.

The triumph put the four-pipe Pirates only six games behind the past leaders, whose margin over the idle New York Giants was reduced to a single game with their second loss here. It was the second time in the last three days that the Pirates duplicated Jim Weaver's Thursday feat of holding the Cards to seven hits. Floyd Hatfield, who pitched the first five innings, established a new Pirate record by belting out his 18th home run of the season and his 15th career. Hatfield cut for home, including a pair of timely triples, in five innings. Since Pittsburgh entered the National league as a 100-run team, it has had more than 18 homers in a year, only Glenn Wright and Max Baer of Cincinnati had made that mark.

Box score for Pittsburgh vs St. Louis. Includes batting averages, fielding percentages, and totals for both teams.

Tailenders Smother Detroit Rally to Triumph, 8-7

AMERICAN LEAGUE SCORES
St. Louis 8, Detroit 7.
Boston at Philadelphia postponed.
(Only American league games scheduled.)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30 (AP)—While the rest of the American league idled, the St. Louis Browns upset league leader Detroit 8 to 7 by stopping a related Tiger drive after staging a late inning rally of their own.

After overcoming an early handicap, Rogers Hornsby's bullpen broke a ball deadlock in the eighth with two runs when Hoggott, who replaced Tommy Bridges, pitched the midgets and filled the bases with two walks and a high throw to first. Hoggott scored after Julius Gotter's long fly—and later—followed him home when Pepper singled.

Box score for St. Louis vs Detroit. Includes batting averages, fielding percentages, and totals for both teams.

EXPERT ADVISES WHITE FLOWERS

Suggests Perennial Phlox as Background for Bright Colors

"Few gardens contain white flowers," says Mrs. Laird, Jerome, Id., in this garden tour. "Perennial phlox just year at the Ascension Guild Flower Show."

"White tends to harmonize discordant groups in the garden well as to bring out fine contrasts in vivid coloring, and white phlox is indispensable in an amateur garden, as it furnishes greater profusion of bloom and a greater variety of uses than any other hardy white flower."

Mrs. Laird states that the perennial phlox is a hardy plant, easy to grow, if we give it rich, well fertilized soil, plenty of moisture and good drainage. It will thrive in any location, either open sunshine or partial shade, although she says, "the plants in her garden given the best blooms are in full sun."

"Some varieties grow to a height of six feet and produce a solid mass of bloom, although the average height is about four feet. The plants require very little special care as they are subject to fewer diseases than are most garden flowers. In this section, sometimes the lower leaves blight, due to lack of iron, but this condition is readily remedied by Mrs. Laird tells us that the roots increase rapidly and may be divided every three or four years, but that the plants continue to thrive without much division. Root division is considered better for starting new plants than growing from seed, as the seed seldom come true to color, however, interesting varieties may be developed in this way."

Mrs. Laird expects to exhibit this year at the Ascension Guild Flower Show next Saturday, September 7, in Twin Falls.
