Idaho Auditor Balks At Lawmakers' Claims In Deals With State

Parsons Takes Stand On Miller's Interpretation

(By The Associated Press) BOISE, Nov. 8.—Harry C. Parsons, state auditor, declined tonight to honor two state legislators' claims for a total of $460 on the grounds that the lawmakers, J. M. Sharp of Boise and Dan J. Cavanaugh of Twin Falls, and five other state officials, regarded a law which prohibits members of the legislature from contracting to sell material, equipment or services to the state.

Parsons counted his decision a few hours after he had received a memorandum opinion "he had requested of Attorney General Bert H. Miller.

Claim for Trucks
Sharp's claim was for $100 in payment of two 1934 1/2-ton trucks which he had sold to the state department of public works after he had received $300 monthly rental from the state for two months. Sharp had been paid the $300 rental before the purchase order came in.

Cavanaugh's claim for $160 was for corrugated pipe, connecting bands and services rendered to the state highway department. It had not been paid.

The two claims, or vouchers, were certified by O. K. McKeever, state auditor of public works, and J. H. Stenitzer, state highway engineer. The Sharp claim was approved by Lewis Roberts, state highway engineer, and Cavanaugh's claim was approved by A. D. Bishop, director of the state highway department.

The vouchers were accompanied by purchase orders signed by William E. Abernethy, state purchasing agent.

Call for Restoration
After he had received the "advice" of the state auditor, Parsons' decision was announced on page 2, col. 6.

Several Members of Colorado Collegiate Party En Route to Salt Lake City Suffer Minor Injuries

(By The Associated Press) HOT SPRINGS, Colo., Nov. 8.—A special 10-car train carrying 176 University of Colorado football team members and faculty jumped the tracks a mile and a half west of here tonight, piling engine and eight cars into a heap.

There were no serious injuries reported, although several members of the Colorado party were said to have suffered minor injuries, largely bruises and abrasions.

Members of the train crew on the wrecked train were taken to the Moffat line said the tracks spread suddenly. They attributed the accident to some "apparent obstruction on the rails."

The train was due in Salt Lake City early tomorrow. Teams of Colorado and Utah universities clash there tomorrow.

Summons Ad
Mark Schreiber, of Colorado State University, president of the University of Colorado newspaper at Boulder, ran a mile and a half to the station here to give alarm and news.

"It was riding on the observation platform with about 10 others," he said. "The train stopped with a jerk and there was a rumble and the screen of full-on cars. We were almost thrown if by the force of the accident."

He said the engine and eight front cars left the tracks, leaving the rest cars undamaged. The carrie crew of college students were singing and dancing in several of the cars which were being thrown to the stop from a rate of 45 miles an hour.

In a dining car which had no windows, the train crew were taken to the station here to give alarm and news.

Island Army Officers Disclose Thwarted Scheme to Provoke Intervention and Start Revolution

(Copyright, 1936, Associated Press) HAVANA, Nov. 8.—An unimpeachable source disclosed tonight that a "master plot" to assassinate Ambassador Caffery, United States ambassador to Cuba, had been thwarted by intelligence operatives of the Cuban army on the eve of its execution.

Reliable sources said army officials were convinced the plot was hatched with the recent arrest of General leader of the confederation of labor.

Guide To Wives Whose Husbands Won't Carve

With Tact and Few Simple Rules of Carving Your Turkey Will Be Served Properly

Is your husband the sort who "all cut up and panicky" when you suggest that he carve the "festive bird" at the table for Thanksgiving, Christmas, or even Sunday company dinner? If so the annual argument has already started and if he does, the bird is sure to fly off the table and land in the dining room rug. Well, what do you say about learning to play the turkey against the side of the bird? Now that he's learned the rules, you can't keep him away from a game where there's a chance at his taking the bird. Just as you put the contact first position, lay the leg flat on the platter or a convenient side knife and for all that carving, you'll be as easily mastered. With the proper carving tools, and a few simple rules, he'll speedily become an expert. Two of three sharp knives are a strong two-pronged fork, a sharp carving knife, a will to learn, and of course, Mrs. H's assistance. The master of the house is ready for the battle. It is always well to sharpen the knives on the steel in the kitchen before each meal, then a very calm carver can sit before his task with full confidence. Famous chefs are responsible for the following suggestions concerning the carving of roast chicken or turkey.

Whip cream until stiff. Beat in honey. Honey Brand Maltine 3 tablespoons shortening 1/2 cup honey 1/2 cup buttermilk (or sour milk) 1 egg (well beaten) 1 cup prepared bran 1 cup flour 1 teaspoon soda 1/2 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 cup shortening and honey. Add milk, egg, bran and let soak until most of the liquid is taken up. Stir dry ingredients and add to first mixture, stirring only until the flour disappears. Put greased muffin tin two thirds full and bake in a moderate oven (425° F.) about 25 minutes. Yield: 12 small or 8 large muffins.

Recipe Suggestions Offered for National Honey Week, Nov. 11-17

During the week of November 11 to 17 honey will be very much in evidence. You will see it in window displays counters when you go marketing. You will find it on the menu, if you dine out. You will hear about honey—over the radio and read about it in your daily newspaper and magazines. If you carefully note all that you hear and see about honey, you will be surprised at the variety of appeal. These range all the way from the romance of a food which comes direct from the nest of flowers and the epicurean delight of its flavor to the practical considerations of honey as a sweetening in cooking. Although honey easily takes the limelight as a star with hot breads or waffles, it really comes into its own behind the scenes in cookery processes. Honey adds flavor to bland foods, such as cereals and breads. It adds zest to baked hams, gingerbread and foods of rich flavor. It holds moisture in breads and cakes; keeps fruitings and syrups from sugaring; is a quick mixer as sweetener in cold beverages, or in waffle and cake batter. Here are recipes to help you observe National Honey Week and for your life's year round.

WHAT OF IT?

Ameja Earhart, dean of women flyers and perhaps the most successful of all feminine pilots, appears to have stirred up quite a hornet's nest in championing the cause of Miss Helen Richey who recently gave up her job as an air transport co-pilot because the line which employed her decreed that she should do most of her piloting in fair weather.

In other words Miss Richey might pilot passenger planes at all times except when weather conditions warranted extra precautions for the safety of plane and passengers. When this occurred men pilots were to be used.

While sympathizing with Miss Richey that other women flyers cheerfully admit that there are times when the operation of transcontinental passenger planes calls for the exercise of a good deal of physical strength. To pilot a single passenger plane or to fly alone is one thing; to successfully handle the new and heavier types of ship with a passenger-load of from ten to twenty persons is quite another.

Miss Richey may be just as capable as any man in any and every branch of the whole business of aviation but, should emergency arise, the average passenger would probably feel just a little bit safer with a man at the controls. Miss Earhart cannot change this nor can any other woman but the fact is no more a reflection upon the feminine sex than it is the further fact that women, in addition to having smaller hands and feet are as a rule less muscular than men.

There are many fields in which women excel but it is just barely possible that flying heavy passenger planes is not one of them.

OPTIMISM

The world has been full of pessimism lately. Here is something on the other side. Rev. Sidney Meyers of Baltimore tells a church convention that more of us are beginning now to envision "a world of joyful and contented people, in accordance with the rich provisions of the visible cosmos, which provides every useful and necessary thing for the needs and comfort of mankind."

"The harvest of evil comes to our attention every day," he admits. "It is a part of the universal experience. But let us not forget that the good also comes to harvest. This is never advertised. It is the treasure which comes to those noble and faithful men and women who perform their duties in the love of being useful, and who exercise charity and tolerance."

TEACHING TRUTH

"There is one form of authority in a democracy," says Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist-Episcopal Church, New York City, addressing a teachers' association, "to which we all must pay heed—namely that of the man who knows: Chief Justice Hughes once said: 'One of the final tests of democracy's power to survive would be its willingness to pay attention to the decisions of experts.' If this is true, one function of the public schools is to train pupils in respect for the scientific method. The pupil must be taught to discriminate among the claims of experts, but in all this he must have a background of thorough respect for the scientific method."

"There are some forces at work today which stand squarely across the claims of experts. We can find illustrations for our purpose in the various types of demands made for instruction in our public schools." He refers especially to a demand made for a while in the New York schools, "that American history should be taught solely from one point of view, namely that of assumed superiority of the United States, in every respect, to every other nation on earth." How far from the truth such instruction would lead a pupil, he adds, "is apparent at a glance."

Nearly all Americans agree on the general superiority of their country to other countries. But it is hardly possible that any country, even our own, should be better in every way than any other country.

Any nation committed to such supreme egoism, and teaching it to children as a patriotic religion, would probably fossilize and deteriorate, because it would no longer learn anything from other nations.

STATESMEN'S SONS

President Roosevelt may be embarrassed from time to time by the let us say, spirited behavior of those energetic sons of his. But look at the way Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain, is put on the spot.

Mr. Baldwin is about as conservative as Mr. Roosevelt is liberal. While Baldwin has been campaigning for more political and naval power, with a free hand in the Mediterranean and everywhere else, his son Oliver, running for Parliament as a Labor candidate, is making speeches saying:

"To hear some people talk, I should say they wanted one hundred fifty battleships. I know the working classes do not need big navies. It is their rulers who want the big navies, to protect their lives and their money."

But papa doesn't spank Oliver. The British "governing class", whatever their defects, are pretty good sportsmen.

DISTINCTION IN VALOR
(Lewiston Tribune)

Each year the Carnegie here fund awards some two score medals in the United States in recognition of outstanding acts of personal heroism. Like the Victoria cross, these medals come more than average value. One who gets it this year is Gilbert D. Lyle, 13-year-old high school student at Lapwai.

Gilbert was visiting at Moscow last fall when a young girl rode her bicycle upon a railroad track in front of an onrushing train. Stricken with fear, she stalled her wheel in the face of imminent death. The Lapwai youth, approaching the crossing did not head the train. He saw the peril of the train he grasped the bicycle's handlebars and pulled it and the girl to safety as the locomotive cleared the rear wheel.

There was no thought of heroism in Gilbert Lyle's mind and the public did not know of the incident until a bystander wrote of it in a letter to the Tribune.

"When I talked to the boy he was unassuming and just what was glad to be of some help," this informant wrote.

Such cases as this lead to wonder: as to what qualities make a hero. Why should Gilbert Lyle be so distinguished? He knew was dangerous to save the life of an unknown girl? He might not have saved her. Her life might not be worth the pain as much as his. She had gotten her hair in this plight, and no responsibility rested upon him to risk his life.

All these things would have weight in any logical balancing of the chances of success. But if logic prevailed, the record of humanity would not be starred with golden deeds of heroism. We should guess that not one of these "sober second thoughts" had a place in Gilbert Lyle's mind. If you had a chance to save someone that was the thing to do. If you thought about yourself, you'd be too late, people who act that way take chances, and sometimes they lose. But when they win they are in better company all through life—even when they are alone.

Young Gilbert Lyle probably will claim heroism, even when it is thrust upon him. But the Tribune would commend his achievement as good reading for the man who has no time for the stigma and steadfastness in the rating generation.

THOUGHTS ON GUNPOWDER
(Omaha World-Herald)

Tradition has it that the inventors of gunpowder were the Chinese. Now a nation with such killing power in its hands could have become a supreme tyrant and shake the feet of the most destructive advantage. It could have gained territory in far places and imposed its civilization as ruthlessly upon the rest of mankind as did Rome in its glory. The Chinese didn't do it.

There are two ways of looking at the result. Some may gaze at China, a prostrate giant, apparently now at the mercy of the much smaller empire of Japan, and shake their heads over a people who had such an mighty force within their grasp and failed to use it against other lands. What principally fascinated the Chinese about gunpowder was the noise. Instead of using the power in weapons to kill other people, the Chinese fashioned it into firecrackers, to be used principally in celebrating New Year's and in paying delicate tribute to one's ancestors.

Sometimes, when one compares the use of gunpowder for killing and its use in shrewd worship, one is inclined to think that the Chinese were wiser, and more decent than the rest.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—It's 4:15 p. m. and a messenger from the Times is returning with a copy of the paper to deliver this column to a syndicate square office by 5 o'clock. It will not appear in print. Who will look at a minor worry to readers but today's night for me.

Not in 20 years have I ever been left at the post and I won't be today. To make it tougher, I had a page of notes in my pocket that I had written, that I had cleaned this morning and the servant who took it is gone for the day and I don't know the cleaner's name.

I deleted this chore because I thought it would be a cinch with these notes. My opinion of John O'Hara's book, "Bitterfoot," will get out. A few lines. Written to shock the reader. And after 70 pages I opened the window and sent it out to the night garbage man. He thinks it's swell. Or perhaps awful.

This writing against time is somewhat a Mackay and Devant trick—making things appear out of thin air. A way of the night garbage man. He thinks it's swell. Or perhaps awful.

One may always refer to these common cliches. Chucking in a common shilling sentence that makes different meanings. Thus: "Woman, without her, man would be a savage." And: "Woman, without her, man would be a savage." And what modern writer touches for grandeur the Biblical description of the death of the "depression" the year the local habit?

An "I" notation comes to me but the source I cannot recall. A fellow in early 30s on a honeymoon open trip. In the brilliantly lit dining room the second night out, he suddenly grabbed his bride's hand and said: "You're alarmed." The whisper: "They will have those lights fixed in a moment. They often go out with the roll of a ship." She asked what in the world he was talking about. Then he realized. He had been suddenly stricken blind.

My dining room of suspicion elicits when strangers on train, aboard ship, or indeed anywhere, begin conversation without introduction. Especially when they over-flow with information. I sat next one at Mute Hall. He chattered amicably at the intermission and became a little more talkative and successful as the Blue Train in caustic tone as a Washington and was unnecessarily glib. A half block from the theater a torch on the arm. My amiable friend, "I think you dropped this," he said. It was a silk muffler, a gift of sentimental value. Before I could thank him he was gone and I stood a fool.

Guiding Your Child

By ALICE CLARISSE RICHMOND

COMMON OWNERSHIP

Walking along the street one day Mrs. Brown saw a small girl in front of her carefully toss an empty candy box into the gutter. Mrs. Brown's first instinct was to catch the child and make her pick up the box and put it into the nearest rubbish container. She thought better of this and going up to the child remarked in a conversational tone:

"Do you toss your papers down on the floor at home or put them in the waste bin like this?"

The little girl looked surprised, but replied, "In the waste-bait."

"Then why don't you do the same thing on the street? It's your city, you know, and they are your streets. They don't belong to the police of the mayor, but to all of us, and if I don't keep them clean, we have to pay some one else to do it."

As Mrs. Brown went on her way she glanced back and saw the little girl picking up the candy box and looking about for a suitable place to throw it.

"Too many rules lead to lawlessness. The children come to feel that the world is run for and by the people who make and enforce the ordinances against walking on the grass, mutilating trees and shrubs, destroying public property, looting rubbish on the sidewalks and parks. If schools and parents, instead of insisting on blind obedience to regulations would try to foster the sense of common ownership and civic pride in the youngsters, there would be far less juvenile vandalism.

It is natural for children to try to outwit and defy the policeman. If the parent can do most of them, respect the parks and streets, they are at liberty to do what they like if they do not get caught. This is especially true among the foreign-born who come from countries where paternalism has done away with much self government.

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

VULNERABLE Military experts share their heads as they trace the danger—energy—stock—creating through Ethiopia. Privately they predict it Duce's troops will not reach Addis Ababa before the rainy November. The expert claim is halting all operations for seven months.

Students take all claims of Italian gains with a generous helping of salt. They dismiss General Graziani's air raids in the south as side-show "fronts."

There eyes are fixed on the three northern columns. The invaders made only thirty miles the last week. Now they face 400 miles of rocky, mountainous and jungled terrain. Lengthening lines will offer ideal targets for Ethiopian bombers treating with tantalizing deliberation. Experts don't anticipate a real battle the Italians have been allowed to penetrate about 200 miles.

Great Britain's attitude places Mussolini in a jam not generally unshared by Hitler. The "how" which way to turn. If he pushes ahead, and then is forced to relinquish a vast territory, he has lost. If he retreats, an undermining loyalty of soldiers and people. But if he decides to bluff it through, he has delisted the British. He plunges the more vulnerable he becomes to sanctions and blockades. Though he can't force the Adowa-Adigrat line because he hoped for a way out—and had it. It was dove to penetrate as much as military considerations.

GUESSERS "American" willers guesses attached to the belligerents expect to pick up valuable information. The fact that a complete picture of the Italian general explains why the United States asked for orchestra seats at a conflict for the first time since the start of the World War.

On the Italian side our staff wants to know the location of the Goch Logistics. It's the science by which a nation builds roads, which nations build roads, and which nations build roads. It's the science by which a nation builds roads, which nations build roads, and which nations build roads.

Not since the conquest of the world by the Axis powers has there been so much news of mobilization of world opinion against his venture. General divisions from the north are reported as committed. With almost every conservative Democrat arrayed against Washington, it is scarcely necessary to say that the Supreme Court may be filled by those youngsters if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected. That's the inside prediction.

SYNOPSIS: Anne Parneworth saves Nikki Nielsen, a member of the fishing club at Twin Falls. Instead of one helping the other, she is kidnapped. News of the kidnapping has compelled to reduce her to her present station—she is being "rescued" to have her help for such a man as John Newman. At any rate Anne hopes to do what has been done for Tom Parley to turn her on as a villain, and what the trouble is in the Parneworth corner. She is working on the boat she has bought for the Rorki boys, and living with "Lime," their aunt.

Chapter 30 FARLEY MAKES TROUBLE

Annie only scolded the growing unrest at first, for John had warned her that she would be sorry for knowing the truth of things. It is possible for her own safety. At first she was content only with delight in her growing knowledge and increasing strength. The film body was rousing her skin and her face was glowing. Her lips flared with scarlet. The mop of curls cut short so they could be pushed under her cap, were the color of sage honey.

Ann then, as she found bed of "evening-primrose" she began to notice a change in Lime. She would come in worn out in spirit as well as in body.

"Lime," said Anne one Sunday, "can't you tell me what's wrong?"

"I don't know," the woman admitted, "of course I have more work with this run, but it's something else, something in the air, things aren't harmonious like they were when Mr. Lake was alive."

"What things, Lime?"

"Oh, I don't know, Tom Parley's relatives, the place he works, the way they act, they all seem to be with them and they all want to boss. If I hadn't worked there seventeen years I'd try to find another job."

Tom Parley. At the mention of that name, Anne retreated to her corner, enveloping the books and while memories of the past troubled her—her face had a look of judgment. The outcome of his investigation, though she had heard nothing much from the fishermen. She sensed trouble, rather than fear. It was a question, a question, a question with Rob Crocker, and the two women's lives up as they were.

"Lime," said Anne one Sunday, "can't you tell me what's wrong?"

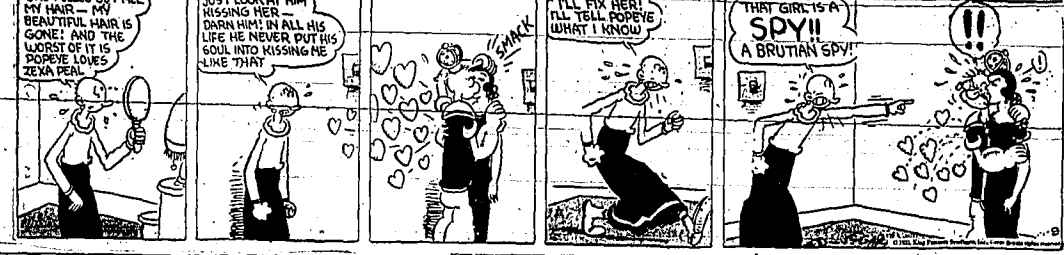

"I don't know," the woman admitted, "of course I have more work with this run, but it's something else, something in the air, things aren't harmonious like they were when Mr. Lake was alive."

But on the cruiser came. Anne looked at George, he was standing still now, like a statue. Orvi, too, seemed numb, only the men in the nearby skiffers were bounding their loudest whistles. The boat cut in between two buoy lights. "On the bridge, he did it," cried Orvi, suddenly articulate. As the buoy lights were drenched. And now to the dim was added the sound of the engine as the boat lurched. "He's agitated," said Orvi, and then he broke into Finnish and, with a understanding, longed to join him. A man came out on the life deck, and started "drunkly," then ascended himself and drove boltly at the crew of the Nikki; at all fishermen who cluttered up the way and thought they owned the whole Pacific.

Orvi, shivering, looked at him. One thousand dollars was the value as the man swung over the side, splash at the water with a blade. "You bet, he can't do that to our!"

Other voices joined from nearby boats and Anne caught occasional words, "Follow waiting for the Parneworth crew." "Gork's brothers won't stand a chance of having it made good."

The powerful engine of the boat started its hum, strangled, stopped. It started again, choked. Then after a time the performance was repeated, then suddenly it started towards the skiffers.

"Parneworth and his crew," said Anne, "they're all dead!"

The man who had slashed the net, Tom Parley, sobbed now, started at her, but he raised recognition. "The skiffers tipped with the weight of their own as they veered by, and Anne sang to the floor of the boat."

There was no use staying long on the river. Anne looked at the dangling net as George drew it up by it. The great gash slashed in it had reached the fish. Only a few were entangled in it, as George said, "Like all, it," murmured Orvi.

They turned back to Orvi. Tom with scarcely a word spoken, between them.

George broke the silence once.

South Bend and Berkeley Battles Headline Program

Heavy Casualties Forecast as Big Outfits Compete

By ALAN GOULD (Associated Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The college football war breaks out again tomorrow with major units facing nearly every big national front. Central interest will focus upon the attempt of Notre Dame's injury-riddled forces to sustain their sensational winning streak against the University of California.

Heading for their first setback campaign since 1920 as well as the Rose Bowl, Notre Dame's leaders figure to make it seven in a row despite the loss of several starters, including Andy Adams. The team has been described as "definitely overhyped" by Northwestern's coach, and Notre Dame is expected to be knocked out of the Irish jinx.

Four Run Risk
Of the remaining major aggressions among a total of 30 teams, only three other than No. 10 in this year's spectacular gridiron warfare, at least four run the risk of being annihilated.

California's Golden Bears, peacocking on the Pacific coast, are expected to be the first to be knocked out of the unbeaten ranks.

Minnesota, fast gathering momentum despite consecutive defeats, has too much power for Iowa in the Big Ten's outstanding game, but Ohio State will be a threat to the Gophers.

Princeton's powerhouse and North Carolina's high-scoring offense are both making headlines for national honors, do not figure to have serious difficulty disposing of the other Virginia States, respectively.

Nebraska Favored
Three other outstanding games on tomorrow's program are scheduled on sectional titles. Nebraska is the choice to beat Kansas and take over the Big Six leadership. The outplayed overpoker Colorado and take undisputed possession of the Rocky Mountain crown.

Mississippi State, playing at home, may have a shade over Mississippi State in the day's main Southeastern conference engagement, but the Mississippians figure to give U. S. G. a terrific battle.

Way of demonstrating that it doesn't necessarily take an all-conquering team to beat a power like Pennsylvania and Navy, each the victim of three defeats, battle it out Franklin D. Roosevelt's undefeated turnout of 70,000 at Philadelphia is said to be the largest in the world.

All told, upwards of 250,000 will witness five stand-out games, including 50,000 at Army and Pittsburgh, 40,000 for Fordham and St. Mary's at the Polo grounds and 30,000 for the Princeton-Harvard match. Six hundred thousand are expected to witness the game at South Bend for Notre Dame-Northern.

50,000 Berkeley
On the west coast a crowd of 60,000 is predicted for the all-important California game at Berkeley. The Red Devils will have 40,000 more witnessing Southern California's Trojans and the Army's Big Red.

St. Mary's, beaten only by California this year, looks to have sufficient power to turn back Fordham in the day's most colorful inter-sectional contest.

Fans Make California 10 To 8 Favorite Over Washington's Huskies

(Associated Press Sports Writer)
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Elected in the tradition of thirty years of inter-collegiate football classics takes at the added thrills and chills of a great championship struggle tomorrow in the annual showdown tilt that pits University of Washington at the University of California.

To the bright frontiers of their own Memorial stadium, the undefeated United States will defend top position in the Pacific coast conference race against a Washington team one beaten but no formidable in any one section.

Washington's only loss was to Stanford and the winning score was made possible by two field goals. California's three conference victories were by a 10-0 margin. Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Seasonal records of the two teams would indicate Washington has been more impressive in victory than California. But California, without being spectacular, has done everything else the most critical could ask. Not much in the way of rushing, but the Bears put up a powerful attack has been necessary because of a rocklike line.

Washington will present speedier backs than California and in addition has a fancy passing attack unrivaled in the Pacific Northwest. The Bears put up a powerful attack has been necessary because of a rocklike line.

Some 60,000 spectators are expected for the game with fair-weather fans from California and 4 by U. S. A. Washington has yielded 13 points, six by field goal and seven by kicking.

In conference play, California had only nine points scored against Washington, but by Stanford and by U. S. A. Washington has yielded 13 points, six by field goal and seven by kicking.

Oregon State college, a sophomore-manned team, will tackle the task of making a comeback in the year's "civil war." Not highly rated at the start of the season, Oregon State has been surprised against the heavy Oregon eleven in the conference.

Gonzaga university, beaten by Idaho in the conference, but apparently having a jinx on conference teams, will seek to topple its third league opponent, Gonzaga State, at the University of Montana. The non-conference Gonzagans already have trimmed Idaho and Washington State.

Caldwell Cougars Score 20-0 Win Over Buhl Eleven

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—Flying through a mud soaked field, Caldwell high school Cougars broke into the victory column in a Big Ten conference game here this afternoon and passed their way to a 20 to 0 win over the Buhl Indians.

With their running backs out from the soggy gridiron, both teams reverted to an 'air' strategy. Caldwell's passing attack was the only one that was successful.

Featuring a punting duel between Hopkins and Boyd of Buhl and a game of wits between Caldwell's Coach and Buhl's Coach, the Cougars carried their passing attack through the game.

After a series of forwards and laterals Ray McMurtry countered in the initial frame, but his placekicker for the extra point went wide.

Gooding failed in the fourth quarter and matched the Big Ten record of the field only to be stopped by the final gun.

DRIVE FOR WHEAT PROGRAM LAUNCHED
Community Committees Discuss Provision of New Contract

Twin Falls County Wheat Production Control committee, with three members, launched the campaign in this county for the new contract for wheat adjustment committee in a meeting in the county agent's office yesterday.

Speakers at the meeting, H. G. Leachman of Hatcher, members of the state grain board, and Harvey S. Hale, county agent, outlined provisions of the new contract. Under the new contract owner or operators of farms on which wheat was grown during the base period for 1928 to 1932, must be paid the amount of wheat to be grown during the new contract period, and in return, the contract owner undertakes to pay to contract adjuster an adjusted payment, which will tend to assure the contract owner the wheat parity price for his farm adjustment.

Parity Price
Wheat parity price is based on a bushel of 60 pounds, and the adjustment is calculated as the difference between the parity price and wheat "compliant" from available statistics of the department of agriculture.

Information brought to the committee assembled here yesterday is to be disseminated among growers in a series of seven community meetings beginning next Tuesday, and the sign-up of wheat growers to follow the committee's signing of an individual setting forth individual farm and crop histories in order to induce the secretary to accept the contract after he enters into the wheat adjustment contract for 1934-1935.

Easy and Profitable
Commenting on the new wheat production control program, the county agent said in a letter last week to the county's wheat growers: "The new wheat program has been changed so as to make it easy and profitable for wheat growers to farm. In fact it is such an easy and profitable program for the Twin Falls county farm that wheat farmers who have any wheat base can not afford to miss being in on the program."

Places for making out applications to be announced at the several community meetings, which are to be held according to the following schedule:
November 12, Castletown high school; November 13, Buhl city hall; November 14, Piler Grange hall; November 15, Hollister high school; November 16, Twin Falls high school; November 18, Kimberly high school; November 20, Murtaugh high school.

Members of the county association of community committees, recently elected, are the following:
Murtaugh: Ky Pickett, M. J. Finlayson, E. J. Zerkow, J. M. Miller, Frank L. Atkin.
Piler: W. J. Robertson, B. C. Van Auden, J. M. Demaree.
Hollister: J. E. Pohlman, J. M. Pierce, W. A. Wasley.
