MILLER REFUSES SALES TAX OPINION

Attorney General Declines to Say Whether Law Exists Legally

BOISE, Dec. 2 (AP)—Attorney General Bert Miller in a letter mailed tonight to William Moffatt, Ada county prosecuting attorney, declined to write an opinion on the question of whether the new law is enforceable, because the federal government has created a committee to investigate the law's effect.

When the tax law was passed, the understanding was that $100,000 a month from it would be used to match federal funds for relief. Because a suit is now on appeal in the supreme court to test the constitutionality of the law, Mr. Miller wrote Moffatt that "it would be highly unethical for this department to render an opinion."

The same question was raised some time ago by Mayor Duncan M. Johnson of Twin Falls.

Governor Ross has constituted the state relief law to mean that the state may provide for the needy individuals with its $100,000 while the federal government contributes to relief by paying the salaries of works progress administration employees who formerly were on the state rolls.

Processing Tax Small Factor In Wheat Discount

MOSCOW, Dec. 2.—The discounts in the spring wheat market received on the light wheat of this year's crop, are due mainly to factors other than the processing tax, officials here informed.

Association Service Director E. J. Downing, the AAA points out that in cases where the discount amounts to as much as 30 cents a bushel for 50-pound wheat, the amount that actually can be attributed to the processing tax figures out to about 4 cents a bushel, when the wheat is made into flour.

The factors usually considered as causes of discounts of the light wheat are (1) that it requires somewhat more of the low flour weight to make a barrel of flour; (2) the cost of milling the lighter wheat is higher; (3) the flour produced from light wheat weighs in less value than that produced from heavy wheat because a smaller portion of the total flour is patent grade; (4) the inferiority on the part of the buyer as to the ability of the operating mill to handle a large quantity of such wheat in the mill; and (5) a lower supply of flour when wheat needs to replace the price of flour made up of proportion to the price paid for higher grades.

Making data made by the department of agriculture show that the light wheat which makes flour which are high in protein, have good baking strength, give good loaf volume and texture of bread and indicate an ability to carry a fair percentage blend of flour of much lower protein content, but that the bread produced is of darker color, and has a soft crumb.

It is the last two factors that present the chief problems to the millers, as these factors are important to commercial baking.

Based upon past milling and baking department of agriculture, the number of bushels of clean wheat needed at various

Social Register Drops Barbara And Vanderbilt

THE 1936 New York social register, so-called director of America's highest society, has bounced off the press again with its usual surprises. This year the names of such notables as Barbara Hudson (right), the Woodworth heiress and wife of Count Hassenwitz-Reventz, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. (left), were found wanting. However, others made comebacks, including the lovely Jane Wynn (center figure), who left a Park avenue home for a stage and screen career, and Whitney Bourne (lower left), socialite actress.—(P. German Clergymen Rebel at Decree

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (AP)—A real decree depriving opposition Protestant groups of all authoritative and administrative rights stirred the fighting spirits of German confessional synod leaders to a new high pitch tonight.

A confessional spokesman declared categorically that his colleagues had not the slightest intention of accepting the dictation of the German national department for church affairs.

On the other hand, he said, they would have a clear cut, confessional pastors, the spokesman asserted, intend to hold strictly to their principle of obeying God before man.

WALKER LEAVES FOR PRESS CONVENTION

"It is entirely appropriate that a high school newspaper of as wide reputation as the 'Bravo' should send a representative to a national convention. Robert Armstrong, vice president of our paper at such a meeting, I shall endeavor to bring back as much information as possible," Frank Walker, 16, told a group of local student journalists gathered to see him board a bus for Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he will attend the National Scholastic Press association convention December 11-13.

WALKER LEAVES FOR PRESS CONVENTION

Walker, a graduate of the high school last year who has made a recognized record as business manager of the school's semi-weekly mimeographed newspaper, is the first Twin Falls student to be sent to a national convention by the "Bravo."

He will be in attendance at the entire convention including all the general sessions where international famous newspaper men will speak and round-table discussion meetings for the high school paper business managers. He will probably return Wednesday, December 11.

Black Maps Broad Probe of Lobbies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—Protracted public hearings this winter in a thorough investigation of lobbying central were forecast today by Chairman Black of the special senate lobby committee.

The Alabama Democrats' headline-making testimony from utility officials last summer disclosed that 2,000 to 3,000 questionnaires have been sent to organized business groups and individuals.

Through those, the committee is attempting to learn how much money is spent to influence federal legislation. Black indicated a belief the sum would run high into the millions if it could be accurately estimated.

"My estimate that $3,000,000 was spent to 'grease' the administration's wheels will alone," he added, "is too low."

Black declined to discuss specifically the nature of information that lobbyists have furnished thus far.

AROUSING AGAINST CRIME: The head of Chicago's Crime Commission says his city is no longer the crime center of the United States.

Chicago does not stand alone in the fight against crime. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, reports for the whole country a steady decline in murder, robbery, auto theft, and some other crimes.

The "pressure of aroused public opinion" has unquestionably been a big factor in cutting the amount of crime, although it probably has not been the only factor.

Direct Federal relief will, according to announcement by Harry Hopkins, be discontinued December 1. This procedure, if carried out, will throw direct relief back to state, county and municipalities where, in the opinion of many, it was always believed except when conditions were very unusual.

MEN AGAINST TANKS

The northern Italian army in Ethiopia appears to have made a pretty good record, on the whole, though its progress lately has been slowed by difficult terrain and stronger resistance.

There has been no major action, he recently told Laurence Stallings, the Italian troops have advanced over the plain but cannot take the plateau.

"They will, of course, multiply our casualties. We cannot expect to rout them without losing many men, Tanks? Suppose they bring a hundred tanks."

The natives seem to have learned the trick of tackling those motor-tanks. The lumbering tanks, manned by gunners firing awkwardly through port holes, are only dangerous at a distance.

"When this is over," says Wehli Pasha, quietly, "Italy will have ceased to count in the Moslem world."

SCHOOL FOR VILLAGE OFFICIALS

The Association of Towns of the State of New York, co-operating with certain newspapers, has started a school to teach village officials how to govern efficiently under state laws.

It is a sensible plan. Good government ought to begin in the smallest governmental units. Often elected officials haven't much but willingness to serve, to qualify them for public office.

ANIMAL FRIENDS

A Cat Club has been holding its twenty-first annual show in New York, with two hundred and fifty cats exhibited. Many of them, the owners proudly admit, have never seen a mouse in their lives, and wouldn't know what to do if they saw one.

It is the same with dog shows. How many champion hounds would know what to do if taken on a hunt? How many prize collies would know what to do if they met a flock of sheep or a herd of cows?

But never mind. These pets serve, on the whole, a useful purpose. They make good friends for many a man, woman and child, craving companionship, and are sometimes more loyal and understanding than human friends.

Speaking over the radio on Sunday, the dean of the University of Berkeley school of business administration, said that the federal government's program, analyzing the 1931 income tax returns, has pointed out that even if the government had seized for that year all income in excess of five thousand dollars for every individual, it would have got just four billion dollars.

The calculation, which anyone can check for himself, points to the basic reality of so many of the familiar reform schemes—the assumption that securing better living conditions for the people as a whole is primarily a problem of distribution. Better distribution is eminently desirable, but the problem of really increasing our total output of goods and services remains the greater importance.

Dean Epstein's conclusion has more than an academic application. When complaints are made about taxes, demagogues denounce such complaints with the invective that they come only from the rich. When questions are raised about how the federal deficit might be bridged, they again suggest gibberish that the rich can pay it.

THE BELIEF PROBLEM

Direct Federal relief will, according to announcement by Harry Hopkins, be discontinued December 1. This procedure, if carried out, will throw direct relief back to state, county and municipalities where, in the opinion of many, it was always believed except when conditions were very unusual.

In many of the larger cities, however, the abandonment of the direct relief program will work much harder. As an illustration, the Welfare Council of New York City gives out the information that applications for relief are coming in at the rate of 5000 a week.

In theory relief employables will be given WPA work, but in fact such work has been provided for less than half of them. The Welfare Council explains that this is because the country is coming largely from millions of unemployed who up to now had been able to exist on savings, insurance borrowings, credit and loans from friends but at last have reached the end of their resources.

There can be no doubt that throughout the nation business conditions are on the up-grade, but conditions as related by the Welfare Council serve as a reminder that our unemployment problem is far from a simple one. It is not a simple matter of increasing industrial activity, for there are approximately 11,000,000 persons for whom there is no place in private industry.

BREAKFAST FOOD

It is useless to quarrel with a very old man for being a reactionary, or with a very young man for being a revolutionary. Fifty years hence the second will be "what the first is now."

Hubbard—"Did I tell you I wasn't going to be your mother-in-law with you?"

New York Day by Day

By O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Magazine editors a few years ago felt only to the seasoned workers who had reached or nearly reached the middle years. Youth might write it but they could not edit it.

Or so it was believed. The picture is changing. Young men are in the editorial saddle and the old-timers are being ousted. H. P. Burton, of Compost, is playing a juvenile role on the staff of the magazine.

O. O. McIntyre, Mayor of Pictorial Review, is in his 30's. Alfred Danahy who leads the veteran Scripps is not 25.

When O. O. McIntyre assumed editorship of McCall's he might have easily been mistaken for the head of the boy-in-the-clothes-shed. He has not so far.

Even George Horner Lorimer has begun to give up and to be replaced by a younger man. He is now being replaced by a younger man. He is now being replaced by a younger man.

Newspaper work has always been less of a young man's game. It has long doubled as a preparation for the boss to make a killing out of. To break a leg landing the story.

The best writing, as W. R. Hearst himself has said, is done by the more mature. Also the most capable news direction. Youngsters excel either in nimbleness.

When Arthur Somers Roche passed away suddenly two of his articles were running in important magazines. He had finished neither.

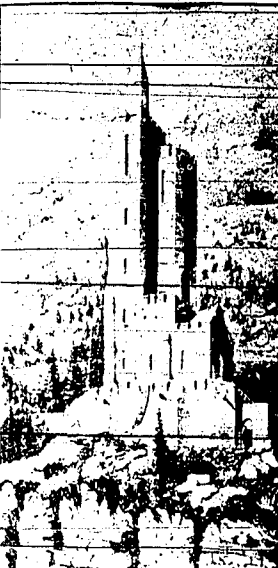

His widow, associated closely with him in his writing, completed two novels before he died. One is a national weekly for a complete mystery novel at top price.

Four months later she had completed, had it accepted and was asked to do another. She is writing under the name of Ethel Pett, her husband's name under which she has published two novels before her husband's death.

Boice Du Bois is still another one of those names. Tell it several times and you'll find yourself on a long mumble. Du Bois is one of the many Bob Davis discoveries.

Guiding Your Child

THE animals, many parents and often they are intelligent parents, transfer much of their love and all the expression of affection to the latest owner. The baby can do no wrong and the deformed monarch of the nursery is sure to be the victim of the piece.

As Mr. Smith remarked to his wife once, "A year ago Tommy couldn't do wrong but now he is doing it all the time."

Starting out with a basket like that would never land me at a football game. It brings out the world in me. I'd be hiding behind a road-side bush for a grand game.

WASHINGTON By Ray Tucker: BOLD STATE DEPARTMENTERS publicly plash-plash the seriousness of Geneva's postponement of the blockade against Italy.

Dan Rogers is trying to sell the idea to the White House. The prospect is known to appeal to the President, who likes speed in any form, but whether this request for new funds will get as budget-balancers is another question.

Behind all official statements you can discern a separate effort to divorce Washington and Geneva. Many legislators are making the official explanation. They maintain that Mr. Hull exceeded his authority when he threatened reprisals.

ROST: The government's economic doctors are hovering over the present boom-as-if-it-were-a-bleeding-infant. Three times since 1929 low have they not been hoping to be beside the recovery patient but always their chairs took a downward slant as the boom ebbed.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

SYNOPSIS: On his way to the capital to see what is delaying an important shipment of equipment to be used in his engineering work, Terry Willis stops in Protonaire and meets an old friend, Tommy Spence, from a Portuguese merchant steamer. He is now at the American embassy in the capital demanding to see George Fox, the attaché. And Fox is in conversation with a most charming girl whose name is Allaire.

Chapter Six

FATEFUL MEETING

Willitt, all right.

"Where is he now?"

"He was in the waiting room of the Legation Club, waiting for Noves to come back and get his arm broken unless the Genor Fox appeared."

Noves looked positively revolted.

"But, yes, Genor," he returned. "With the mouth, yes. But with the eyes, ah, no, Genor. Name of a name, Genor Fox, but he would have broken the arm, by damn!"

"Smiling," he said, "I was not at all smiling to solve a technical problem. Means he's going into action. He's going to sock somebody."

He turned quickly to Allaire, shook his head and said:

"Feel like a fireman?" he commented. "There's a third alarm in the 'billiard' room."

"What's the trouble?"

"Allaire is looking at him interestedly. "You, by any chance, Ambassador?"

"No, but he mustn't sock anybody," he explained. "He told me that if he saw me, he would give me any trouble with the coffee company. His job, he'd let me know his mind."

He laid out his hand.

"May I take you in before I go to save the lamp and the rest of a fighting machine?"

There was a queer smile on her lips as she lightly clasped Allaire's hands behind her head.

"You know," she said reflectively, "I did some of the dancing to see Steve Perry play polo and Ray play the fool. I had ideas, absurd perhaps, of gentlemen with 'ears' and 'eyes' and 'noses' and 'wrongs' their rights."

"So far I bear away memories of a snake farm, some dried-necked women or something, and a mountain in the middle of a harbor. But she went on with that rare spark which she wants to see somebody, the reason in front of a fighting machine, the reason in front of a fighting machine."

Fox felt something go clanging up and down his spinal column. He'd had the same way when a bolt of omens had awaited the kickoff in his first Yale game.

"You want to see me, Genor? Who want—in this country on the brink of revolution?"

But he had never had his spasm before. He was the crazy sensation he had that this girl was so like the dynamic-charged city all about him.

Both swelled—sparks? The top of a green hill blown off by a lightning unexpected volcano—the fire the last time when a bolt of omens to sweep past boundaries.

"Colly reckless, emphatically defiant!" she merely mocking girl a little cry in the wilderness from the child who had shown her heart, as a thoroughbred painted in agony before her.

"You want to meet him?" he said a little vaguely.

She lit a cigarette and flicked the match disdainfully past Noves' ear. Then she leaned back in the same careless posture he had found her, and she began to laugh. It happened around here she wanted to Heaven only knows if he wanted to see somebody many times over.

Willitt might be drunk.

"You've saved your arm, Noves," he told the future. "Ask the lad to head to come here."

He came swishing down a garden walk in his leather clad in buckles, carried—slid to death of red tape and music, with the lights and flourish of the Legation Club trying to chase from his mind the thought of a dang rope.

"Hello, Fox," he said abruptly, and they raised to stare the girl's attitude.

The girl watched him, frowning from the dinner, beyond her fingers curling up to her cheek.

"The foreign Service," Willitt remarked with a brief, appreciative grin. Fox is a something I'll have in my lock later."

Fox smiled himself. Ask Terry Willitt or some of those other hard-faced bullies down here—thousands of miles from home where the thought of the Foreign Service and the snarls would probably make the Secretary of State blush into his portfolio.

"Take a good look at him, Allaire," he told the girl. "Tomorrow morning he might be in jail."

"Is that the possibility," she inquired, "for socking somebody?"

"It all depends," said Fox. "Allaire West, Terry. She looks like a truck through greenhouses and ride ninety miles an hour."

Willitt jammed his hands in his pockets and looked at her intently. As she drew on her cigarette, the light glow traced the sharp straight line of her nose, descended to her chin, and then, as if by magic, suddenly fell as though a cold breeze had passed his forehead as she watched the truck through greenhouses and ride ninety miles an hour in the shade.

She smiled, and he looked at her as she felt once in a while, in the Federal Buying Helps to Lower Farm Surpluses

MOOSEW, Dec. 2.—Expenditures by the federal government for removing surplus agricultural commodities involved an expenditure of $94,156,727 up to November 1, 1935. Of this total amount expended, approximately $167,900,000 has been or will be received either in cash or in the value of commodities used by the government for relief distribution. On this basis, only about a percent of surplus relief expenditures may be considered as the net cost of the program.

The surplus removal activities of the federal government have included purchases, for relief distribution, of hog and pork products, dairy products and sugar. Drought relief activities included buying and selling for relief use, of surplus cattle, sheep and goats which otherwise would have died of thirst or starvation.
