(By The Associated Press)
Internal discord in both Italy and Ethiopia was reported unofficially Friday.
The French newspaper L'Ouvre said in an Italian dispatch that soldiers about to be sent to Africa mutinied and killed a Fascist militiaman. This report met an official and emphatic denial in Rome.
Ethiopia was worried over what appeared to be an imminent revolt in northwest Gojjam province and dispatched 5,000 troops there. Italians were said by officials in Addis Ababa to have stirred up the trouble.

Premier Mussolini, had, Fascist chiefs throughout the land heard his "force" speech of ten years ago, advocating force by the government when necessary.
France took steps to safeguard herself in the event of war in the Mediterranean.
Reliable quarters said she asked league members, including Sweden and Turkey, how far they would go to help her if attacked by Italy. France has already assured Great Britain of aid.
Paris newspapers also said the government had asked Britain whether she would send troops to Germany. French officials said that France's soldiers had to be called away because of war with Italy. This report was "entirely untrue," said a foreign official spokesman.

CONGRESS BEGINS CHARTING COURSE TO ESCAPE WARS

Three. Neutrality Measures Already Introduced With Fourth Bill In Making; Heated Disputes Indicated

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—With an apprehensive eye scanning foreign shores, President Roosevelt asked congress tonight to set forth a neutrality policy that would be discouraging to war.

Even as he appeared in person before the senate and house, congress already was moving toward this end. Three neutrality measures were introduced during the day, two of which bore evidence of state department draftsmen's caution and approval.

A fourth bill was in the making. Each sought to accomplish the purpose outlined by the president, that of "defining" to encourage the prosecution of war—but in a variety of ways. The senate bill would keep the United States out of foreign conflicts entirely.

Chairman McNamara (D-Tenn.) of the house foreign affairs committee proposed giving the president the widest authority in deciding under what conditions the shipment of munitions to belligerent nations should be restricted.

NEW COLD WAVE INVADES MIDWEST

Snow, Sleet, Rain and Floods Dot Weather Map of Nation

CHICAGO, Jan. 3 (AP)—A cold wave, now sleet, rain and floods, mottled the nation's weather map today.

A fresh wave of frigid moved down on the Dakotas, Minnesota and portions of Wisconsin and Iowa. Snow or rain was promised the Midwest and Ohio valleys and the upper Great Lakes region. The entire middle west prepared for a return of near zero cold.

A stormy west wind, much of the New York and New England, Boston, cold weather was in prospect.

Ice Coals Highway
Highways in the east were transformed into ribbons of ice. Drifting snows resulted in many accidents.

Fed by the precipitation, rivers in the Midwest were rising. The Delaware peninsula area.

Many roads in central West Virginia were inundated.

Residents of the southwest side of Philadelphia reached jubilation in townships after flood waters had subsided—some homes, they reported, were still under water.

President Demands Strict Neutrality, New Deal Advance

Administration's Aims Disclosed At Unprecedented Night Session Of Nation's Law Makers

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—In sharp language, President Roosevelt tonight made his annual message into a call upon congress to protect the nation against foreign autocrat bent upon war and against "autocrats at home as seek to bring up on the people's lips."

Flanked with microphones which carried his words to all parts of the nation the chief executive demanded a "well-ordered neutrality" and an "adequate national defense."

Then, slushing at critics of the new deal in a manner all unprecedented for an annual message, the president denounced what he called "extremist groups," "entrenched greed," which he said were seeking to regain domination of the national government.

"I recommend to congress that we do not retreat," he said.

Although the president mentioned no names in his attack on those he called foreign and domestic autocrats, there was no mistaking the sharpness of his attack on the new deal critics. In one reference, observers thought he had given direct reference to the American Liberty League, which remained a matter of speculation.

President's Address Marks Dramatic Event

Congress In Joint Session At Night Hears Words Broadcast Throughout World

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—An historic legislative assembly, meeting in the chamber of the house of representatives, gathered tonight in the chamber of the house of representatives as an audience for President Roosevelt's delivery of his annual message.

Congress, formally opened at noon and some political tension, already had started its skirmishing on the headline issues of neutrality and the soldiers' bonus before reconvening to hear the president.

Beneath a capitol dome, bathed in floodlight, by flood lights, the two houses convened separately shortly before 8 p. m. The air stirred by the extraordinary procedure gave the huge building a somewhat electric atmosphere.

Without President Roosevelt's presence, the chamber of the house of representatives would have been a silent scene. Only the sound of the president's voice, carried by the loudspeakers, would have been heard.

President Roosevelt, arrived at the capitol at 8:30 p. m., was immediately to the office of Speaker Byrnes just off the floor of the house. Where members of the cabinet and congressional leaders awaited him.

Wearing formal morning attire, he was escorted to the chamber of the house of representatives, where he was met by the chief executive found some in the audience.

Speakers gathered early and packed the galleries, but few "outdoors" were lucky enough to obtain the choice entry tickets.

A battery of microphones at the top of the chamber of the house of representatives conveyed the president's words to the nation.

ROOSEVELT EVOKES PRAISE, CRITICISM

Neutrality Features Accepted In Charge of 'Politics'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Democratic praise and sharp Republican criticism greeted President Roosevelt's annual message to congress tonight.

Democrats commended especially the president's neutrality references and his defense of the new deal. Republicans attacked parts of the address as a "political harangue."

Here is some of the comment: Chairman Charles McNamara of the Republican national committee: "Aside from the neutrality features, the speech was a commendable effort to give the congress information of the state of the union."

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader: "The message is confined to a discussion of the state of the union, and leaves for future legislation, there is an excellent declaration of the policy of neutrality respecting the present and threatened war."

RETURN TO U. S.

Eller and Family to Visit Southern France and Sweden

LAURENCE, Wis. Jan. 3 (AP)—The family of the late Senator Charles A. Eller, who died in London, England, last week, are expected to return to the United States with their family within about three weeks.

There is no question of their remaining after the Hauptmann case is disposed of and the publicity dies down," the spokesman asserted.

They intend to come here to recover from the strain of their trip to London, then they will go to Sweden, then to the south of France, and finally return to the United States.

(When the Lindberghs sailed for England nearly two weeks ago on a leisurely motor trip, they would take up permanent residence in England because of fear of American crime).

GUFFEY BILL AGAIN DECLARED INVALID

CHICAGO, Jan. 3 (AP)—Federal Judge J. P. Barnes today declared the Guffey bill, which would give the Guffey company control of the oil fields in the Guffey area, unconstitutional.

The judge said that the bill was unconstitutional because it gave the Guffey company a monopoly over the oil fields.

Suggestions Given For Meat Purchasing

Left-over frequently means a saving of both time and money since they enable one to take advantage of market conditions in buying meats, and to use them to their advantage in easily prepared second and third meals. Yet it is essential to know how many left-overs to expect from certain cuts, as well as those which can be counted on to serve a given number without left-over.

Of course, it is impossible to determine the exact amount of meat needed for a given number of persons, since there are many things to take into consideration. However, an approximation is possible. One-half to three-quarters pound of uncooked meat per person is a fairly good average; provided there is a comparatively small amount of bone. If, as in a meat loaf, bread or cracker crumbs are used to extend the meat flavor, slightly less meat will be needed; and, on the other hand, if meat is necessary in a salad, less than this amount, in order to have a cut which can be carved nicely.

Left-overs are saved most easily. Some meat cuts may be made to the desired size, while others, such as leg of lamb, or a whole baked ham, are usually used without difficulty. In fact, meat is a decided advantage in preparing easy meals.

The following information concerning weights and servings of certain common meats may be helpful when you go to the market. These are an average, and will vary to a certain extent.

Standing rib roast (cut in 2 or 3 portions):
 12 to 14 pounds, serves 12 to 14.
 10 to 12 pounds, serves 10 to 12.
Roast pork (cut in 2 or 3 portions):
 12 to 14 pounds, serves 12 to 14.
 10 to 12 pounds, serves 10 to 12.
Porterhouse or T-bone steak, cut 1 inch thick, 1 to 2 pounds, serves 3.

Unite Breakfast And Lunch for Holiday 'Brunch'

If there's one time in the whole week when the family can all be together it's Sunday morning. You may have acquired the habit of Sunday morning breakfasts long ago but if you haven't, suggest you consider a new way of doing it. A nice informal meal which the whole family will enjoy. It's not to make a big deal out of it, but a little reward for breakfast in general except that it is a meal to be devoured in a happy rather than to be enjoyed in a quiet.

The aroma of really good coffee, a gay breakfast cloth and the table drawn up to the sunniest window of the room will hasten the routine of breakfast. It's not to make a big deal out of it, but a little reward for breakfast in general except that it is a meal to be devoured in a happy rather than to be enjoyed in a quiet.

Sunday brunches are a combination of breakfast and lunch and in most households with a substantial dinner planned for late in the afternoon, it is very popular.

The menu should depend upon the plans for the rest of the day although the weather and the appetites will impart a general tone of what to make. Generally, plan quite a substantial menu. Usually it's of course, to suit the family's custom and preference. It may be simple but have it delicious.

If you want to win wholeheartedly the acclaim of the perfect hostess at Sunday brunches, vary your menu often. This is the secret of keeping "dad" and "mama" eagerly looking forward to what the Sunday brunch will bring.

Incidentally, you may find a trace of color and it is excellent for dinner to a hearty meal of any of the above. We enjoy for breakfast, actually, there is such a variety of food things for breakfast that it is not confined to what to serve first but a fond remembrance of the family's special needs to bring out.

Serve Bridge Club Lobster Shortcake

Are you so afflicted with thoughts of food from the holidays that you can't think of a thing to give the bridge club? Consider lobster shortcake, as a variation from turkey cake, and accompany it with frozen salad. You'll find the recipe below.

Lobster Shortcake
 2 eggs—flour
 4 tablespoons baking powder
 1 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon celery salt
 4 tablespoons fat
 1 egg
 1 cup milk
 Mix sugar, ingredients, oil, fat, and mix with knife, add eggs and milk. Pour egg dough into greased shallow baking pan. Bake 15 minutes at moderate oven. While warm, split and portion of lobster, replace top and cover with remaining lobster. Garnish with slices of pineapple and parsley. Serve immediately.

Lobster
 4 tablespoons butter
 4 tablespoons flour
 1 cup milk
 2 cups cream
 1 cup cooked lobster
 1 egg yolk
 1 teaspoon chopped celery, cooked.
 1-3 teaspoon salt
 1-3 teaspoon sugar
 Add milk. Cook until creamy sugar. Add rest of ingredients and cook.

Frozen Salad Royal
 2 cups strained cottage cheese
 1 cup cream
 1 cup chopped celery
 1 cup chopped onion
 1 cup whipped cream
 1 cup milk dressing
 1-2 tablespoon tomato juice
 1-3 teaspoon sugar
 1-3 teaspoon salt
 1-3 teaspoon pepper
 1-3 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 1-3 teaspoon lemon juice
 1-3 teaspoon vinegar
 1-3 teaspoon ketchup

POLITICAL PROPHECY

Apparently the chief business in the United States this year is going to be the presidential campaign. The most modern business methods are already applied to it. Straw votes, as everyone knows, have become a big industry in themselves; and along with them, there is being organized an army of investigators, snappers, dopers and forecasters, all busily feeling the voter's pulse, taking his temperature, listening to his heart-beat, getting a line on his political metabolism and trying in a thousand ways to figure out how he is going to vote next fall.

Here the experience gained in feeling the business pulse during these last few years comes useful. The political sharps take over the methods of the economic sharps. Statistics, it seems, have become an exact science. Well, anyway, almost an exact science. There are experts who can tell us almost to an hour when this political inflection started to work, or that political movement began to subside, and what the rate of gain or loss is for either party, or any faction in any section or state.

From now until November the public will be told with finality and detail, at least once a week, just how the election is going to come out.

But nobody really knows. Never, perhaps, have there been so many shades of opinion, so many cross-currents and eddies of political and economic thought. Millions are not telling how they're going to vote. Millions don't know yet. And the situation changes continually. Even the cleverest political scientist may not be able to make a chart and plot a campaign curve for as much as a month ahead.

WINGS OVER THE PACIFIC

Speaker Byrns of the national House of Representatives starts a new wave of armament debate by saying he will support proposals for a larger air force, an Alaskan air base and stronger fortifications in Hawaii. Such preparedness for war, he says, is "good insurance against it."

It is an old theme, for which there are good arguments on both sides, with the advocates of more armament usually winning. The Speaker's proposals have considerable logic in them, and may command public support. Americans, while loving peace and disliking military expansion, are like other peoples easily swayed by defense arguments based on war scares.

Yet it should be clearly understood that, if there is danger in too little defense, there is also danger in too much. An important factor, too, is the spirit in which we enlarge our defenses. It is as essential to be decent, courteous and disarming to potential enemies as it is to build warships and fortifications against them.

THE NIZAM'S BARBECUE

Stories of the preparations being made by the Nizam of Hyderabad for his silver jubilee celebration, sound like the fabulous doings in a fairy story. The Nizam is said to be the richest man in the world. He has fifty marble palaces and a coach of solid gold in which he rides on state occasions. For private use, this prince prefers a shabby, rattling car which has been in use for at least eight years, but he knows how to entertain in marble and gold coach style.

For the jubilee celebration one thousand oxen and ten thousand sheep have been ordered for a mammoth barbecue, one feature of the program.

The silver jubilee of his fellow ruler, King George V. of England, pales into insignificance beside the plans for this fête in India early in 1936. But why not? When the richest man in the world is also the premier prince of India, he has a right to throw a big party once in twenty-five years.

IT HAPPENED IN ETHIOPIA

The disabled airplane, so fleet and formidable but a few moments before, came crashing to rest. The black men, fierce of face, flung the young pilot round with violence. They seized his arms and forced him to kneel on earth. They bent his neck to the stroke of the steel. The sword whistled as it struck.

It happened on the southern front, south of a place called Daggah But, no doubt thousands of American readers, finding a few lines about it in their newspapers, wondered at this evidence of the barbarity of the Ethiopian warriors who beheaded, with scant delay, a prisoner of war scarcely more than a boy in years. No question is being given in the fighting in Ethiopia. Normally, if the word may be employed, the proportion of wounded to dead, in any list of battle casualties, considerably exceeds the actual ratio in battle. In this war, so bitter is the enemy, so savage the purpose of either group of combatants, the proportion is sharply reversed. There are ten dead to one wounded.

This is the way men made war in the days of history. Granting that it was brutally barbaric to behead a crowd of 50,000 at Fentalla, asking them to sacrifice their people to the advance of Italian arms, it was not more barbaric than the slaughter of the Afghans, that they had seen their dead. Was the clean stroke of a sword upon the neck of a prisoner, an officer or the imperial air force, a modern eagle of Rome, more or less barbarous than the serial bombing and machine-gunning of defenseless cities where the only defense was the courage of the men? The tragedy name of glory? There is little chivalry in warfare any longer, white or black. When the Italians, the inheritors of civilization, do not practice chivalry it was idle to expect it of a benighted black man who murders his unarmed comrades.

SHIRKING RESPONSIBILITIES

There is abundant room for honest doubts that there was legitimate reason why the various states should have passed their problems of human relief to Uncle Sam. Perhaps a few states, as a result of drought and other calamities, may have needed help from the Federal Government. But certain it is that they mark the exceptions. For instance, it would be nothing less than sheer hypocrisy to venture a doubt that at all times the State of Idaho, among others, has been fully competent to care for all worthy unfortunates within their borders—and that the same condition has prevailed in nearly all other states. But the excuse of inability to do so is a convenient one, by passing them on to Washington and, collectively, accepting that which as true Americans we have not deserved. And make no mistake about it, for all this we must pay a price that will be charged against us, our children and our children's children—the price of burdensome taxation, and sacrifice of freedom in the management of our personal affairs. The only means of prevention of this kind of American people, to awake to their responsibilities.

A LOVER OF MANKIND

San Tannahlil is dead after a long, useful, crowded life. His passing will sadden many friends, for he found a seat in friendship, and imparted it, and was more than ordinarily happy when, with friends, he looked forward to the better years that were beyond his span. To "sit down for a talk" with San Tannahlil was an adventure in comradeship. He delighted to strike hands with the humblest of his lowly citizens, literally unaware of when he knew and greeted with obvious pleasure. And the homely philosophy of his life was without sting, yet had a tang of its own not to be forgotten. His acquaintance with the abolitionist of his professional training was thorough enough for him to prefer people in their stead.

A dead in the wool democrat in politics, his party honored him with selection as the Idaho member of the democratic national committee. San Tannahlil loved politics like he loved peace, not as a passion for emolument it might bring him, but as a diverting pastime and because he enjoyed a good battle, be it at the election polls or in the court of law. With tireless enthusiasm he proved himself the friend of his political friends, the friendly enemy of his political enemies. Infrequently he would be defeated in his own or others' battles—he was never daunted. No lawyer would deny that his profession of late years was well rewarded by the party and the public. His ability to serve the cause of his client has often submerged an ancient fidelity to trust as the official of the court. Technically he served the cause of the litigant but has deprived the law itself of its respect. The decline is not due to the theory of the law but to the methods of its practice. Yet the copybook maxim that common honesty is the best policy still rings true. It is merited at the close of his career in quibbles and is honored by the materials. In the law it stands proved by the few who unite adherence to its integrity of character. Of that number was San Tannahlil. Unassuming, capable, interested in public affairs as in his private concerns, his stewardship is a well-balanced account.

No Sudden Change

"You have recently inherited a nice lump of money from your uncle. Why don't you pay me?"

Customer: "I hate all outward show. I don't want it to be said that my newly acquired wealth has caused a departure from my former simple habits."

No Wonder!

A woman coming from a remote section, purchased a new car on her first visit to a large department store. The next day she brought it back saying that it did not fit her. "No wonder it doesn't fit," she exclaimed. Look back, pointing to the label, "Made Expressly for John W. Hammer."

Just Off

When the first-grade teacher came to check records she found that little Alice was several months under school age—so the child was sent home.

"What is the matter, mother? Is this little mother when the child returned, 'What has happened?'"

"I got laid off," sobbed the child.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—There will be another of those aimless, wandering and rambling columns, it is when I have to sit at a half hour without the slightest mental twitch. Frequently it has the unexpected.

There is a reason for drawing this mental blank. Morpheus has been on my mind. I could not sleep last night. I could not sleep last night. I could not sleep last night.

WATERS. Those who have had a peek at the New Committee's report on the House of Morgan's financial dealings in the early stages of the World War believe it will surprise the American public. Neutrality proponents say the mere tabulation of Morgan's advances to Great Britain during the war states declared war reveals that this country was mortgaged to the cause of allied victory from early in 1915. But they count on other disclosures to inflame public opinion against a reputation: They have assembled documents which outline a campaign to "educate" the United States to the need of victory for the bankers' interests. The term "propaganda" is used in this connection. The first is that the "propaganda" long before it became an everyday expression with a special meaning.

Senator Nye hopes to score two major points for his air-light neutrality measure with these revelations. The first is that the G.O.P. usually follows war loans and commercial transactions. The second is that those who the loans know how to save the flag.

Another man pointed by Hopkins is a Nebraska newspaperman who was removed by Mr. Hoover for his part in the "Hoover boy" scandal. He is now in the hands of the G.O.P. and is being used to inflame public opinion against a reputation: They have assembled documents which outline a campaign to "educate" the United States to the need of victory for the bankers' interests. The term "propaganda" is used in this connection. The first is that the "propaganda" long before it became an everyday expression with a special meaning.

POLITICAL PROPHECY

Apparently the chief business in the United States this year is going to be the presidential campaign. The most modern business methods are already applied to it. Straw votes, as everyone knows, have become a big industry in themselves; and along with them,
there is being organized an army of investigators, snappers, dopsters and forecasters, all busily feeling the voter's pulse, taking his temperature, listening to his heart-beat, and trying a line on his political metabolism and getting in a thousand ways to figure out how he is going to vote next fall.

Here the experience gained in feeling the business pulse during these last few years comes useful. The political sharps take over the methods of the economic sharps. Statistics, it seems, have become an exact science. They are experts who can tell us almost to an hour
when this political inflection started to work,
or that political movement began to subside,
and what the rate of gain or loss is for either party or any faction in any section or state.
From now until November the public will be told with finality and detail, at least once a week, just how the election is going to come out.

But nobody really knows. Never, perhaps,
have there been so many shades of opinion,
so many cross-currents and eddies of political and economic thought. Millions are being told how they're going to vote. Millions don't know yet. And the situation changes continually. Even the cleverest political scientist may not be able to make a chart and plot a dependable curve for as much as a month ahead.

WINGS OVER THE PACIFIC

Speaker Byrnes of the national House of Representatives starts a new wave of armament debate by saying he will support proposals for a larger air force, an Alaskan air base and stronger fortifications in Hawaii.
Such preparedness for war, he says, is "good insurance against it."

It is an old theme, for which there are good arguments on both sides; but the advocates of more armament usually winning. The Speaker's proposals have considerable logic in-them, and may command public support.
Americans, while loving peace and disliking
military expansion, are like other peoples easily swayed by defense arguments based on war scares.

Yet it should be clearly understood that, if there is danger in too little defense, there is also danger in too much. An important factor, too, is the spirit in which we enlarge our defenses: it is as essential to be decent, courteous and disarming to potential enemies as it is to build warships and fortifications against them.

THE NIZAM'S BARBECUE

Stories of the preparations being made by the Nizam of Hyderabad for his silver jubilee celebration sound like the fabulous doings in a fairy story. The Nizam is said to be the richest man in the world. He has fifty marble palaces and a coach of solid gold in which he rides on state occasions. For private use, this prince prefers a shabby rattling car which has been in use for at least eight years, but he knows how to entertain in marble and gold coach style.

For the jubilee celebration one thousand oxen and ten thousand sheep have been ordered for a mammoth barbecue, one feature of the program.

The silver jubilee of his fellow ruler, King George V. of England, pales into insignificance beside thoughts for this fête in India early in 1936. But for now, when the richest man in the world is also the premier prince of India, he has a right to throw a big party once in twenty-five years.

The disabled airplane, so fleet and formidable but a few moments before, came crashing to rest. The robot black men, fierce of face, raised the young pilot round with weapons. They seized his arms and forced his knees to earth. They bent his neck for the stroke of the steel. The sword whistled as it struck.

"It happened on the southern front, south of a place called Dagaal. But, no doubt thousands of American readers, finding a few lines about it in their newspapers, shuddered at this evidence of the barbarity of the Ethiopian warriors who beheaded, with scant delay, a prisoner of war already slain that day in a year."

"No quarter is being given in the fighting in Ethiopia.
Normally, if the word may be so employed, the proportion of wounded to dead, in any line of battle, is considerably exceeded. The actual deaths in battle."
In this war, so bitter is the enmity, so savage the purpose of either group of combatants, the proportion is sharply reversed. There are ten dead to one wounded.
This is the way men made war in the dawn of history.

Granting that it was brutally barbaric to behold the Italian aviator, when his plane was shot down, we must not forget, as Kipling once said of an English regiment in battle with the Afghans, that they were a well-trained, well-disciplined and a very brave set of men.
Was the clean stroke of a youthful sword upon the neck of a prisoner, an officer of the imperial air force, a modern agent of Rome, more or less barbarous than the aerial bombing and machine-gunning of defenceless cities wherein women and children were crushingly slain in the outraged names of glory? Truly it is little-chivalry-in-warfare any longer, where it was when the sword was the instrument of destruction, and not machine-chivalry it was to expect it of a debilitated black man who mourns his mangled comrade.

There is abundant room for honest doubt that Ver-dine was a legitimate reason why the various states should have passed their problems of human relief to Utah. But, perhaps a few states, as a result of drugs and other catastrophes, may have needed help from the Federal Government, but certain it is that they mark the exceptions. For instance, it would be machine-like to say that the various states, and make no mistake about it, for all this we must pay a price that will be charged against us, our children,
and our children's children—the price of burdensome
taxation, and sacrifice of freedom in the management of our personal affairs. The only means of prevention of this calamity is for the American people to awaken
to their responsibilities.

Sam Tammahill is dead after a long, useful, eventful life. He passed away peacefully, for he found a rest in friendship, and imparted it, and was more than willingly happy when with friends, and looked forward to the better years that were beyond his span.
"To sit down for a talk" with Sam Tammahill was an adventure. In comradeship, he delighted to strike blows with the humbleness of his fellow-citizens, literally thousands of whom he knew and greeted with cheerful salutes. And the kindly philosophy of his life was without stain, yet had a keenness of its own not to be forgotten. His acquaintance with the abstractions of his professional learning was thorough enough for him to prefer people in their stead.

A dried-in-the-wood democrat in politics, his party honored him with election to the Idaho member of the democratic national committee. Sam Tammahill loved politics like he loved people, but as a passion for enlightenment in politics, he was not a man of letters and became a leader of a good battle, but it was at the election polls in the court of law,
with his keen enthusiasm he proved himself the friend of his political friends, the friendly enemy of his political enemies. Infrequently he would be defeated in his own or others' battles—he was never daunted.

No lawyer would deny that his profession of late years is less respected by the laity than formerly. The lawyer's anxiety to serve the cause of his client has often submerged an ancient fidelity to truth as the official of the court. Technicality has served the cause of the litigant but has deprived the law itself of its respect. The decline is not due to the theory of the law but to the methods of its practice. Yet the copy-book maxim that common honesty is the best policy still rings true—it is merited still by the clever lawyer in quibbles and is ignored by the materialist. In the law it stands proved for the few who while shrewdness of mind to integrity of character. Of that kind was Sam Tammahill. Unassuming, capable, interested in public affairs as in his private concerns, his stewardship is a well-balanced account.

BREAKFAST FOOD

The Rev. Mr. Tammahill says potato chips may be eaten with the fingers.
Something tells us Miss Emily must have tried to spear one with a fork.

No Sudden Change
"Tallor: 'You have recently inherited a nice lump of money from your uncle. Why don't you pay me?'" Customer: "I hate all outward show, I don't want to be said that my newly acquired wealth has caused a departure from my former simple habits."

No Wonder
A woman coming from a remote section, purchased a dress on her first visit to a large department store.
The next day she brought it back saying that it did not fit her. "No wonder it doesn't fit," she exclaimed.
"Look here (pointing to the label)—Made Expressly for John W. Wambsgater."

TAKE OFF
When the first-grade teacher began to check records
she found that Little Alice was general winner of the school year, so the child was sent home.
"What the matter?" asked the little girl's mother
when she returned. "What has happened?"
"I got laid off," sobbed the child.

War Mothers Sacrifice Rings For It Duce

ITALIAN women are shown giving their wedding rings to Benito Mussolini to help their country's fight against league sanctions after it Duce made a fiery speech to a cheering crowd of 50,000 at Pontinia, asking them to sacrifice their gold to Italy's warring cause against Ethiopia. (AP Photo.)

WATERS. Those who have had a peek at the New Committee's report on the House of Morgan's financial dealings in the early stages of the World War believe it will surprise the American people.

Similarly propitious as the more tabulation of Morgan advances to Great Britain before the United States declared war were the country was maintained in the cause of allied victory from early in 1915. But they count on other disclosures to influence public opinion against a repetition. They have impounded documents which outline
a campaign to seduce the United States to the need of victory for the bankers' borrowers. The word
"corruption" appeared in their correspondence long before the United States declared war. It was an everyday expression with a special meaning.

Senator Hays hopes to score two major points for his air-light treatment with these revelations. The first is that the country was seduced to war by commercial transactions. The second is that those who made the loans know how to waste the tax.

PURLITAGE. Despite frequent
"fellers," Liberty League haven't

Isolated Family

GRAND MARAIS, Minn., Jan. 14.—(P)—Returning here today after an emergency trip to the disconsolate stricken family of Lawrence Major, of Saganagan Lake, 70 miles inland from here, Dr. J. W. Cook, of Porcupine, today said he will attempt tomorrow to reach the isolated region by plane from Port Arthur, Ont., and take the victims there for treatment.

Each year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Major, was fatally stricken with an undiagnosed malady several days ago and one of the three other children, together with Mrs. Major, is seriously ill, Dr. Cook said.

The family's first call for a
