Republicans Why at Vandenberg Proposal For Coalition Drive

Suggestion, Brings Guarded Comment From G.O.P. Leaders, Disapproval From Democrats

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Talk in Republican circles of a coalition drive to defeat Vandenberg in the coming election, today by Chairman Fletcher of the Republican committee, but the idea gained only a cold reception in Capitol.

The G.O.P. on any of the official campaign to support him of such a proposal, followed a call by Senator Vandenberg for a coalition drive against President Roosevelt. The senator added, "I would promise of political work for Democrats should the coalition be successful."

Senator Vandenberg, however, from Representative Ewell of New York, the minority house leader, with Special Representative Byrnes, two Democratic senators and others from the majority ranks, offering their criticism of the coalition drive.

The discussion, under part of a political day which saw Senator Vandenberg of Iowa declare himself a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, and a day for President Roosevelt's signed declaration of candidacy for a second term. Formal petitions entering his name in the Illinois primary were filed at Springfield.

LIVESTOCK GRAZES ON FOREST RANGE

Blaine-Beterson Gives Annual Forest Reserve

BURLEY, Feb. 13.—According to statistics contained in the annual grazing report which was prepared by Forest Supervisor Blaine Beterson at Burley, a total of 10,077 cattle and 1,100 horses and 3,170 sheep were permitted to graze on range within the boundaries of the Minidoka national forest during the calendar year, 1935.

Of this number 418 cattle and horses were considered as exempt stock and the balance grazed under paid permit. In addition to the number of stock allowed to graze, total value of the holders of preference was granted to 12 permittees and partial non-use to 35 permittees for 1935 cattle and horses and 3,170 sheep, thereby allotting to a certain extent the shortage of forage on the forest range, which has been brought about by drought conditions the past few years.

The annual proclamation of April and May last year induced a thirty-day delay in the opening of the forest ranges, and as a result stock did not get out as early as the grazing season. Lack of moisture after May 31 created a scarcity of forage during the latter part of the season, but as a whole the stock came off the national forest in much better condition than in 1934. Higher prices for livestock and livestock products have brought about a shift of opinion among stockmen of this locality, and according to Forest Supervisor Beterson, the stockmen are more encouraged than they have been at any time since the beginning of the financial depression. A large part of livestock losses were paid off during the year through funds received from the sale of livestock at favorable prices.

Recommendations Allowance
The recommended grazing allowance for the 1936 season, as set forth in the annual grazing report, is 15,000 cattle and horses and 60,000 sheep. This represents a slight reduction in both classes of stock as compared with the 1935 allowance, but according to the forest supervisor this action is necessary in order to compensate for the damage done to the forest ranges by continued drought of the past few years. However, no reductions in established permits will be necessary in order to make the adjustment in number of stock allowed to graze, the supervisor explained.

A written discussion accompanying the statistical section of the grazing report indicates that the forest service will pursue a policy of building additional range water developments and improving existing springs whenever funds are available. Already 136 springs have been developed within the boundaries of the Minidoka national forest, and it is planned to develop several more during the coming season through the use of emergency relief and CCC labor.

Another section of the grazing permits on the national forest is increasing each year. Applications for renewal of permits for 1936 have been filed at the supervisor's office in Burley and it is expected they will be returned and acted upon within the near future.

Associations Meet
Meetings have already been held with 11 cattle and horse growers' associations to discuss grazing problems and future range management plans for the various divisions of the forest. Within the near future the supervisor will call a similar meeting of the Minidoka

A total of 266 sheep and cattle associations are recognized by the forest service on the 24 national forests of region No. 4. A similar policy of recognizing stockmen's associations in the management of grazing on the national forests is followed in the nine other forest regions of the United States, the supervisor said.

Search for a break in the Idaho power company's 4000-volt power line between Thousand Springs power plant and Jarbridge, Nevada, was continuing late yesterday afternoon. A search party failed to disclose the location of the trouble.

The line went out at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, shutting off power and electric light from the Nevada mining center.

Engineers are searching for the break yesterday. Miss A. Nelson of Jarbridge, Idaho Power company, said that a crew of assistants traveling on snowshoes, and another crew led by James Woodhead, which left in two motor trucks yesterday afternoon.

The airplane reconnaissance was made yesterday by Leon Marjory, Twin Falls pilot, flying his Koolha plane, with Neal Savage, Idaho Power company lineman, as passenger.

W. R. Carpenter, Idaho Power company's Twin Falls division manager, said last evening it was probable the line had broken as a result of ice or snow, but that it would be difficult to discover.

Despite the formidable handicap of snow-blocked roads and continuing storms, he said, the search will go on until the trouble is located and the break repaired.

SYNOPSIS: Frankie Bennett and Bobby Jones suspect that either Bobby or Frankie is the author of the letter to Dr. Nicholson which caused the latter to leave the town. Bobby, however, is sure that it was Frankie who wrote the letter. Bobby, however, is sure that it was Frankie who wrote the letter. Bobby, however, is sure that it was Frankie who wrote the letter.

Chapter 25

Bobby asked how the subject of the Nicholson and came up, to tell him.

"What was it you wanted to know about Mr. Christian?" she asked. "I really wanted his address," explained Bobby. "I had to find out where he was and we've just had a rather important case from New York—you know there's a rather serious situation in the dollar just now."

"Mrs. Livingston nodded with deep interest."

"And so," continued Bobby rapidly, "we wanted to get into touch with him to get his instructions. And he hasn't left an address and having heard him mention he was a friend of yours, I thought you might possibly have heard of him."

"Oh, I see," said Mrs. Livingston, completely satisfied. "What a pity I should think."

"Oh, distinctly so," said Bobby. "Well, he's dead. I apologize for asking you."

"Oh, not at all," said Mrs. Livingston. "So that's all right," thought Bobby, as he walked away down the street. "I seem to have been told that Bobby's name is character."

"And that charming idiot of a woman will never wonder why, if I asked that charming idiot of a woman to ring up and ask for him."

Back in Brook Street, he and Frankie discussed the matter from every angle.

"It looks as though it were really plain chance that took him to the Washington-frenches," said Frankie thoughtfully.

"I know, that's exactly what I was down there when that chance remark directed his attention to the Nicholson."

"So that, really, it is Nicholson who is at the heart of the mystery, not the Washington-frenches?"

"Why only because?"

"Well, there is just one other possibility, in some way, Christian may have been connected with the Washington-frenches. He may have been one of the men who were going down to lunch with the Washington-frenches. He may have been one of the men who were going down to lunch with the Washington-frenches. He may have been one of the men who were going down to lunch with the Washington-frenches."

"But it seems a very roundabout method of doing things."

"No more roundabout than your accident," said Bobby.

"My accident was a very serious accident," said Frankie.

"Bobby nodded. Lord Marchmont's clothes and replaced them where he had found them. Then he found his chauffeur's uniform coat, and they were soon heading back to Slattery."

"If Roger has fallen for me," said Frankie, "I'll be glad to see him. I can't bear to be away from him for long."

"I'm not sure that you can bear to see him," said Bobby. "I've always heard that really dangerous criminals are singularly unattractive."

"Someone I can't believe he is a criminal."

"Bobby drove up the drive to the house. Frankie sprang out and went into the house without a backward glance. Bobby drove away. The house seemed very silent. Frankie glanced at the clock. It was half past twelve.

"They don't expect me back for hours yet," she thought. "I wonder where they are."

"She opened the door of the library and went in, stopping suddenly on the threshold."

"Nicholson was sitting on the sofa holding both Sylvia Dunsin's hands in his."

"Sylvia, handed to her feet, and came across the room 'looking frantic'."

"It was the telling me," she said. "The voice sitting in the chair, the hands to her face as though to hide it from view."

"It's too terrible!" she sobbed, and rushed out. Frankie, she said, was out of the room."

"Dr. Nicholson had risen. Frankie advanced a step or two towards him. His eyes, which were ever moist, were suddenly dry."

"The muscles at the corner of his mouth twitched. For a moment, two Frankie glanced that he was amused. And then, quite suddenly, the smile that it was quite a different emotion."

"The man who was sitting in the chair, the hands to her face as though to hide it from view."

"It's a lady. You'll find her to Mr. Astor's little sitting-room."

Bobby made his way there. He found her sitting in the chair. She was trembling and closed her eyes. She seemed to be in a state of nervousness.

"So it's you," said Bobby at last. (Copyright, 1935-36, Agatha Christie.)
