SYNOPSIS: Every time Frankie Thompson and her friends who are about to solve the mystery of Alan Cartwright's murder, and explain the episode of Henry Sanderson's "framed" murder, see them off on a fresh track. Why Bobby investigates the mysterious Dr. Nicholson. Frankie investigates the equally mysterious Cayman. In London, Frankie learns nothing about the Cayman, but in conversation with her father's lawyer she suddenly discovers that he knows a good deal about the mysterious Cartwright.

Chapter 35
NEW MYSTERY
"He was. He consulted me when he was in England a month ago. You know Mr. Cartwright, Lady Frances?"
"I think I may say I do," replied Frankie.
"A most attractive personality," said Mr. Sprague. "He brought quite a breath of the — er — wide open spaces into my office."
"He came to consult you about Mr. Savage's will, didn't he?" said Frankie.
"Ah!" said Mr. Sprague. "So it was he who advised that you should go to London. I'm sorry I couldn't do more for him."
"Just what did you advise him to do?" asked Frankie. "Or would it be unprofessional to tell me?"
"Not in this case," said Mr. Sprague. "My opinion was that there was nothing to be done, that, in any case, Mr. Savage's relatives were prepared to spend a lot of money on fighting the case, which I gather they were not prepared to do."

"The whole thing was very curious," said Frankie thoughtfully.
"Such cases are less uncommon than you might think," said Mr. Sprague.
"Cases of suicide?" inquired Frankie.
"No, no. I meant cases of undue influence. Mr. Savage was clearly at war in this woman's hands."
"I wish you'd tell me the whole story properly," said Frankie. "I never seemed to get the thing clearly."
"Mr. Savage happened to be traveling back from the United States to England in November of last year. He was, as you know, an extremely wealthy man with no near relatives. On this voyage he made the acquaintance of a certain Mrs. Tempest. Tempest, who was known about Mrs. Tempest except that she was a very good-looking woman and had a husband somewhere in the background."
"The Cayman?" thought Frankie.
"These ocean trips are dangerous," went on Mr. Sprague, smiling and shaking his head. "Mr. Savage accepted the lady's invitation to come down and stay at her little house in — Chipping — Somerset."

"There is no doubt that he came more and more under the influence of Mrs. Tempest's influence."
"Then came the tragedy. Mr. Savage had for some time feared that he might be suffering from cancer. He was staying with the Tempests at the time. They persuaded him to go up to London and consult a specialist. That specialist swore at the request that Mr. Savage was not suffering from cancer and that he had told him so, but that Mr. Savage was so obsessed by his own belief that he could not accept the truth which the new man told him. He went without prejudice, Lady Frances, and knowing the medical profession, I think things may have gone a little differently. If Mr. Savage's symptoms puzzled the doctor he may have spoken seriously, pulled a long face, talked of certain expensive treatments and while reasoning him as to cancer yet have conveyed the impression that something was seriously wrong."

"Anyhow, Mr. Savage came back to Chipping Somerset in a state of great mental distress. He saw about a 'nervous' man and, suffering from it, he sent for a solicitor. A very reputable member of an eminently respectable firm, and the latter drew a will in which Mr. Savage named and which he then delivered over to the solicitor for safe-keeping."
"On the same evening Mr. Savage took a large overdose of chloral. By his will Mr. Savage left the sum of seven hundred thousand pounds free of legacy duty to Mrs. Tempest, and the remainder to certain specified charities."
"Mr. Sprague turned back in his chair. He was now enjoying himself. Mr. Cartwright's contention was that such a will was completely characteristic of Mr. Savage. Mr. Savage had no liking for organized charities and had always held very deep opinions as to money, but by blood relationship. However, Mr. Cartwright had no documentary proof of these assertions and, as I pointed out to him, men change their opinions."

"There was no fuss made at the time," said Frankie.
"As I say, Mr. Savage's relatives were not living in this country and they knew very little about the matter. It was Mr. Cartwright who took the matter up. He returned from a trip into the interior of Africa, and came over to this country in the morning. He was forced to tell him that in my view there was nothing to be done. Possession is nine points of the law."

PLANNING DISTRICTS COUNTY'S DEFENSE

Supreme Court's Opinion Holds in Trial of Damage Suit

Twin Falls county will not be permitted to introduce evidence tending to show that the county is a charitable institution, District Judge Adam D. Barclay ruled today in the trial of the damage suit brought by the state against the county for the damage to the highway caused by an error in treatment on the part of a hospital assistant.

Judge Barclay explained his ruling was in conformity with an opinion rendered by the supreme court which held in this case that the county operates the hospital in a proprietary, rather than a charitable capacity in so far as it accepts and pays patients, and to that extent the county is subject to suit for damages.

The supreme court's opinion in this case was given when counsel for Miss Henderson appealed from a district court order sustaining the county's demurrer to the state's complaint. The court held that the county could not be sued for an injury caused in performance of its functions.

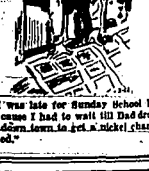

On Other Angle

Attaching the county's affirmative defense on another angle yesterday, claimant's attorney, Robert C. Morgan, presented evidence of a claim of contributory negligence on the part of a special agent who it is alleged, negligently caused an infection of the blood which was supplied by a hospital assistant. A similar infection had been prescribed for Miss Henderson following an operation on the part of the hospital, and had resulted from this infection in the death of Miss Henderson's child.

Claimant's attorneys rested their case yesterday after recalling testimony of the state's witness, Robert C. Morgan, who performed the operation on the child, and Dr. Harold C. Morgan, who attended Miss Henderson for nearly three years following the operation. Dr. Morgan's sudden death, which occurred last Thursday interrupted trial of the damage suit for two days. Trial was resumed with the same case, and was the county's objection.

POPIES' HEALTH CLOSELY SCANNED

County Physician Argues Advantage in Continuing Sessions

Attendance in Twin Falls schools has improved over last month with a decrease in new scarlet fever cases. Dr. C. W. Weaver, Twin Falls county physician, said last evening.

Closing of the schools, he said, would be of little or no value in controlling the disease, while with schools in session and two sources of spreading the disease of scarlet fever, it is possible to discover and make an early diagnosis of new cases, he said.

Dr. Weaver's statement follows:

"The epidemic of scarlet fever through which we are passing is by no means a local epidemic, but is nation wide. The vast majority of the cases are so very light that parents do not recognize them as scarlet fever, and a child in the home is allowed to return to school. Usually after a few days the eruption and other symptoms have disappeared, and diagnosis cannot be made, while the child will still transmit the disease."

"The closing of the schools is of little if any value, as is shown by the increased number of cases after the holidays. The vast majority of the cases are so very light that parents do not recognize them as scarlet fever, and a child in the home is allowed to return to school. Usually after a few days the eruption and other symptoms have disappeared, and diagnosis cannot be made, while the child will still transmit the disease."

A FARMER WRITES AN "AD" ABOUT DOUBLE-MELLOW OLD GOLDS!

Soio, New York, November 10, 1935.

P. Lorillard Company, Inc., 119 West 40th Street, New York City, N.Y.

Gentlemen:

I am an old man who knows what he likes. A hill farmer is a stubborn cuss, and when he takes to cigarettes when he's well gone by 60 years, he has good reasons for wanting those cigarettes. And for some time now I haven't touched any smoking but OLD GOLDS.

My brother's son got me on cigarettes, but the ones he gave me seemed too quick-burning. One day our general storekeeper stood me one of those Double-Mellow Old Golds, made of prize crop tobacco. And I had my first cigarette that smelt so slow and cool as my pipe, and that didn't leave a man's tongue stinging and biting like that other cigarette brand.

I've bought Double-Mellow Old Golds ever since, and every pack has been the same. I know because I'm blind, and we without eyes learn to taste and feel better than who see.

Yours truly, Jerry Burley.
