OLD ELECTRIC AUTO 'HITS 10' JUST AS EASILY AS IN 1911

Twenty-five years ago many drivers held in their teams when Mrs. P. A. Olds drove up in her electric hureless carriage. Motorists today gaze in astonishment at the same sight as Mrs. Olds 1911 model carries her, at 10 miles an hour, on a shopping tour of Tacoma, Wash.

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)—Arguments powered and stands some 2½ feet above super-balloons three, potential higher than 1926 Buick's model. A speech and the price of gasoline here dog could walk under the body alone from Mrs. P. A. Olds' unimpaired as she drives her automobile for the twenty-fifth year about Tacoma streets.

Her car, rolling steadily to the shopping district, to lunch and parties, attracts almost as much attention today as it did 25 years ago when many drivers held their breath and gasped at the sight of the first auto. Mrs. Olds continues to roll steadily along at 10 miles an hour as she did in a calmer, more leisurely day.

The car, which she has owned since it left the factory, is electric.

On April 1 this year only 30.52 per cent of the 1935 total and valuation state charge of $1,518,045 was collected. March 31, a year ago, 45.91 per cent of the $1,650,000 total charge for 1934 was still due.

Total revenue during the first 15 months of the present biennium was $2,757,330, and disbursement in general fund and special funds was $2,600,000, leaving a balance of $1,157,077.

Gypsy Weather

By MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS: Dirk Jerla has heard Ellnor Fleming tell him that she is not married, and that she is not Elmer's daughter. Dirk has taken Ellnor home after the scene, and has driven from her house, near the old store estate, across the river to Jersey. He is to meet Ellnor's cousin Isabel at a tent show, one feature of which is a fortune teller of name Dirk Jerla has presented himself at Madame Chowdhury's tent.

Chapter Four CIRCUS QUEEN

"But!" the woman inquired and looking toward him. "Did she smile, showing rather bad teeth. She looked him over, a blue-eyed young man in white summer dress and light slacks, and a bare-headed young man with drops of rain on his bright chestnut hair. A young man, she said. "Come in," she said more actively. "I tell your future and your past. I tell names and places. I cannot mislead."

It sounded much too thorough, and as Madame Chowdhury lifted her inner curtain, beckoning with a fat dark hand, Dirk murmured that he was merely looking for someone, and dropped the flap.

No knowing when Isabel would appear, and there would be the reason with Madame Chowdhury for Madame before they could leave. He had left the umbrella in the car, would wait in the main tent out of the wet. Buying a ticket, he went in, found a seat low in the reserved tier.

The orchestra were performing, flying here and there to swing from each other's hands. The rain dripped through the seams of the tent. The music to which the performers clung must be wet, he thought. Presently the man and woman in their pink slips bounded to the ring and ran, making way for the clown, a spotted, tumbling fellow whose entrance took a square of juvenile laughter.

A man stood at the performers' feet not far from Dirk. Heavy-set, dressed in loose-fitting, rather seamy clothes, he leaned against the edge of the tent, watching the rings. A weathered panama hat was pulled down on his face, throwing it in shadow, a face thick-set like his body, heavy-jawed, with a bulbous nose and a ragged black mustache.

An unlighted cigar twisted at the corner of his mouth, and his eyes stayed with the clown and the ringmaster, not missing a move, not laughing. It was an odd story to him, a gust of applause and laughter followed the exit of the clown.

"Pier!" the ring-master shouted, and Dirk turned to see a girl flying into the arena on a coal-black horse. The girl was dressed in red-light and sequins, flaring at the ankles, silver-banded boots, a silver and red bolero, a white sombrero.

Bliss and straight she stood, taking off her hat as she came, holding it in her hand. Her hair rose and fell, a long curling black as the horse. She seemed as much a part of her mount as if she had been a winged being.

Now she had dropped into the saddle, had flung her sombrero on the ground. Round and round the ring she went, the horse galloping. Suddenly she had swooped under him, had left her saddle, was in again, while the crowd applauded. Now she stood with one foot on the horse's head and one in the saddle, crouching slightly, a flying pose, a beautiful pose.

The man in the panama hat still stood at the call. There was no anxiety in his face any more than there had been amusement while the clown performed. He was endowed with faith, or with indifference.

It was over. Briefly had dropped into the saddle, had leaped over to recover her sombrero, waving with it to the applauding crowd, putting it on. Now she was standing as she had stood at the first, waving from the ring.

Dirk, clapping loudly, stood as she passed him. Their eyes met, and a little smile touched the corners of her mouth. Dirk snatched the cue from his hand, and with a detestable flourish flung it to her.

"Bravo!" he shouted.

She caught the token lightly, thrust it into the neck of her bolero, galloped out.

Almost at once the horse reared, rearing, rearing, the clown jumping at his side, endeavoring to mount him. Now he succeeded, standing on his hind legs as the girl had stood, rearing for a flash, only to bend forward with stiff knees and grip the ground, shaking him, one unbalanced leg in the air, and then the clown, affecting to be in a palsy of fear. Round and round they went. He was afraid for the clown. He was so funny. His painted grin was so funny. How could anyone be scared when he so whimsically, interestingly feared for himself?

The man in the panama hat was gone from the tent. Pierly, not quite in his place—back farther in the shadow, slightly outside the tent. A black green cap was thrown about her slight red figure, and she stood watching the clown.

Bliss, dead-white against the spangles, and the warm gold-olive of her skin.

A glance at him, and a glance back of her into the dark of the tent. Dirk apologized, and said: "You took me off my feet with your riding."

Again that little smile at the corner of her mouth. Again her eyes went to the clown.

"I'll bet you can ride, too," she said.

"What makes you say that?" he asked.

"The way you watched."

"So she had noticed him."

"I ride a little," he said. "Not like you."

Suddenly she widened, and some of the smile came from him. "You're riding toward the tent. People were standing to the left. People were in the line. The black horse didn't stop and stretch its legs."

Ali Baba Just Another Rassler, Commission Rules

New York Athletic Bosses Decline to Place Crown on Turk's Bald Dome; Two Reasons Announced

By EDIE BRIZET
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, April 23—Ali Baba, the fierce moustache Turk, may rule the heavyweight root in some states, but to the New York State Athletic Commission he is just another rassler.

The commission today declined to place the "crown" on Ali's bald dome despite his short, snappy wit over Dick Salter in Detroit last week.

The commission held that wrestling bouts in Michigan are billed as "exhibitions," that no mat championships are recognized there and that decisions rendered.

New York has a similar "exhibition" label for wrestling performances, but the commission can waive this restriction whenever it chooses. Anyway, explained Chairman John J. Phelan, Ali Baba looks like a champion.

BRUSHING UP ON THE DERBY

By ALEX MCNEIL

LOUISVILLE, April 23 (AP)—While most of the heavy money will be placed on the winter-brook favorites, there will be plenty of good honest Kentucky dollars backing the entry of Col. E. R. Bradley when he runs at Churchill Downs.

Most of the so-called wise boys probably will string along with Brevity, Coldstream, Hollywood and other strong winter-brook favorites. Kentucky, however, are partial to the Bradley entry, for the Col.'s horses have finished first four times and twice have run one-in.

And so you may count on many of a $2 wager on the 1936 Bradley entry headed by Brevity and Bantler—well, for luck.

Eleven Was Lucky
Gasp at the Downs is picking up rapidly as trainers gather here in preparation for the annual American racing classic for 3-year-olds.

Here are a few scratchbook slights: Cavalcade and Omaha, the 1934 and 1935 Derby winners, both started No. 1. Rocky Willie Bantler's first ride in Kentucky was as a starter in 1934.

Pre-Race Calculations Bemuddled When Ned Reigh Develops High Fever Following Trip to Kentucky

By ORLO ROBERTSON

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Ky., April 23—(AP)—Kentucky Derby pre-race calculations were bemuddled today when W. S. Klinger's Ned Reigh developed a high fever, attempting to lead the charges of starting Saturday and Major A. C. Taylor's Canadian-owned Indian Broom, the former player, turned in a sensational workout.

Ned Reigh, a poor shipper, developed fever following his trip from New York and ran a temperature of 102 degrees. Jack Whyte, veteran trainer, said a message from Klinger at Louisville, Va., said he would not start.

'He Did' Wins Pre-Derby Race
Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Entry Defeats Seven Other Eligibles

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 23—(AP)—Disappointing unexpected course in the face of defeat, Mrs. Silas B. Mason's He Did, a 3-year-old colt, won the pre-derby training season—a mile in 1:38 3/4, driving. He pulled up the mile and an eighth in 1:53.

Following the sensational workout, many horses predicted the Canadian Flash and J. C. Wiegner's Brevity, the favored, would hook up in a bitter early speed duel, leaving the way open for a stout finisher.

Senator Borah Announces New Allocation of $50,000

Senator W. E. Borah yesterday announced that a new allocation of $50,000, in addition to a $75,000 allocation announced yesterday, had been made available to the Idaho Rural Rehabilitation corporation for loans to orchardists.

Senator Borah the day before had announced the local chamber he would endeavor to secure allocation of additional funds for loans to Idaho fruit growers, and Representative D. Worth Clark, repeating the original allocation, said yesterday, "We have had a real battle on this as Idaho has had more money in proportion to its farm population than any other northern state."

The local chamber of commerce joined with Twin Falls Horticultural association and Idaho Vegetable Growers, Incorporated, in an appeal to members of Idaho's congressional delegation for federal loans for Idaho orchardists, after learning that similar provision had been made for fruit growers of the state of Washington.

Claud C. Pratt Sales company has enough empty oil drums to make a light board fence across the front of his fire area. And he is starting to ship our oil in compartment tank cars, but we want to tell you that it is exactly the same kind of oil as in our business over. There is one thing about our oil, it is not refined or distilled by a chemical process, neither does it contain any organic substance like vegetable or animal fat. It doesn't need any... It undoubtedly is the best oil that comes to Idaho or any other state. In fact nearly everybody is talking about it... and multiplied thousands of people are using it. We are unloading a car of lumber today, and expecting a carload of shingles to right away. My nephew has opened up his oil house in Gooding, he is as sure as I am that he has the same kind of oil and grease that we have. Any of you people around Gooding who want the best oil money can buy, call on my nephew. We also have white paint... It is 100% pure and it will hold up to the test as far as a brushful of cheap buttermilk paint. Everybody knows that my method of selling goods is on the wholesale to consumer plan, that is why, all trails that lead to our place are well-beaten with lots of travel. We can sell you a carload of lumber and divert it to your town and save you so much money that it will tickle you clear down to the bottom of your feet. Why don't you make that monkey-see-monkey, hic with that monkey wrench as Claud Pratt really crazy or is he just too fat?

Well, say farmer, I want you to get ready to help me out. I've ordered 2000 25-pound buckets of pressure gun and cup grease. That's a whole lot of grease and I want you to buy it as fast as you can, when it arrives, even if you have to store it in the barn at $1.88 a bucket. I'd like to have you buy two or three buckets if you could. If you kind of work with me, I'll save you lots of money winter and summer. This will be a good subject to talk over when you're talking over the barbed wire fence with each other.
