"In his assault on other Republicans he compared them to Alexander Hamilton as added, "But in their mind way they are making the same mistake. They may sink the Republican party in their effort to return to the old federal principles and policies would again prevail."

Star Brings Circus

TOM MIX COMES OUT OF WEST WITH CIRCUS

Thundering along the old Oregon Trail, Tom Mix and his mighty caravan from out of the Golden West will roll into Twin Falls long before daybreak on the morning of May 18. The longest circus train in all the world will follow to unfold its lions of circus panoplia at the show grounds, where, wittily, greatness will arise to house some 5000 people coming from far and near to see the one and only Tom Mix, the cowboy who rode to fame and fortune on a pony.

The pony was Tom's — the wonder horse, as children know him. Tom will be here with his famous master, Tony Junior, 100, and Warren — Tom's new horse, a beautiful six-year-old Arabian thoroughbred.

Tom Mix really needs no introduction. He is one of the best-known of American screen stars. Tom heads the big circus bearing his name. In fact, it's his own circus — the happy culmination of a cherished boyhood dream. Tom's circus is the biggest thing on wheels, the largest independently-owned outfit of its kind in America or anywhere else. It is the best part of any eastern combine.

Tom Mix directs the big show, takes part in it and presents more than 200 celebrated arena features, hundreds of performing horses, great groups and entire companies of dare-devil acrobats, death-defying aerialists, tumblers and well about everything that goes to make up a gigantic three-ring circus, menagerie and hippodrome. There'll be clown gales, acting animals, performing pachyderms, prancing fairies — and all the Tom Mix horses from the famous Beverly Hills stables out Hollywood.

A Series of Historical Sketches of Early Days in Southern Idaho

AMONG OUR FIRST SURVEYS
The first settlers of Snake river valley were squatters. There being no title they held their land by right of possession.

In 1879 a company of surveyors known as Glover and Benson, a contract for surveying that portion of Idaho lying south of the headwaters of Goose creek. They considered the idea of surveying that portion of Idaho lying south of Snake river, from Dry creek on the east to the mouth of the Little Salmon river on the west. They had no contract; but by some provision with the government a survey could be made if a required number of settlers in a given territory should signify their intention to file and deposit a sum of money, something like one hundred dollars each, which would afterwards be applied on payment of land.

Producing An Expert
The required number of settlers were not in the country, but the survey company developed a plan whereby they could substitute the names and put up the money themselves, which in most cases they did and went ahead with the surveying. After the survey was made and when they submitted the reports to the Interior department they found that the Surveyor-General of Idaho Territory had filed a remonstrance claiming the reports to be not legal, and that it had been made in a careless and unsatisfactory manner. Glover and Benson were told that the time they had spent was put up, which terminated in the Interior department sending out a man to verify the surveying. Donnelly, a large likable fellow, and undoubtedly well qualified, was selected to represent the Interior department. The field men were engaged in Salt Lake City and brought into the territory to make the inspection. Mr. Glover, of Glover and Benson, accompanied them and stayed until the inspection was completed. It lasted from spring until late in the fall and through his recollections the matter was not adjudicated satisfactorily between the two parties.

The required number of settlers were in some mysterious way produced and the entire season was given over to verifying and correcting the Glover-Benson lines, with a bunch of men who were much addicted to strong drink. The instrument men were at times unable to find their way to camp and to the outlooker it all gave the impression of a long continuous boogie party. When the inspection was completed they broke camp at a trader's store on the Oregon Trail at Rock Creek, where they were wintering at this point, and on evening meals. Glover and Benson came to my cabin and inquired if I had ever traveled over the mountains, or was acquainted between there and the Humboldt Wells, Nevada. I told them I was not acquainted with the route farther than the Hay Stock on the Salmon and they said: "Now here, we have told Mr. Donnelly that you are acquainted with the entire country and we want to employ you to drive us with your team and men over the route. We have a lot of land in the 17th farming country that lies along the Salmon and adjacent territory. We have never been over the country ourselves, but a little thing like that doesn't prevent us from giving a very flowery description of it."

"The fact of the matter is, our company wants a contract to survey this country. It should be surveyed and this man, Donnelly can help us. It is now the first of December, a little late to cross the mountains with wagons, but a little bit of snow will not hurt the looks of the country, and if you should get snowed out on the other side of the mountains, we will make arrangements for your team wintering and, in fact, pay you well for all services rendered. Next we and the company at the trader's store tonight and we will put you on the stand in a way that will not embarrass you. But remember, you know the country between here and Humboldt Wells like a book. Good-night."

Token of Friendship
In the evening I found the men waiting for me at the store. It seemed that they were all aware of the fact that I was well acquainted with the country to be traveled and I was not required to make a declaratory statement. We soon arranged a satisfactory compensation for my services. It was arranged that my party should prepare bread for the trip, which we figured would last about four days, and the balance of the trip would be made up at the trader's store.

Next morning I arrived at the store with my part of the outfit, and, after some waiting, my passengers arrived with their bedding. Then Mr. Glover, who was all business, ordered from the merchant three or four gallons of whiskey, about the same number of cans of condensed milk and one gallon of whisky. While the merchant was handling the milk, the bartender waited on us for our drinks. Then said Mr. Glover, addressing Donnelly, "Now, Donnelly, order three or four cans of sardines, a bottle of catsup, some crackers, and a gallon of whiskey. Then he said, "I don't know how to order a kitchen. Now Charlie you fix us up." It was Charlie.

I ordered a slice of bacon and some hot cakes, and stated that I thought that should complete our commissary. Then they all exclaimed, "What are you going to order us whiskey?" After some persuasion I added another gallon of what they called "pleasant water" to the list. They stated that they were intending to pass through a country inhabited by cowboys and intended to use it as a token of friendship.

Florida Hospitality
We got on our road late for a long day's journey, but the world looked bright and cheerful to my passengers, and after a forced drive we stopped at a cow camp called Point Ranch. Here we found several cowboys whose hospitality flowed as freely as did our conversation water. When we bade them goodbye the next morning, our kitchen had not diminished one iota, but our dignity department showed quite a reduction.

On our second day's travel we ran across several cowboys who were riding the range. Some were staid from a long distance. Through gestures and motions we persuaded them to come to us. They were invariably pleased with the hospitality and good spirit we gave them and all advised us to make our next camp at the Hubbard ranch. When we arrived there we found all the cowboys we had met during the day, and others who were congregated there on a cattle round-up. Our horses were turned over to the wrangler for the night, and the camp was relieved from this part of camp life.

These boys had not visited a settlement for some time, and our company was so enjoyed that the first part of the night was well gone before the blankets were spread. Next morning everybody reported for his eye-opener and the camp cook moved like he was on springs as he served that breakfast. Every body seemed to feel just a little above normal and when the wrangler came in with the jars, our horses were roped and brought to our wagons. Every cowboy as he entered the corral uncoiled his rope, throwing it over the head of his most spirited horse, and we could see that an outdoor exhibition was about to begin on a stage far removed from civilization, and we, with the exception of the camp cook, were to be the only audience.

Frontier Horsemanship
Among "squeaking" "roking," and bucking horses, cowboys dickered with open loops that when thrown brought the chosen horses to partial attention. The horses were nerved with excitement which brought out every trick of their wild instincts, and it was with difficulty that the riders managed to find their backs; and, as the cinches tightened, the fight was on. It seemed impossible for the riders to find their stirrups, but they did so with an agility that was astonishing. With loose reins, the cowboys reined the horses thru the saddle, flanked them, forked them, and threw sand in their eyes. Then, in defiance, the horses belched with rage, bucked into the air, landing on stiff legs, and going immediately into the air again at different angles, using every effort to dismount the riders. At no time did the riders give a wave of their arms, bid us adieu, and disappeared into the hills for the next day.

And we, with the satisfaction that we had just witnessed an exhibition of unusual merit, made haste "for our dinner." Mr. Donnelly, our host, made haste to our destination and again seeing us, he said, "I never expect to see another such display of horsemanship as we witnessed at Hubbard ranch."

Needless to say the hoped-for recommendation for a survey was not forthcoming.

BUHL-YOUTH RECEIVES EAGLE SCOUT RANKING

BUHL, May 9.—Harold Soter received his Eagle Scout ranking Monday night at a court of honor in Buhl. This is the highest honor a scout can receive. The boys have won the position here during the last 15 years. Nationally last year only 1169 boys achieved the distinction from among the 500,000 scouts in the country.

Gene Venter became a First Class scout and received a merit badge for personal health. William Brew and Willard Rathbun were awarded badges for personal health also. The following boys became Second Class scouts: Robert Madsen, Donald Barry, Carthel Hardwick, and Willard Rathbun.

Fifteen boys and their scoutmasters from the new Castleford troop visited the court of honor Monday evening as special guests. On Friday evening several of the boys and their leaders went to Twin Falls to participate in the jamboree being held there.

Twin Falls Man Tells Story Of Relative's Tragic Death

Marked by a nature's frenzied hand, and sentenced in 1865 to a living death at Fort Jefferson, the world's most desolate prison-torture, Dr. Samuel A. Mudd is one of the most tragic figures in American can history. That he had no part in the conspiracy to assassinate Abraham Lincoln, is confirmed by history.

Mr. Joseph H. Blandford, Brandywine, Maryland.
He had long been familiar with the story of his grandfather, and a few years ago familiarized himself with the details of the trial, discovering the complete testimony including that of his grandfather, in a volume of books, "American State Trials," which he found in the Idaho Supreme court library.

Placed in chains for performing a duty in line with his profession, life in prison was desperately bitter for the cultured doctor, who had never been accustomed to the hard physical labor he was obliged to perform. He attempted to escape and return to his "Daring Frank," as he called his wife, but he failed, and was returned to a squalid, filthy hole in solitary confinement.

Mr. Blandford recalled yesterday that his grandfather, a wealthy Maryland plantation owner, had spent almost his entire fortune on the defense of Dr. Mudd, brother of Dr. Mudd's grandfather.

Full Day Planned for Head Of Electrical Contractors

President of the National Electrical Contractors association, Earl M. Peak of Birmingham, Ala., will spend a busy day in Twin Falls next Wednesday, May 13, according to a program arranged by local members of the Idaho State Electrical association.

One of the outstanding figures in the American electrical industry, Mr. Peak is to be the guest speaker at a banquet meeting in the evening to which 200 invitations have been extended to county and city administrators and executives of chambers of commerce and civic organizations as well as to all persons interested in the electrical industry within a radius of 100 miles of Twin Falls.

Earlier in the day Mr. Peak is to meet in an executive conference with local members of the National Electrical Contractors association. A reception delegation is to meet Mr. Peak at the Park hotel at 11:30 a. m., and at noon he is to be the guest speaker at a meeting of the association.

At 2 o'clock Mr. Peak will meet with electrical contractors for a discussion of conditions pertaining to the contracting branch of the industry.

His subject at the banquet meeting, which is to be held at the Park hotel at 7 p. m., is "Industry Cooperation and Rural Electrification."

On a sight-seeing tour Mr. Peak is to be taken in the later afternoon to Blue Lake, Twin Falls-Jerome bridge, Shoshone falls, Twin Falls, and the Hansen bridge, returning on Kimberly road.

LABOR SHORTAGE ADVANCES WAGES

Beet Growers Bid for Workers to Meet Crop Requirements

Growers of southern Idaho's 25,000-acre sugar beet crop this season are bidding for field labor in a market where the need is at the peak of the supply. J. N. Dayley, president of Twin Falls-Jerome District Sugar Beet Growers' association, said here last evening.

There will be work for between 200 and 250 persons in this district's beet fields at the peak of the thinning season about May 15, Mr. Dayley said.

Referring to an announcement by J. F. Maesterson, WPA engineer, that there are 300 WPA workers in this district qualified to go to work in the beet fields, Mr. Dayley said it is evident that the local labor supply is far short of the requirements.

Under these conditions, the growers' executive said, it has been necessary to seek a supplemental labor supply in labor centers and to bid against Colorado offering $8.20 and Montana offering $9 an acre for thinning.

Although the beet growers state association has fixed a base wage of $0.50 an hour, which is the minimum, existing conditions probably will require payment of a higher wage. A wage of $1.50, which was reported to have been offered to Mexican field workers brought to the Rupert-Burley district from California last week, probably will bring in sufficient labor to meet this district's requirements, Mr. Dayley said.

Most of the Mexican laborers he said will remain in Idaho after the thinning season, which is to be followed by first and second hoeings of the beet crop.

EXAMINATIONS REVEAL DEFECTS IN EYESIGHT

Approximately 200 local school children are in need of optical attention, according to a report by William Greber, chairman of the committee for the preservation of eyesight, who addressed the Twin Falls Lions club here Friday. The report was made following the examination of 3,000 students. Parents of children whose eyesight was found defective will be advised to take the youngsters to a competent doctor for a complete examination. Greber pointed out that poor eyesight accounted for low grades in school and for various school offenders. The Lions club takes an especial interest in youthful eyesight and appeals to all mothers and fathers to safeguard their children's vision.

Early Residents Return on Visit To Twin Falls

Twin Falls for the past several days has been entertaining two visitors whose lives were at one time closely associated with the early day progress of the Twin Falls country. The two are Mark Bennett and Charles Perrine of Oakland, California.

Both men were residents of Twin Falls shortly after the water was turned into the canals and both were owners of land under the system. Mr. Perrine having been actively engaged in mining, many of the years for a number of years connected with the Chicago public school system retiring a few years ago. Mr. Bennett lived in Twin Falls for a much shorter period but still retains the farm upon which he filed during the original opening of the tract.

Prior to the birth of Twin Falls, Mr. Bennett was a newspaper publisher in Chicago and later held a number of positions as managing editor of Eastern newspapers. Following his stay in Twin Falls he was

In charge of the publicity work in connection with the St. Louis world fair in 1905 and 1906 and upon the closing of the exposition he took up his residence in San Francisco.

arriving there in 1907. The two expect to return to Oakland on Monday. They are traveling by auto.
