BORAH TAKES TIME FOR JUDGMENT ON PARTY'S CANDIDATE

Idahoan to Watch Kansas Governor in Action, Study Platform and Talk Over Situation With Advisors

(By The Associated Press) CLEVELAND, June 13—A "breathing-spell" to delay for several weeks Senator William Borah's decision as to whether he will support or be indifferent to the presidential candidacy of Governor Alf M. Landon was taken today by mutual friends.

This will permit the Idahoan to watch the activities of the Kansas governor for a while, to give more mature consideration to the platform issues on which they held conflicting views, and to talk over the situation with advisers back home.

Friends of the presidential nominee hope that time will bring the Idahoan into the Landon camp although he refused to support Herbert Hoover for reelection four years ago.

No decision was expected until after Landon's speech when he is notified formally of his selection to head the Republican forces in the 1936 election. It may be delayed longer.

Landon allies are known to have made conciliatory gestures toward the Idahoan. No direct contact was made with Borah in Washington but influential persons have endeavored for diplomatic activities.

Several telephone calls have been made from Cleveland to Washington during the last two days.

While Borah, alone among those who went down to defeat in the tune of "O Susannah," has failed to pledge his support to the Kansas governor, he has made no direct attacks on him.

15 MEN HELD FOR TERRORISTIC ACTS

Bonds Fixed at $25,000 Each; Number Accused Totals 42

DETROIT, June 13 (AP)—Fifteen men were ordered held today under bonds of $25,000 each on charges of plotting to kill two political enemies of the Black Legion, bringing to 42 the number of men held on terrorism acts since the bullet-riddled body of Charles A. Pool was found in the trunk of a medical man's car here.

In addition to the 42 held here and in Jackson, Michigan, on charges of murder, conspiracy, kidnaping, and other terrorism acts, 15 more are sought by authorities bent on reaching the shadowy high command of the black cloaked night riders.

Former Mayor Arraigned—A former mayor of a Detroit suburb and the state commander of the Black Legion were among the 15 who stood mule at the arraignment, but investigators said they are convinced they must go beyond the miscellaneous groups of "captains," "colonels," and "brigadier Generals" in custody to solve the two central mysteries of the masked society—its size and its real objectives.

Three of the men charged with conspiracy of murder, William W. Volaine, mayor of suburban Ecorse, and the other 12, including the state commander and chief executive officer of the night riders, were charged with the slaying of a new hat.

Drafting of the campaign strategy of the Republican presidential nominee was one of the first steps while nearly 200 residents from the governor's home town crowded about him in his executive office, though he had passed his mind.

Then they went into a conference room for a visit with Mrs. Landon and John Landon, the governor's father.

Republicans Map Vigorous Drive With Landon, Knox And Hamilton Taking Lead

Nominee To Invade East And Far West

Final Plans Wait

(By The Associated Press) CLEVELAND, June 13—Plans for a militant and whirlwind opening of the Republican campaign to defeat President Roosevelt, possibly within the next ten days, tonight were mapped here by members of the party's high command.

Among the rear guard remaining after the Republican national convention it was tentatively decided that they should in the earlier campaigning would be John D. M. Hamilton, energetic co-chairman of the national committee.

Take a hand and become increasingly active in behalf of his own call for a "fighting campaign" as the election nears. Landon will lead both he and Hamilton would travel extensively and turn to the radio frequently.

Friends of the Kansas governor, disclaiming that they spot for him, said they expected him before long to invade the East as well as the Far West.

Final plans, including an elaborate nomination station, will be made here today.

Adjourment Goal Of Congressional Chiefs

Leaders Organize Intensive Drive To End Session Before Convention Opens

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, June 13—An intensive drive for adjournment of congress not later than June 20 was organized by leaders today as Republicans drifted in from their national convention and Democrats looked forward to their own conclusion in Philadelphia June 22.

Some doubt tinged the hopes of the leaders, however, as they prepared to take up their legislative burdens Monday after a week's recess.

With the controversial issues surrounding the tangled tax bill still to be met, house and senate conferees adjourned today until Monday, four days of deliberations being projected to far as an agreement on the revenue measure was concerned.

The main point of difference between the senate and house centers around the question of taxing undistributed corporate profits. The house approved a graduated tax ranging up to 42 1/2 per cent while the senate voted for a flat 7 per cent levy.

Report Not Ready—While the conferees were reluctant to discuss the situation, they said definitely that a report would not be ready Monday.

Wilson conferees receded it was hoped that the bill conferees as well as those on the deficiency-relief bill and other measures would have been over to the restoration fund.

Farley Ridicules 'Republican Ticket'

Bourbon Chieftain Calls Landon 'Synthetic Candidate'

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—Terminating Governor Alf M. Landon as a "synthetic candidate" for president, Farley declared today, chairman of the Democratic national committee, issued a statement tonight that ridiculed the Republican ticket.

"This statement is a confession of guilt on the part of a bankrupt Republican party. In effect, the American people are asked to perform the dangerous experiment of turning over the reins of government to a man whose record has been so bad, whose life is a mystery, and whose career is public life is without a single achievement, whose record is so bad, who is not even equipped for the exacting duties of the White House."

"No one knows what his plans for the next four years are, what he proposes to do."

Charges Inconsistency—Farley stated that he considered how the Republican leaders "kept from laughing out loud," said that "they did not even mention Roosevelt's name when they nominate a man who advocated political far more drastic than the chief executive has ever advocated, who is charging the Republican party with 'dumping the bomb' on the party."

"Every single Republican who had a part in shaping party policy for the past generation has passed over the side of the party in the last 18 months ago" was unheeded by 35 per cent of the American people.

Farley stated that he was appealing to Hoover, Vandenberg, Knox and Westworth as those "passed over."

The Republican plan, Farley said, was to "offer one part of the country an imitation of the Roosevelt administration" and to "offer another part of the country a return to old-fashioned reactionary Republican principles."

IDAHO DELEGATES PRAISE PLATFORM

Condemnation of Reciprocity Treaties Finds Favor

CLEVELAND, June 13 (AP) — Republican platform provisions condemning reciprocity treaties and calling for protective tariffs won praise of Idaho's delegation members last night as they prepared to quit the convention city.

While the Idahoans were vitally interested in the monetary declaration of sound currency and depressed cotton over the statement of Presidential Nominee Alf M. Landon of Kansas that he favored gold, they also were cheered by the two other planks.

J. P. McCarthy, Wallace, one of Idaho's most ardent silver supporters, said western miners who are interested in bimetallism would be disappointed in Landon's statement—but felt the platform strong enough to hold them to the Republican ticket.

"The reciprocity and tariff problems have great bearing on Idaho because of its agricultural and lumber resources."

The eight Idaho delegates carried out their avowed intention to vote for any man who would be vice president. When the roll was called the state fell in line with those supporting Colonel Frank B. Rowland.

Last night the delegation scattered. Only former Senator John Thomas, Gooding's ally, Landon, Rexburg, and John Spencer, Grangeville, planned to return directly home.

The new Lincoln-Zephyr is what I have always thought a fine motor car should be, and yet the cost price is low and the up-keep is practically nothing.

Speaking of up-keep, I have been getting from 14 to 17 miles per gallon on my gas, and this mileage includes heavy town traffic with one stop after another.

I can sincerely say that I am thoroughly pleased with the new Lincoln-Zephyr, its superb performance and small up-keep.

Yours truly,

Lupe Velez Takes Economy Seriously

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—A temporary substitute Lupe Velez arrived from England today with a lesson in thrift.

"The pepper mill is a serious matter," she said, and her husband, Johnny Weissmuller, was "tired of it all" and was saving their money to retire.

According to J. she has placed herself on a 4-week allowance, she said, and her husband is operating on $40 a week.

"We never spend any money on ourselves," Miss Velez assured those who met her. "I have never seen the inside of a beauty parlor and I never go to a hairdresser. My hair is naturally curly and I do my own nails and all the rest of it."

"And we never," she added, "go to night clubs."

Weismuller, busy in Hollywood, was unable to meet her.

GOODING, June 13—J. Edward Warner, district commander and W. W. Francis, district adjutant, both of Twin Falls, held the annual inspection of the Perry Byram post of the American Legion here, Wednesday night.

Commander Warner commended the Legion for the condition of records and especially congratulated the post on the increase in membership during the past year.

BOY HIDING
 "I told Pipolo everything," Hoke went on. "and asked him to take Roddie and me to Finland with him. I told him about Torbin and how Roddie wasn't to blame, and how he had kept straight as long as I was near him—Robert, too. And I knew how Roddie and I could ride, I said we would bring Bowie, too; that Bowie was being boarded at a stable in Jersey, and he would go over and get him."
 "Pipolo said he would take it over with Clara. But Torbin had sold Bowie and that I know. He had sold Bowie to the people in Jersey. I cried. Punny I should cry over Bowie, but I didn't. I had been over Roddie, I had not cried."
 "Then some one knocked on the door. It was not for Pipolo or any one in the house. Pipolo asked me if I could have been followed, and I said no. I was with him. But I wouldn't let him leave Clara, who was not well. He told me to go in an application for passport. He could see difficulty there for Roddie, and so could I."
 "Roddie stayed close by me, for he saw I was ill. Sometimes I'd lock the door, and he'd come into the room, and stretch out in one of the chairs, or take a bath, or smoke. You remember about that? How you asked Mary about the cigars? I smoked, and I had to smoke one?"
 "This didn't last long, for Father came. You sent for Father—why didn't you? It might have been because I was ill, but always the thought of Roddie was uppermost in my mind. I had kept in touch with Mother. She knew I was with Roddie in New York. I knew about it, but she kept me from knowing the same thing—if I loved them, to come back and bring Roddie. She knew the influence I had over Roddie, and I was with him. She couldn't understand why I didn't use it. Finally Father wrote a sort of ultimatum. I was to come home, or else."
 "In my next letter I told them I had married. Mother wrote—one more and that was all. I knew Father wouldn't have come unless you had wired him. I knew you had him wired with him. I thought you knew what Roddie had done, and had told Father."
 "Roddie was in the passage right then. He said I was leaving the room to take him to stay there, no matter what he heard."
 "Father knew nothing, except that I was ill, and that it was not I, but you, who had sent for him. If I had only known that—that I didn't know that—that Roddie would never go back, would never be taken; that it was not Roddie's fault, and a lot of other things, for I was with him, and Father looked so—hard."
 "He didn't get the whole story out of me. He knew that Roddie would never be left the room that Roddie was wanted for something at home. He knew why I had married. He knew that I had married a man who was a stranger, and had not thought of—that I had abused the sacrament of marriage, and that I was in a state of danger of disgrace. He said that Roddie should come home where he belonged, and since I had not sent for him, he went away."
 "Roddie came in when everything was quiet. Fortunately, Mary had left her door shut that night—Rupert's door. Roddie said that Father was right, that we must go away, that we had no right to bring this into your house, that he had not wanted to. He would find a place for us, and we would change our names."
 "Oh, Dick, that changing of names—If you knew what it does to you! I had a little money left. I told him to go ahead."
 "The next day... You remember When I was showing you the yellow gown... you came into the room, and talked with me, and I saw that you loved me. I saw that you had been trying to protect me from you didn't know what, even though you wouldn't admit it; that you wanted to help me, no matter what I was."
 "Do you think I was harder to go when I knew that? When I knew that I loved you too? It was easier. I could kiss you and go, happy—actually happy—that I hadn't harmed you, and was going to harm you."
 "Dick's arm tightened about her. "But if you loved me, and knew I loved you... why wouldn't you come in to me, even then?"
 "Because you would have made me stay. You would have insisted on sharing it. This was all I could do to keep you from me, Dick. You may not understand. Dick, dear, never mind."
 "The trouble with poor dear was, I was to be so bad to Roddie's own, and I would wear to Roddie's citizenship. Sure, they weren't after Roddie—not yet—our Father."

would have known. Perhaps Torbin had learned that it was Chow who told of hoping, for the best, but I was certain of nothing.
 "Roddie found out that little place, and we waited for the passports. Pipolo and Olga sailed, to expect us when I went over to Jersey and tried to buy Bowie, but the man wanted more than I had. I was sure he'd come down, and just wait with Roddie, when you came and found me, and told me about Rupert's wanting to see me."
 "Rupert's idea had had a sort of revelation while he was ill—a realization, you might say, that I was in trouble, had been in trouble when I married him. He wanted to come home, and do what he could for me. When he told me this I explained that I had needed money and that that was all, but now I was actually thinking of telling him, and asking him to help Roddie and me—asking him to have the marriage annulled, and help us get away when this—this—other happened."
 "When I say to myself, if I hadn't listened to you when you told me Rupert was asking for me! But of course I say, 'if only Roddie hadn't come that night!'"

RUPERT TO PURCHASE SPRINKLING EQUIPMENT

RUPERT, June 13 — That Rupert favors a plan for a city sprinkler system, which would include equipment purchased by the mayor and city council was determined by an advisory election held here Friday afternoon, called by Mayor R. B. Turner and the city council.
 A light vote was cast, 68 favoring and 21 opposing.
 The question upon which the election was called and on the special ballot was: "Shall the mayor and city council be authorized to purchase and install, and have the city of Rupert, Idaho, purchase street sprinkling and street flushing equipment and provide for the maintenance of the same for the year by the levy of a special tax of three mills on each dollar of assessed valuation of real and personal property within the city?"

SIX DECADES BACK

A Series of Historical Sketches of Early Days in Southern Idaho

On the plains riders had to be sent ahead to pilot the company to a camp where water was abundant and the procedure. Each day brought its new experiences. Some were pleasant and some were discouraging. The emigrants would be met who gave bad accounts.

The year previous, 1855, had been a troublesome year with the Indians; and the dread of being surprised was always with the emigrants. It was always in the darkest moments and most trying times that Mrs. Brown's influence was most keenly felt.

When women and children depended under the burden and fear of the wilderness, it was her voice that cheered them. Guided by her great interest and a Christian desire to help, her judgment was sound. But those strenuous duties, together with the hardships of life, began to tell on her health, and when the Brown family was compelled to lay over for the company and to suffer for days at a time, their mother was made sallow with her ever-falling health of the mother, but it was not until they had reached Idaho that Mrs. Brown became aware of her true condition and the impossibility of her realizing the consummation of her plans.

It was Jim Summers, a true westerner, long in the employ of the Wells-Fargo Express company as messenger. As he, with uncovered head, insisted approached that sad group, Mrs. Brown called her children to her and gave them a smile which became permanent in the rigid features of death.

She had been an angel. Gently closing her eyes and folding her lifeless hands upon her breast, Jim Summers turned his sympathy to the sad children and husband. Knowing full well the soul of the good mother rested peacefully with its Maker, he spoke kind words of sympathy to the living.

Some days later as Jim Summers was returning from his mission, he halted at the lonely grave place, placed a wild flower at its head, he sent a silent message of love and good wishes to that orphan family on their way to Oregon to carry out the wishes of their departed mother.

they found and located land adjoining each other. By hard work and economy, they became prosperous and influential, and their only cause of grief was the loss of their mother and the fact that had prevented her from reaching Oregon. They felt at least her bones should rest on the Oregon homestead if her grave could be found. Her name was always coupled with that of the good express messenger and the kind Providence that had sent him to their camp, and he alone could direct them to that lonely grave on Snake river.

He was finally located by letter through advice from the Wells-Fargo Express company, and fifteen years later, in 1881, equipped with a horse and pack animals, the youngest son traveled by packhorse and found the grave of his mother. Proving the remains, he packed them to Oregon and buried them on the homestead. Her influence had always been with them, and now her bones were buried where her grave could be kept green.

EARLY DAYS ON THE OLD OREGON TRAIL AND THE PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF NEWTON HIBBS

As the old-timer of fifty years ago or better, I have seen the present Oregon Trail, with its rugged, made smooth by gravel and cement, with its sign-of-way fringed by shade trees, and with its well-cultivated fields, modern farm buildings, and up-to-date automobile parks. He hopes and looks upon carrying for his license plates, speeding their way through Snake river valley, and as the old-timer passes his journey along the roadside and watches the mad rush of tourists pass by, he says: "What a difference! What a change between now and the mad rush of the home-builder in the wagon days of years ago."

Now the tourists on missions of pleasure make a trip across the continent in a few days, while in the old wagon days the emigrant consumed an entire season in traveling from the middle states to the Oregon country in quest of a homestead.

These are the days of oil, water and gas; those were the days of wood, water and grass. The emigrant's progress was impeded by swollen streams, bad roads, and troublesome Indians—but there was a bright side to the emigrant's travel. They were compelled to travel in organized companies of considerable size for protection; they were mostly from those middle or southern states whose people were noted for their social disposition; and usually the train's organization included programs of social features.

Horsehoe pitching was the favorite game for the middle-aged men; card games were indulged in by all; while music, singing, and dancing were the supreme amusement. A familiar site in an emigrant camp was two or three old men astraddle of a wagon tongue, playing checkers. A visit to a well-organized emigrant train furnished the visitor for his children, and the visitor was usually made to believe (that every emigrant was on the reception committee.

If you joined a party around a camp fire, an ox yoke would be brought and placed at just the right angle and the party would be seated in comfortable seats. If you joined in the dance or song, you would be introduced to the most beautiful girls in the train, and these were some real beauties; but you had to look deeply for they were in the rear of the train.

The emigrant was a good enterpriser in the camp and was glad to be entertained by the settlers. They were fond of listening to western stories, especially those of Indians or of the Oregon country, which they had pictured as their future home.

The writer remembers that at the track above was had a characteristic I guess every community had its peculiar character—and ours was in the person of Captain Stewart. Being an ex-sea captain, he was our first justice of the peace.

Artialdo Yarnas

He was a large man, of commanding presence, with a pleasing voice and convincing language. Captain Stewart, as he was always called, had a peculiar bluish-tinted complexion, the two middle toes of one of his feet were connected by a web or had grown together. He was a good story-teller and usually one of his feet were connected by a web or had grown together. He was a good story-teller and usually one of his feet were connected by a web or had grown together.

After giving this concrete evidence to substantiate his story, the Captain would launch into Indian stories that would be bloodcurdling. He would stop in the most interesting part of his story and could only be persuaded to continue by a drink of brandy. In this way the Captain received a great many drinks, which had the double effect of making him continue and whetting his imagination to a general point. In fact, all of his Indian stories were purely imaginary. The writer remembers listening to him telling an Indian story which was a hair-raiser to a crowd of emigrants. The Captain himself was the hero, and in his vivid imagination he wore that old-timer at the store elbowed into the crowd to listen.

Time after time he had been surrounded by Indians, only to make some "miraculous" escape, either through his good timing, his powerful strength, or his cunning. On each occasion, just before he would reach the climax, he would walk for his brandy. Then finally the Indians had driven him into a blind canyon; they pursued him to the farther end and there was no possible way of escape; he had fired his last cartridge (the Captain was showing signs of fatigue from the effects of the brandy). The Indians were closing in on him (all the listeners were holding their breath in suspense). The captain's eyes closed, and he was asleep.

The emigrant hurriedly aroused himself to take another drink of brandy. As much as they were awake, the Captain took the glass and drank the contents like an invalid would drink a remedy, and then the emigrant in great excitement asked, "Then, what did they do?" The Captain gave a sigh of relief, and replied, "Then they killed me!"

Newton Hibbs was a boy of eleven when he crossed the plains by ox-team in 1862, and, as he said, he was too young to work but old enough to fish. Mr. Hibbs has vivid reminiscences of his trip, and has kindly furnished me with the following:

"There was no permanent white camp along the course of the Old Oregon Trail—in September, 1862, the Indians of the plains were generally hostile during the period of the civil war, and the massacre of Minnesota was the first of a series of outrages that occurred in many sections of the Indian territory. The Indians had adopted a general plan to prevent emigration, while the military forces of the government were reduced on the frontier. Fort Hall and every other abode of white men had been destroyed or partially destroyed before that date."

"There evidently had been a general plan to prevent travel across the continent. The Oregon Trail was to be especially blocked. Bridges were destroyed and passes were entrenched in advance of the season's travel. The buffalo were herded away from the trail in the belief that impeded travel and starvation would result from lack of food. However, formidable military protection was afforded in due time to avert a calamity. The effective military protection of the emigrants of the Oregon Trail in 1862 was a brilliant example of generalship—a fraction of a regiment was available for this important service."

"A scoutman, who was virtually a Sioux prisoner, risked his life to inform the captain of a company of soldiers of the plan of a general massacre. This alarm brought about the organization of every train into a military force. Weak trains were consolidated to practically a fighting force of one hundred arm bearers. Squads of soldiers were stationed at intervals to maintain discipline and defense tactics from Omaha to the Pacific coast settlements."

Defense Successful

"Not one of these organized trains ever suffered seriously from Indian depredations. No Indian of any plain tribe ventured within fifty miles of these organized trains in 1862. Many massacres occurred in areas where military orders were disregarded. One example of Indian atrocities was the murder of five people, three men and two women, on the Oregon Trail between American Falls and the present site of Twin Falls City in September, 1862. The victims deserted an organized train for reasons unknown to await a following train, of which the writer was a member. During the single day interval the murder was committed and the wagons were burned. The aid and relief of interment were conducted by more than two hundred mourners who manifested much grief for their nameless fellow pilgrims."

"That picture on the brain of the writer, a boy of eleven, has not been dimmed by sixty-four years of varied and more or less eventful life. The writer is positive that this occurred between the American Falls and the crossing of Rock creek, and on a small stream that made into Snake river, and which would very likely be Goose creek."

"The writer as an emigrant of 1862 was too small to be subject to military discipline or training, camp duty. He was qualified to take advantage of every opportunity to angle for trout. Many hidden pools honored him as a pioneer. Well-to-do of the plains, with mountain trout of the tribe. On one occasion a squad of soldiers found this writer, a straggle, lost in the glories of sport, and A. W. O. L. and, concluding a military interference with personal liberty, imposed a K. P. duty on an enthusiastic fisherman, which was a very humiliating sentence.

"Rock Creek crossing near the present site of the sugar factory was a camp ground long to be remembered. The oxen, famished for water and feed, struggled up and down the canyon, and the roads were delayed till darkness approached to afford necessary duration for grazing. Some sort of poison killed several head of stock at this camp, and the meager power of the train was insufficient to continue on the morning schedule. Cows were drafted from the dairy herd in compliance with a military order, and several days of delay were necessary to train the cows for draft service."

"The emigrants of this particular train were the first settlers of the Twin Falls tract, for that one week. And by the way, this settlement was in the jurisdiction of the established occupancy. There were deer and sage hens for food, but no jackrabbits. Shoshone falls was a permanent and superior attraction thirty-four years ago. There was an industrial trail through the sagebrush, from the river bottom, and the road was free to run that age, when water was free to run down hill, a great flood poured over the falls in September. The writer captured a juvenile swimming hole gang on a truggerly to the falls. The tumbling flood was awful when we viewed it from the rock rim. The wildness of the whole visible world was made frightful by earth tremors and airwaves beneath. We were arrested on the last lap of the eight-mile tramp with no desire to swim in the leavril below the falls."

"A squad of soldiers appeared at Rock Creek, where we were camped on the rock bottom, and ordered the wagons removed to higher ground as a precaution against Indian attacks."

"To rest and train the cows to pull required a journey of one week. The flour train was short because of large family demand. To meet the common occurrence of individual selfishness a train-management council was called to enforce an equitable emergency distribution of the rest of the flour."

"When flour replenishment was afforded the supply was very low and the price was one dollar a pound. This costly replenishment was acquired near the present site of Huntington. This was the western limit of the Indian warfare zone of 1863."

INTRODUCTION

Neighbors, in any community, enjoy a larger measure of "happiness" by displaying a spirit of cooperation. Our whole district, in Twin Falls and all of the smaller surrounding communities, possess with an unusual amount of this cooperative spirit. The business and professional men, the farmers and laborers, the citizenry in general, are always glad to support any project which will help to improve the lot or promote the good-will of their fellow-burgers.

As a result of this fine idealism, many interesting situations arise each day. And weekly, in this column, I shall try to give you some of my thoughts regarding them.

I hope these little articles may give you pleasure and that they will, perhaps, inspire you to feel-as-I-do-that this, indeed, a favorable spot we live in, a most excellent town and one with a countryside surrounding it that has no superior.

"Next Sunday, Mrs. White, of the White Mortuary, will comment on farmers."

NEXT SUNDAY, MRS. WHITE, OF THE WHITE MORTUARY, WILL COMMENT ON FARMERS

Shotmakers Open Twin Falls News Best Ball Tourney

75,000 Fans Pay Nearly $1,000,000 To See One-Sided Match

48 Golfers Entered As Qualifying Ends; Pairings Announced

Dewey Hutchinson Ties Sam McGinnis In Race For Medalist Trophy; Playoff Scheduled

Forty-eight determined shotmakers, the cream of the district's golf crop, will take to Twin Falls Country club course for first round matches of Twin Falls News Southern Idaho best ball tournament which swings under way today and will close with the finals next Sunday.

Completing the qualifying test last night, nine golfers entered to bring the total to 48, two short of three complete flights, as five of the nine last day entrants started the fans as they broke into the championship flight and upset the schedule in general.

Dewey Hutchinson, former city champion, made a last minute bid for fans as he shot a par 72 to tie Sam McGinnis in the race for the medalist trophy. McGinnis, due to his first day qualifying, still ranks first in the list of pairings.

With a 75, Hutchinson followed McGinnis at nine o'clock this morning for the medalist trophy.

Fred Ruth, member of last year's championship team, took fourth position with a 78. Charley Casey and Carl Emerson each and Fred Huth and Bob Stephan, waiting until the last minute, came home with an 80 to push Tony Leonard into the president's flight. Leonard qualified earlier in the day with an 84.

Also entering the president's flight on the last day were Dick Price with an 82 and Ruth Dunn with a 92. Kenny Self qualified for the first flight with 102.

The first round pairings, sent Sam McGinnis and A. C. Campbell against Jimmy Winterhoer and Pete Wray; Harry Denton and Jimmy Sinclair against Fred Stone and Joe McNeil; L. L. Culbertson and Carl Emerson against J. G. Tolson and Bob Stephan; and Fred Huth and Charley Casey against Dewey Hutchinson and Grant Padgett.

President's flight pairings place Tony Leonard and A. O. Kracker against Mel Cosgriff and N. F. Rice; Graf Seal and Earl Davidson against Jack Moss and R. W. Hudson; Rupert Williamson and Fred Huth against Jack Moss and R. W. Hudson; and Fred Huth and Bob Stephan against Dewey Hutchinson and Grant Padgett.

The team of Wey Arnold and G. T. Ruppert drew the first round in the first flight. Pairings are: Russ Miller and Harry Stalkin against Mel Cosgriff and N. F. Rice; Wey Arnold and G. T. Ruppert against Jack Moss and R. W. Hudson; and Harry Stalkin and Tony Leonard against Dewey Hutchinson and Grant Padgett.

The initial round, opening today, must be concluded by Tuesday night and the semifinal round play will be held the remainder of the week, closing Saturday night. First and second round matches will be at match play over 18 holes.

Next Sunday the 36-hole championship match will be played along with the 18-hole finals in the other two flights.

'They Never Come Back,' But Schmeling Is Serious In Try To Upset Precedent

BY CHARLES GRUMVICH NAPAHOCH, N. Y.—Max Schmeling in training here at a country club nestled in a notch of the lower Catskills, hasn't changed his tune. "Joe Louis," says the ex-champion, who seeks to be the first ever to regain the heavyweight title, "is very amateurish."

All Pre-Fight Dope Points To Knockout Within Five Rounds

Joe Louis Faster, Stronger, Eight Years Younger And Far More Deadly Puncher Than Schmeling

NEW YORK, June 13 (AP)—Primarily to find out just how long it will take "Poker-Face" Joe Louis to flatten the third ex-heavyweight champion he has encountered, Maximilian Siegrist Otto Schmeling, close to 75,000 fight fans will pay nearly $1,000,000 for eyewitness privileges next Thursday night at the enlarged Yankee stadium.

The chances are it will not take much longer than it requires to spall the German's full name. Schmeling won't be quite as long a shot to win as Jimmy Braddock was on the night Jimmy came through in a 12 to 1 to 10 Max Baer for the world championship. But there won't be much difference, at least there appears less doubt about the outcome.

Within Five Rounds That was the message that the wrong way, Louis will finish the one-time "Anton schlager" within five rounds, at the most. Naturally, after being on one track so consistently and so monotonously, the fight experts begin looking for some way to veer off. They know it's a one-sided match but they have been looking for an out, just in case a miracle happens. A title bout with Braddock this September looks for the winner. Jacobs has both principals under contract for future engagements. The heavyweight title no longer carries the prestige and value it once did. Braddock, a great guy personally, has a strong following but he is strictly on the outside looking in, so far as the big money is concerned. The only way he can make a real financial strike is to fight Louis.

WOUNDED WOMAN FIGHTS FOR LIFE

Charges Against Alleged Assailant Await Shooting's Outcome

Shot twice Friday night through the right shoulder and chest by a young man who she and her husband had befriended, Mrs. Nell Van Gilder, 40, wife of C. Raymond Van Gilder, Twin Falls grocer, was reported to be in "fair" condition at the hospital here last evening.

The alleged assailant, Verlin Ober, 28, truck driver, was held in the county jail on an open charge awaiting the outcome of Mrs. Van Gilder's injuries.

Prosecuting Attorney Edward Babcock who yesterday launched an investigation of the shooting, said there was evidence that Clark opened fire when he was surprised in attempt to discover and steal a cache of money at the Van Gilders' grocery.

Tells Story
Clark told officers who arrested him on the scene of the shooting Friday night that he was a "stranger" at the store and that he fired to prevent what he believed to be a hold-up attempt. He used Van Gilder's gun, a .38 calibre revolver, and all six cartridges had been fired when the weapon was taken from him by Dr. R. A. Drake, physician, residing next door to the grocery, to whom Clark ran for aid after the shooting. Officers said Van Gilder was asleep in quarters the Van Gilders occupied at the rear of the store, when the shooting occurred.

Mrs. Van Gilder had left the country, she was accompanied by a cousin, Christian, truck driver, who pushed the stalled car with Mrs. Van Gilder at the wheel, to the rear of the Christian's truck here.

Clark is alleged to have first fired two shots at Christian who was sitting in the cab of his truck, and then emptied the gun at Mrs. Van Gilder who stood between the truck and the stalled car, in the glare of Christian's truck lights.

The Van Gilders, it was learned, has assisted Clark financially in his trucking operations between Twin Falls and California.

TRUCKS CUT RATE ON SPUDS, ONIONS

Vegetable Producers' Secretary Sees 'Rescue for Farmers'

Asserting that "the motor trucks again have come to the rescue of Idaho farmers," Carl L. DeLong, executive secretary of Idaho Vegetable Producers, incorporated, announced here last evening that two and probably three of the largest motor truck lines have reduced rates on potatoes and onions to 50 cents per 100 southern on southern Idaho to southern California, including charge for icing in summer or heating in winter.

This reduction, DeLong said, was granted on request of the Idaho Vegetable Producers, and is said to be effective when the movement of the early potato crop to the Caldwell district gets under way.

He listed as truck operators granting the reduction, the Utah-Glendale and Garret lines, and probably the early potato crop to the Caldwell district gets under way.
