CO-OP YARDSTICKS
In a series of newspaper articles by William Philip Hanna, for the Scripps-Ewing papers, the writer tells of an interesting tale with Albin Johansson, head of a great Swedish co-operative system which does a business of one hundred and forty million dollars a year.

The logical conclusion of your policy of 'better goods, better housing, better service, better living' for less money than anybody else—said the writer, 'is that you'll eventually own Sweden.'

This is the sort of service that co-operatives anywhere should render. Their best contribution, aside from whatever immediate saving they can effect for their own members, is to improve general business efficiency by putting individual enterprise up on its toes.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG (NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS)

WASHINGTON BY IRA BENNETT
UPROAR. As the echoes of tumult and shouting die down the news of the coming legislative session continues to come from New York and Chicago, but the direction of strategy will remain in Washington—particularly New Deal strategy which stays in the hands of President Roosevelt himself.

IN the quiet of his White House office the master of the situation, the director of the Philadelphia convention, framed its platform, edited its keynote, sifted out loyal New Dealers to replace doubtful workers on the national committee, stamped his speech, and signed the laws that were made at his command.

COURT. Labor, represented by William Green, John L. Lewis and others, did all it hoped for at the Philadelphia convention. The administration is not ready to put manufacturing, mining, etc., and all other industry under control of the federal government.

PHOENET. The U. O. P. high command is making ready to sharpen the issue between the New Deal and the judiciary. Emphasis is laid on the assertion that the temporary chairman was only the echo of President Roosevelt—that when Barkley implied that the supreme court had blocked justice to farmers and labor he was speaking for the great majority of the people.

FATE. As experienced Washington observers see it, the main question of the campaign will be this: "Can we secure ways to enlarge the power of the federal government at the expense of the states?"

FOOTBALL. The Walsh-Hesley act is bound to become the subject of a heated legislative campaign. It will go into effect three months hence. It represents organized labor's last hope of forcing industry to yield to labor's demands for a more equitable and better labor conditions.

STANLEY WALKER HAS DISCOVERED THAT THE PLAYERS ONE IS CALLED that the English author of the famous English author of the house of the future for consideration in the year of old timers remembered he had turned out some really easygoing and entertaining material.

SOFTLY. The U. O. P. research corps, here and at Topeka, is going over New Deal records with a fine-tooth comb. Indications are that Senator Alben Barkley will hold the high light of the campaign.

NOTES. O. O. P. is moving cautiously with regard to the Walsh-Hesley act. It attacks it too vigorously labor will be antagonized by New Deal and O. O. P. are inserting resolutions in the Congressional Record, summing up the situation, the advantages and disadvantages of congress.

DEFIANT. The union party combine has a right-wing Democratic project, headed by Al Smith, has another point in common besides its hostility to Roosevelt and his policies.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 30.—Bernard MacFadden seems New York's most unrepentant headline hunter. He's not in the news for sponsoring a bunton derby—he's running for president.

His up-the-Hudson state and at the other times. Much of his life has been the energetic crusader, switching from one thing to another.

He sponsored physical culture restaurants, magazines and gymnastic resorts. If a venture does not turn out successful in a year or two, he knocks it in the head and forgets it.

Ghost writing. I hear, has gone into "Lapses." A year or so ago there were several dozen men and women who made a good living at the unusual calling. The ghost-writer wrote articles for magazines and newspapers and sometimes even books published under the names of those who employed them.

From the sidewalk the other day I noticed seven women, all young, drinking at a bar in West 52d street. The only men about were the bar tender and a few waiters.

Stanley Walker has discovered that the players one is called that the English author of the famous English author of the house of the future for consideration in the year of old timers remembered he had turned out some really easygoing and entertaining material.

Another how many recall the handkerchiefs tucked in the rubber collar of the high light of the campaign. All aboard — If you can't get a board get a plank!

JUDGES TO SUGGEST NEW PENSION LAWS

Social Claims Set-Up in Idaho Claims Attention of Officials

BOISE, June 29 (AP)—Five Idaho probate judges were named tonight by their state association to assist in drafting legislation to remedy weaknesses in present laws relating to administration of the social security setup in Idaho.

The five are John Jackson of Boise, B. B. Bland of Caldwell, Guy L. Kinney of Twin Falls, D. W. Polley of Emmett and W. F. Cochran of Gooding.

They were selected at the first meeting of the state's probate judges, who formed a permanent organization and named Judge Frank Harris of Weiser — one of the four living members of the Idaho constitutional convention — as their president.

F. L. Davis of Rexburg was named secretary-in-charge.

The organization adopted a resolution calling for establishment of 17 years instead of 18 as the minimum age for which social security relief can be provided to dependent children.

Present regulations of the social security act, as to qualifications for assistance, were approved by the judges, who serve as members of their respective social security boards.

Governor C. Ben Hess opened the meeting with an announcement he shortly will appoint a state-wide committee to cooperate with the judges in drafting legislation to bring about greater efficiency and uniformity in administration of the social security act.

The group was organized for the aged, the blind, dependent children and crippled. And to provide compensation for members of the boards.

"We believe the social security laws are here to stay," he said.

Wyoming Merchants Win Rainfall Wager

SHERIDAN, Wyo., June 29 (AP)—The Sheridan Press lost its rain-making wager with local merchants by .04 of an inch today.

The deadline was reached at 5 p. m. with the sun shining through scattered clouds which for a time promised—but failed to make good—showers.

The Press, seeking to combat a recent dry spell, agreed to give the merchants free advertising if less than 10 of an inch fell during the week ending today.

If precipitation exceeded that figure, the merchants were to pay for their week's advertising at regular rates. The newspaper's cause brightened yesterday during a shower, but it ended with total precipitation since last Monday standing at only .06.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hyton, investigating the murder of old Arthur Burdett, has found only one man who could have done it. One is Captain Reeves' admission that he quarreled with the old miser an hour or so before he was shot to death. The other is Dale Shipley, warden and relative of Burdett's, is annoyed that Hyton caught him in his eavesdropping. He sees a figure approaching him over the fields.

Chapter 13
TWO MEN

"Hello, Nancy—'nervy' Ranger, here."

Ranger bounded up and made a little salute with his floppy hat. "All the agreeable horsey snail on Dale's leggings and boots; what a difference might exist in the way of conversation for his divinity happily did not trouble him.

Nancy Featherstone felt embarrassed; that was only one reason why she should have chosen the path by Fielden Cottage for her afternoon walk and she was certain that it was screaming itself aloud to high heaven.

"It's going to freeze again," Nancy said as it rained on them; "but it's any hunting."

Dale cocked an eye round the black winter woods and the sombre sky.

"Won't be much frost tonight," he said optimistically.

"Are you going out on Friday, Dale, if it hunts?"

"I expect so."

"I hear you've bought a new horse."

"Who the devil told you that? You can't do a thing in this place without somebody knowing it in five minutes."

Nancy flushed. "I heard Saunders talking about it, that was all," she said.

Dale laughed unpleasantly. "That groom of yours knows everything about her? As a matter of fact I haven't bought it yet. At least I haven't paid for it."

"Nobody ever does pay for anything nowadays, do they? At least not on the nail."

"Depends how much money you've got, I suppose," Dale said gloomily.

"Ranger, Ranger."

"What's the matter with the dog?" "Why he's gone into your garden, Dale."

Ranger, impatient but wary, duly came to heel.

"Yes, Dale," Dale laughed. "You've got a voice on you just like a man."

A quick look crossed the woman's face for a moment as she bent over Ranger to snap his lead on. "I suppose you think that's a compliment," she said as she straightened up. "Well, it must be getting on for tea time for Ranger and me, come on, Ranger."

"Why not come in and have a cup of tea with me?" Dale suggested. "I dare say Mrs. Somers will knock something together for us."

"It's very kind of you, Dale."

Fielden Cottage was almost exactly twenty times as old as its owner and, many people would have said, just about twenty times as secure and dependable. It had been built by some honest men of simple homely material, with the result that it still stood firm after three and a half centuries, and fitted with perfect appropriateness into its surroundings.

"Mind your head," he said as he opened the front door and stood to one side, and Nancy duly ducked her head and crossed the threshold. She had been in Fielden Cottage before, of course, and the boyish unkindness of everything, the entire absence of flowers and a dozen other things, always curiously teased her heart. A log fire was crackling in the brick grate and Dale, unhearing the pair of bellows from some corner, said in his usual way: "Nancy, see if you can get a bit of life into the fire whilst I dig out the coal, and then well soon."

Nancy knelt on the hearth rug before the tantalizingly unwept hearth said, like a princess at some strange rite, "proceed" to induce the miracle of flame into the reluctant logs.

An odd business, she thought, the human heart. Of all trivial things Dale could have asked her to do this one which hurt her most; said the one which she would have first chosen.

"Have you the fire going?"

"Revering splendidly."

"Good. You're a marvel, Nancy. I told Mrs. Somers to dig out something special for me and she had called on me and she said it was high time I had a lady to look after me together. What do you think of that?"

Mrs. Somers, flattered by the unusual attention of company, had called on her in the afternoon, and as much food as six people could have comfortably eaten stirred in great quantities.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Somers."

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Somers."

"I hope you're keeping well, Mrs. Somers."

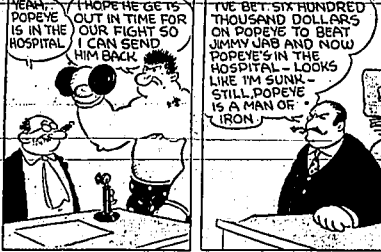

"Yes, thank you. How are you, Mrs. Somers?"

Mrs. Somers put the tea tray down with a careful deliberation. There was a matter which warranted close attention. At the age of sixty-eight she had as much restfulness, leaning back in her chair, as any woman of half her age.

"Well, it's not so bad, Mrs. Somers."

"Nancy nodded. She knew practical-
