March of the Red Flag: According to current press dispatches events in Spain may be summed up as amounting to a struggle for control of government with a Fascist group on one side and Communism on the other, with the Reds apparently holding the cards.

Anyone who pretends to argue that the growing strength of the Communist movement is not a menace to organized government throughout the world is either a deliberately ignorant or willfully unintelligent person.

Even in the United States remarkable progress has been made in the direction of a form of government which has very little in common with the democracy under which this country has grown great.

Spain will probably go the way of Russia, just as Germany and Italy would probably have gone had not a choice of two evils leaned in the direction of the British.

ONE BIG UNION: John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, seems to be getting ready to withdraw his forces from all connection with the American Federation of Labor.

Lewis has his own ideas of unionism and one of these provides for the organization of the workers in all industries into one big union which would short embrace all the crafts of what ever sort employed in the industry.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome. Lewis has his following well in hand and it should be remembered that not all unions are affiliated with the Federation.

PROBAGANDA EPIDEMIC: In times of epidemic, health authorities tell the public how to keep well. Similarly, Dr. Clyde R. Miller, head of the Bureau of Educational Service in Teachers College, Columbia University, offers the public a propaganda antidote. It sounds simple. The hearer need only ask: "Who holds the opinion, who utters it, and why?"

Intelligent and sound argument cannot be hurt by such critical inquiry, while prejudice and emotion can be stripped from false argument.

The cure might work all right, but how many Americans are energetic enough to apply it, particularly to the propaganda they want to believe?

TELEPHONE VOICES: Few people, perhaps, have ever heard their own voices. That is, heard how they sound to other people. It can be done with a phonograph record, but only singers and actors avail themselves of it.

Some telephone genius has worked out a device whereby a person can talk into a phone and then, in a few seconds, hear his own words coming back to him exactly as he spoke them. It proves to be a popular attraction at exposition fairs.

"LOUISIANA PURCHASE" (Lafayette, Ind., Journal and Courier) The indicted leaders of the late Huey Long in a political move to discredit the federal government. The move goes to prove the indictments have been sought for political ends.

THE DROUGHT IN THE POLITICAL (Moscow Star-Mirror) The dry spell in the midwest will have its political side, unquestionably. To date there is no comparison between the weather and the election returns as well established as to be beyond controversy.

But that was before the days of recurring famines when crop production was the saturation point of consumption, and stayed there year after year, the bottom dropped out of prices, and bumper crops no longer were a source of wealth but a curse.

BRITISH: Tariff lightning strikes in unexpected places, as American tariff-tinkers have learned. The American tariff on Canadian farm products is going to be raised.

NOTES: Protests from drought farmers have been received in Washington, saying they don't want American exports opening in Canada as farmers are working their goods into the British market.

CLARENCE: New York organizers learn that the administration had a lot of work in saving an open rupture in organized labor ranks last week than the world knows.

THE BREAD: Now that the show-down has been postponed, informed New Yorkers believe a temporary compromise will be worked out to prevent the Lewis and Green factions from trying to blow each other out of the water.

THE PLATFORM: "Popper, what is a platform?" "A platform is a declaration of unobtainable objectives, so expressed as to arouse the maximum number of voters."

TO THE OBSERVER: The Lewis and Green factions are working on his second hand car for about an hour. "What are you looking at?" asked the motorist.

WASHINGTON: BINA BENNETT TARGETS: Many a congressman shuddered when he heard Dr. Townsend's announcement that his "movement" would not "bother" itself to any political party.

By keeping away from parties Townsend confuses his work to capturing support. He is a candidate of the Townsendites would join the Union party.

TACTICS: Experienced organizers of such trends as the Townsend movement predict that Townsend will gain many votes in the house.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK, July 28—That amazing case block of West 51d between 5th and 6th avenues, which Louis Sobol has dubbed Swing Lane, continues in addition to its gastronomic galaxy.

A Dog's Life

and eat and wear, what the more fortunate would not think to buy. Could we call that an adequate living? But if $200 a month is more money than one can use or need, then let their maker take the money.

On the other hand, the administration has paid over 20 billions of good money for what little recovery we have to date, yet the only thing they seem to worry about now, is can they keep what recovery they got until after the election.

Yours truly, D. E. Burkey, Buhl, July 20th.

Editor Twin Falls News, Dear Sir: We feel sorry sometimes, for critics of the Townsend plan, when they come to the last ditch in their argument to plan, throw up their hands and tell us that $200 is too much money. The old folks would be overpaid, etc.

Most all critics seem to favor what they like to call an "adequate" pension. Now just what do they mean by an adequate pension? Webster, defines the word adequate as "equal to, or sufficient for some specific requirement." So a pension of 18 cents a day would be sufficient for my tobacco bill or laundry bill, or for my house rent, but it may not be sufficient to cover all three items and therefore would not be adequate.

If I have always lived in a novel and lived a pauper's life, then 30 or 40 dollars a month would mean a gold mine to me. But if I happen to be a member of congress or a railroad president or the head of a big corporation, I hardly would call $50 a month, adequate. Perhaps a $50 a month pension, is all that Uncle Sam is able to pay. All right then, but let us not call that "adequate." We should try to be frank and honest about this pension issue. How far do you suppose two old people would get with a $50-a-month pension, if they lived in a large city, as many thousands do. Where they would have to buy all their living after going through the hands of a board of middlemen and processors, there we would find them living in the slum part of the city, perhaps in a two room but and children are forever trying such stunts as cartwheels, walking on their hands, back somersaults, standing on their heads. In time most boys grow impatient along these lines, but most girls do not. In the first place, one can pay any attention to a girl's efforts. Father, brother, or mother help Tommy to maintain his balance in some grotesque position. If Sally ever learns to tumble, she will be best suited to her own unaided efforts. No one expects a girl to keep on standing on her head or turning cartwheels, so there seems no use in spending much time in teaching her.

But tumbling is just as valuable to a girl as to a boy, and she can get quite as much fun and exercise out of it. The school or college girl can tumble finds the ability an asset in the gymnasium or on the campus. Many girls' colleges today have classes in tumbling, and at a recent college celebration, the tumblers were an important feature of the day's activities.

Tumbling exercises every muscle, makes for correct coordination of body and mind, and is a means of self-defense for all because. It is of inestimable value to the dancer, and also to the actor. But to become an expert in the art, one should begin young. It would be good for Sally if her male relatives would help and encourage her as much as Tommy.

ST. LOUIS, July 28 — By his teeth, Dr. Augustus J. Padbury, 33-year-old dentist, will know a young scoundrel who threw down a slight of teeth today after being caught twice over the head with a monkey wrench.

Robbery apparently motivated the attack. "I'd recognize his teeth anywhere," the dentist told police.

DEFENBACH GIVEN TOWNSEND'S OKEH

Pension Leader Endorses Senator Borah's Rival for Nomination

BOISE, July 22 (AP)—Byron Defenbach, lone opponent of William F. Borah in the Republican United States senatorial primary, August 11, had the personal endorsement tonight of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the $200-a-month pension plan, endorsing Defenbach as released tonight by E. C. Davis, state manager for the movement in Idaho.

It read:

"To the people of Idaho and the state area board of Townsend organization:

NEW STORE POLICY AID TO PRODUCERS

Grocers Rule Farm Products Out as 'Loss Leaders'

A voluntary pledge by members of the Food and Grocery Chain Stores of America, operating more than 25,000 stores, to cooperate in elimination of the practice of using agricultural products as "loss leaders" for the purpose of luring customers, is worth many thousands of dollars to Idaho producers. Carl L. DeLong, executive secretary of Idaho Vegetable Producers, Incorporated, said here last evening:

The Idaho producers organization, he said, had requested this action following chain stores' offering of Idaho No. 2 potatoes for 89 cents per 100 pounds in Kansas City early last November, when the delivered price of those potatoes in carlots at Kansas City was $1.25 to $1.35 per 100 pounds.

The result of "loss leader" offerings of Idaho potatoes, he said, had been to demoralize the open market and put all individual growers and grocers out of the market for Idaho potatoes. The practice, he said, had gone on for several years.

Prompt Consideration

Chain store operators, DeLong said, gave prompt consideration to the growers' protest. He quotes a statement by L. A. Warren, president of Safeway Stores: "We are very anxious to cooperate with farmers in all territories, not only because it is good business for us but because we number them as the largest group of our customers, value their patronage, their good will and their friendship."

The vegetable producers, DeLong said, had advanced suggestions for appeal to legislative action, and carried their protest direct to the store operators. He ascribed credit for the successful negotiations to Mr. Warren and to F. Lee Johnson, Idaho commissioner of agriculture, and to John A. Logan, executive vice president of Food and Grocery Chain Stores of America.

Stores on Record

The chain stores went on record against demand or acceptance of "unfair price concessions" from farmers or their representatives," declared for agricultural prices "quoted on a net price basis to all distributors," opposed "use of agricultural products as loss leaders for the purpose of luring customers" and wish tend to depress prices to the farmers, and plotted cooperation with farmers "in the effective marketing of excess seasonal production and surplus, giving due recognition in the course of such efforts to the laws of supply and demand."

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hyton has captured the Nancy Featherstone's home. Sergeant White takes a walk. Nancy thinks Hyton is about to arrest Dale Shipley, the man she loves, for the murder of his uncle, old Arthur Burdett—and she is correct. While handcuffed to the back of his neck, she sees him in the arms of another man, deep in Nyeon wood. Now White has told her the man she saw; she has blurted that perhaps White knows something about the Burdett case he has not told.

Chapter 33
HYTON

"For God's sake Jimmy," the woman shouted, "act sensibly. It's got to be given and taken between you and me. You forget about this. I forgot anything I know about Monday night and—"

"The man stopped her with a snarl. 'You think I'd let you interfere with my life now?' he said. He stood up and the scraping of his chair legs for long, and then he was the only sound in that small room until the woman broke the silence with a little sob of fear and called out:

"Put that knife down. If you come a step towards me I'll scream. I swear it!"

Nancy Featherstone did not leave her house all day long. No tradesman called (she had put them all off by telephone); her room would be back until six, and Annie would be back until eight; she was completely alone with her thoughts—and her prisoner in the old strong room upstairs.

Her thoughts were not particularly pleasant ones. She was a million miles from regretting her amazing action of the morning, but more sober reflection was making her realize that she could not keep the game up for many more hours.

At four o'clock she walked into the kitchen to set about making herself some tea when she had to put the kettle on when she was startled by the ringing of the front door bell. A caller? It was possible, though she could not think of anyone, except the Factor, who would be at all likely to call.

She thought of all the things that might be get tired of ringing and go away; but on second thoughts she decided it might be wise to do that.

The bell sounded again, somewhat impatiently, and she left the kitchen and made her way to the front door turning over in her mind various methods of getting rid of the Mr. Mr. Stoeck.

She opened the front door and stood in amazement. Dale Shipley, aggressively cheerful, stood on the doorstep.

"Hello Nancy," he cried brightly. "I just looked round to see if I can manage tonight after all. It fits you suits you."

Complete silence followed, and even to Dale's eagle eyes it became evident that something was amiss.

"What's up?" he asked. "You look scared out of your wits."

"Nancy found her tongue. 'In God's name what have you come back for?' she said in a whisper. 'They're after you.'"

Shipley looked at her as though he thought she was mad. "Who's after me?" he asked at last.

"The police—the Inspector."

"The Inspector chap, what on earth for?"

"For Arthur Burdett. For murder—"

Dale Shipley stared at her in comic astonishment, then he put his hand to his forehead and laughed long and long; he was feeling in high good humor and this totally unexpected jest was a rare lull in the end of the day.

"Well he's making a damn fool of himself," he said, still laughing, "because I didn't murder Arthur Burdett any more than you did."

"I—" she took a deep breath. "I thought you might have."

"Of course I might, and so might anybody else in the village if it comes to that. But why pick on me? I can't imagine that gets hold of you women sometimes. Anyway, I'm not too late for a cup of tea, am I?"

Nancy stepped back from the door and made him welcome. "No you're not too late for tea, Dale," she said. "I'm just waiting for you."

"Andie out?" he asked stepping inside.

"Yes, Annie's out."

"Did you hunt today?"

"They were both in the drawing room now and suddenly she laid a hand on his shoulder and said: "Dale, what about that note, what did it mean?"

"I—I had to go up to town on some business that was in a bit of a hole, but as it turned out I want you. You can forget that note, Nancy."

There was something about his answer and the manner in which it was unsatisfactory to her. She tightened her grip on his shoulder and made him face her.

"You're not being slow, are you? God's sake tell me the truth. Did you write that note having anything to do with Arthur Burdett's son because you killed him?"

"You must be going batty, Nancy. I had no more to do with killing Arthur Burdett than the man in the moon."

She had to believe him, and yet she was still not satisfied. "The Inspector thinks you did it—"

"After me?"

"Yes, for heaven's sake Dale don't play the fool about this. If you had anything to do with it you're in danger."

"Look here Nancy," he said soberly. "I swear I had no more to do with killing Arthur Burdett than the man in the moon. You're not being slow, are you? God's sake tell me the truth. Did you write that note having anything to do with Arthur Burdett's son because you killed him?"

"You must be going batty, Nancy. I had no more to do with killing Arthur Burdett than the man in the moon."

Hyton's cold reply. The Inspector was born to the verge of depression, chattering with cold and ravenously hunger.

"I should think you have made a mistake, young lady," he said rickily, "as soon as ever I can get in touch with White you'll be arrested for being an accessory after the fact."

"Yes, I dare say. By the way Mr. Shipley's downstairs. I thought you'd like to know."

Hyton stared at this extraordinary woman.

"What do you mean, he's downstairs?" he asked suspiciously.

"What's the name now?"

"Mr. Hyton I'm frightfully sorry. I can't expect you to believe that, of course, but I really am. You'll never realize why I had to—no, I don't know, but that doesn't matter. What does matter is that Dale Shipley's here and Inspector, he didn't do it."

"Didn't he?" Hyton asked grimly. "Well give him a chance to tell you all about that at the station, where?"

Nancy was overcome with a flood of indignation as she silently led the way back to the drawing room.

"Just a minute," Hyton said quietly. "He's not here now. He's in the back yard on one side by the arm and the 'od on one side to let him pass." She turned the handle and pushed the door open but did not immediately go in. He had allowed himself to be made a fool of once that day and did not propose to repeat the experiment.

However the only thing that happened when the door opened was a group of boys to attend to the occupant. Those attending from Richfield are Harold Davis, Robert Rose, Tommy and Billy Reynolds,
