SURVIVOR RELATES FLIGHT FROM FIRE

Five Members of Surveying Party Escape; Three Meet Death

MAINTA, Mont. July 29 (AP)—M. K. Knuchel of Washington, D. C., related from a hospital bed here tonight the story of how he and four other members of a surveying party escaped a forest fire by taking refuge in a cave in the rugged Little Rockies.

Mr. Knuchel's surveying party with other men from Landauy was sent to the fire camp at Lodge Pole canyon Saturday night, he said, and there they were up into the fire area.

The group made headway against the flames for a while, he recalled, but at about 10 o'clock the fire broke through the trees toward them and drove them against a limestone ledge.

The intense heat and choking smoke forced them to crawl down the mountainside where they came upon a small cave.

Mr. Knuchel, Gordis Miller, Art Elderham, Francis Williams and Edwin Palmer crowded into the opening, the doctor said, while the others were still outside.

Complete Text Of Governor's Message

BOISE, Idaho, July 28 (AP)—The text of Governor C. Ben Ross' message to the legislature of the twenty-third legislature:

"Members of the legislature: I have been deeply concerned with the emergency which has arisen, any one of which being of a serious nature, would warrant the calling of this session.

"First, to provide additional funds for the aged, blind, dependent children and other relief purposes; second, to authorize the local optional subdivisions of the state to cooperate with the federal relief agencies and relief programs; third, to provide legislation necessary to secure to the state the actual proceeds in the unemployment compensation phase of the national social security act; and fourth, to furnish sufficient appropriations from certain state departments and bureaus that they may be conducted in the manner intended by law.

"The Social Security and Relief Board appears to have a plan for participation in the national social security assistance and health programs. It is my belief that such a plan could not be put into operation because the United States cannot afford to assume the financial conditions of the state of Idaho.

"On December 31, 1936, we found a cash balance in the fund of $433,127; against this balance was the following indebtedness: general fund notes, $1,000,000; warrants payable, $267,602; and a total current liability of $1,267,602. On December 31, 1937, we find a cash balance of $1,000,000. The warrants payable on March 31, 1938, represent only the floating warrants; warrants issued but not presented for payment on that date.

"No matter how healthy current operating conditions are, we must have a definite plan for the trend of total indebtedness before drawing any definite conclusion. In December 31, 1937, we had a balance of federal emergency relief funds available at the beginning of the period. That balance is now depleted.

"It became necessary early in March to apportion direct relief on the basis of the needs of the applicants. In addition to taking care of the aged, we have the responsibility of caring for the children of life for 3,562 dependent children at a cost of $360,000, and 219 blind, dependent children at a cost of $1,000,000.

"The present financial policy of the state is to maintain a bonded debt of 1938, the total bonded debt of the State of Idaho could be increased for your convenience. I have caused to be placed upon your desks the budget estimates which were prepared independent of this legislature together with the actual collection of revenue for general purposes up to July 1, 1938, and the present estimate of revenue that will be collected between July 1, and December 31, 1938. You will find that it is estimated that it would be necessary to levy an ad valorem tax of $1,000,000 on personal and real property for 1938, and the estimate of revenue that will be collected between July 1, and December 31, 1938. You will find that it is estimated that it would be necessary to levy an ad valorem tax of $1,000,000 on personal and real property for 1938, and the estimate of revenue that will be collected between July 1, and December 31, 1938.

"The money necessary to supply the needs, can be very properly taken from the income of the sales tax. Since December 31, 1934, the sales tax receipts have averaged $18,728,300 per month. The balance in the general fund is $1,000,000. It is my recommendation to your honorable body that we do not take any of the money apportioned to the general fund for the relief of the aged, blind, and dependent children, but that we take that part of the accumulated balance, which will be apportioned to the general fund for the relief of the aged, blind, and dependent children, but that we take that part of the accumulated balance, which will be apportioned to the general fund for the relief of the aged, blind, and dependent children.

"I feel that I should present to your honorable body the history of the sales tax of Idaho, so that you might know what effect your actions will have on the balance of the biennium, and meet its obligations. The receipts of the general fund for the year ending June 30, 1937, were $18,728,300. The receipts of the general fund for the year ending June 30, 1938, were $18,728,300. The receipts of the general fund for the year ending June 30, 1939, were $18,728,300.

Blast Aboard Cruiser Off San Diego Kills Two and Injures Nine

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 28 (AP)—Two sailors were killed and nine others injured in a broadside gun explosion aboard the U. S. S. Marchand, light cruiser, at sea off southern California.

The dead and injured were rushed to port, arriving here tonight. The dead: Percy William Oser, boatwain's mate second class.

Leo Elvira Morand, seaman, second class. Injuries suffered by James Edwin Benedict, jr., seaman, second class, caused amputation of his right arm. His son Robert William Oser, seaman first class, was among the most seriously injured.

It was learned unofficially that the broadside and fragments of the rifle tubing of the port broadside gun were blown out.

Attorneys for James Claim New Evidence

LOS ANGELES, July 28 (AP)—A claim by defense attorneys that they are in possession of "newly discovered evidence" resulted today in a delay in the pronouncement of the death sentence upon Robert E. James, former Birmingham, Ala., barber.

The court set the new date for sentence as September 8, after first postponing a life sentence upon Charles Hope, former sailor and the confessed accomplice of James.

James was convicted Friday, and the verdict made death mandatory. Hope pleaded guilty to the murder of a woman.

Hope and James were convicted of having tortured Mrs. James with rattlesnakes and that falling to cause death, to have drowned her in a bathtub.

It is now necessary that this legislature clarify these appropriations laws and make available certain monies collected for specific purposes.

"By the provisions of Chapter 4, Title 28, I. C. A., the state of Idaho is in cooperation with the various counties undertaken to provide hospitalization for duly qualified persons suffering from tuberculosis.

"At the present time there are 28 patients being cared for in various hospitals. The appropriation made at the first extraordinary session of this legislature has proved inadequate and no funds are now available with which to meet the state's share of such expense.

"The diversion of the sales tax proceeds from the general fund will be in any way affected by the operation of the state of Idaho. The general fund is on a safe margin and above the ordinary level of necessary amount for a balanced budget.

"Cooperation of Local Units—"Cooperation, it has been the practice of the various governmental agencies to take care of their relief program independent of state aid. It has been found that the provisions of the old laws are inadequate to meet present conditions.

"It is therefore necessary to weld these political subdivisions into one plan and grant the governing bodies of the subdivisions the authority to spend public funds for social security and relief purposes.

"There are a number of state departments and bureaus that are in difficulty due to conditions existing in their appropriations laws. The deviations of the state government most concerned are the department of agriculture, the department of animal industry, and the bureau of occupational hygiene.

PENSION PROBERS STUDY TESTIMONY

House Committee Members Begin Effort to Draw Report

CHICAGO, July 28 (AP)—Five members of the special committee investigating the Townsend-old age pension plan shut out all interferences tonight by studying the testimony of 1200 pages of testimony taken during the hearing in Washington last spring, in an effort to draw a report.

Declining to venture any opinions on the probable makeup of the report, the committee members took the afternoon session at the hotel headquarters and had the telephone disconnected.

Representative C. Jasper Bell (D-Mo.) committee chairman, said it might be a couple of days before the group had a report ready.

Representative John B. Rostenkowski (R-Ill.) and Representative Samuel L. Collins (R-Calif.) said the committee was studying the testimony. Both declined comment on the outcome except to say that probably nothing would be known in a day or two.

Collins, regarded as favorable to the Townsend cause, said before the session began he "doubted very much" whether he would sign the report.

Hollister, asked what the position of the committee was, said he had signed it, said he assumed that would be sufficient to make the report official.

Other committee members in attendance were Oscar Lucas (D-Ill.) and Joseph A. Gavagan (D-N.Y.). Absent were Representative John B. Tolan (D-Ohio), William H. Cramer (R-Pa.) and Clare K. Hoffman (R-Mich.).

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, who walked out on the hearing and advised his aides to refuse to testify, arrived in the city by plane while the committee was in session. Townsend was accompanied by the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Louisiana.

RELIEF PROBLEM TERMED SERIOUS

150,000 Northwestern Farm Families in Need, Says Tugwell

WASHINGTON, July 28 (AP)—An assertion that the federal government faces a "serious" long-time problem of emergency relief for perhaps as many as 150,000 northwestern farm families was made today by Herbert C. Tugwell, the reclamation administrator.

The statement coincided with an announcement that an additional $27,000 in direct loans and grants had been apportioned to distressed farmers in eight states.

Emergency Relief
"The serious thing worrying us," Tugwell said, "is emergency relief during the winter, next spring and probably longer for destitute farmers in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming."

Tugwell listed the resettlement program as next in importance, declaring that some opposition had developed among business men in the areas who feared that neighborhood purchasing power would be endangered by thinning out the rural population.

He added that while some farmers voluntarily were evacuating and others were seeking advisory and financial assistance from the reclamation department, the government's more definite policy of resettlement awaited recommendations of the president's great plains drought area planning committee.

He forecast that the cattle business would continue where it has fluctuated in the past and said the administration policy was to keep as many persons as possible on their farms.

Allocations Totaled
Monday's allocation by the rural rehabilitation division brought the total of loans for livestock feed and husbandry to grants to $6,719,750 in all states.

During the day the government's crop reporting board announced a 10 per cent drop caused by the loss of prospective crop of green peas for manufacture.

To estimate a crop of 187,970 tons compared with 208,120 tons last year and a 5-year average of 183,070; and a pack of about 17,000,000 cases compared with 24,038,000 last year.

About 30 applications for absent voters' ballots already have been received by mail, the auditor said.

PARSONS URGES AD VALOREM TAX

Auditor Argues Against Proposed Abandonment of Property Levy

BOISE, July 28 (AP)—State Auditor Harry W. Parsons, in a quarterly accounting of the state's financial status, urged Governor C. Ben Ross to abandon the idea of eliminating the 1938 ad valorem tax for state purposes.

"It has been my idea that an ad valorem levy of $500,000 for 1938 would be necessary to avert a deficit in the general fund in 1937," Parsons said.

The 1935 legislature authorized the board of equalization to levy $100,000 for state purposes in 1935 and $1,000,000 in 1936.

Governor Ross recently stated that the entire $1,000,000 levy could be eliminated.

"Of the present $500,000 surplus in the general fund," Parsons said, "$200,000 is from the sales tax, and revenue from that act is uncertain."

Six Years Accumulation
"And the balance has been accumulated over the past six years."

"If the 1938 ad valorem tax, which is collected in 1937, were eliminated, we might run short of funds. Therefore, it would seem best to play safe."

In his quarterly report Parsons showed a cash balance of $1,662,475 for June, 1938, in general and special state funds.

With three fourths of the 1937-1938 biennium elapsed $274 per cent of the 1935 ad valorem tax charge of $2,118,045 against counties has been paid, leaving a balance of $222,088 unpaid and not due until next January. Twelve counties have paid in full.

The state's bonded debt was reported reduced from $3,968,500 to $2,200,000, or 71.54 per cent, in the past 13 months.

Estimated revenue of $2,830,100—other than property tax—has been more than realized, Parsons said. Collections have totaled $2,950,319 or 104.27 per cent of the estimate.

McDONALD LEAVES ESTATE TO WIDOW

Heir to Standard Oil Fortune Divides Property by Will

BOISE, July 28 (AP)—Under provisions of a petition filed in probate court by attorneys for the late James McDonald II, of Boise, the bulk of a Standard Oil company estate estimated at upwards of $500,000 was left to McDonald's widow, Mrs. Lulu Brown McDonald, his third wife.

McDonald, 46, was found dead in his garage here July 1. A coroner's jury found he died accidentally of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The action for probate was filed by McDonald's attorney, William H. Langrois of Boise, who was named as executor of the will. A will drawn January 20, 1935, and a codicil executed November 5, 1935, were attached.

Dollar Each to Sons
McDonald left $10,000 to Leslie Ouz, who served as his chauffeur; $500 to James V. Burnett of Obelisk, an old friend; $100 each to his servants, $50,000 to Langrois, and $1 each to Jane McDonald, 17, a stepdaughter and his two sons, James and Robert A. McDonald of Burlingame, California. A collection of books and art was left to Yale university, alma mater of the decedent.

Property included 40 acres of land in Ada county, some real estate in Boise and Coeur d'Alene counties, stocks, bonds and securities held in trust by the Pullon Trust company of New York and Joseph A. Grayson of Cincinnati, Ohio, and personal property.

McDonald, II, was the son of James McDonald, former London associate of John D. Rockefeller. The elder McDonald died in Washington, D. C. 18 years ago leaving an estate estimated at upwards of $5,000,000.

They age these tobaccos for two years to take out all harshness. These tobaccos are not only blended but cross-blended...this brings out the better taste of each tobacco. It welds the different flavors into one better flavor. It helps to make Chesterfields taste better. When you smoke a Chesterfield you realize they're not like others...They Satisfy.

WOBSEY

The Roosevelt administration didn't investigate the falling-out of Wobsey, who has always stated but it has blossomed under the New Deal.

Wobsey's resignation was this. Each agency charged with the administration of the Wobsey, AAA—felt the need of having its own investigating staff. At first they labored in a haphazard way, but gradually they were organized to show up suspected employees.

STADFAST

The handlers of this country's first experiment in social security have had to look back with the politicians. Some state bosses yearn to transform this agency for aiding the needy and used into a partisan machine.

Guiding Your Child

ALICE CLARISSA RICHMOND FEARLESS: One of the famous characters of medieval days was the fool who knew no fear.

The distinction means something. The man who does not know fear may not be a fool but he probably lacks imagination.

This is the ideal toward which children can and should be trained. A child is imaginative or fanciful if he is bound to be afraid of his fears.

Half the shell-crack cases of war and peace are the result of shame and repression of a natural fear. The child who is not free from this fear may be unable, but are none the less powerful.

Yes, I am afraid of the dark, too. But if I tried to do it, I should be hampered in all my activities. I could not even go to you when you called at home.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

Chapter One CAROL AT HOME HE ROOM usually gay and serene, had today an electric quality, as if its atmosphere were charged with the currents of conflicting desires.

It was a charming room, recently grown shabby, filled with beautiful and unrelated objects that long association had blended into a harmonious whole. Bookshelves climbed the walls beside the fireplace.

The brilliant surface of a Duncan Phyfe secretary reflected a dispassionate beam, cherished for its vibrating comfort; a melon low Sarouk rubbed shoulders with a hat that graduated years before from a department store.

The room reflected with uncanny accuracy the temperament of its inhabitants; the mixture of hardness and softness, of weakness and strength, of ugliness and beauty.

It was a hard room to leave. Carol, however, and felt it wrapping its tentacles about her. The room had shared with her twenty-four years, and she remembered her of that now, in the transcendent and unporting fashion of a woman who wears a bold garment and a willing lover.

It was no use, she told the room harshly; you've served your purpose. You belong to the past. I belong to the future, and if I stay on here I'll never have it.

She looked at the family, sitting in chairs and on the sofa. Her mother, was upright, on the couch, an expression of hurt astonishment in her eyes. She was desperately sorry for Milly, but she fought back the pity that rushed up and stung her. Milly had a head and she wouldn't always be here, although that seemed incredible now. She was too plump and young and youthful to be discarded as the inevitable of a dislocation.

Carol waded fervently that Milly might marry again, she was so intensely feminine, and so ardent of admiration. A pleasant stupid man that time, without the tactful brilliance that had so bewildered her in Evan Torrance. Evan had adored her as a shining jewel, and she would have been his first wife that she could never be anything else to him. Perhaps Carol tossed the idea as a way to her own conscience, she might even manage that for Milly after she had made the break herself.

Pat sprawled on his shoulder blades in an armchair, an unlit pipe between his teeth. He was looking down in his blue eyes. It was Pat who broke Carol's heart, but she knew with the insight Evan had bequeathed her that she could never know for Pat. Nobody could. He was the steadiest of his own weakness and the most strenuous of his own place in this Ashboro.

She could you. She Ashboro! Carol wondered that strange conglomeration of cotton mills and delectable old homes and prosperous country stores. She had more than an orchestral accompaniment to the town's very life—or it had been that way. She had more than a sense of her own dispensation of Roosevelt's they were at it again, and their whimsical—she had made an insupportable blaste that came at such queer hours—were once more marking off the day and night into bits. Shorter, shifty, like time.

She said slowly: "In most ways it's like Meridith, or any other town in the West. There are a dozen cotton mills there, and a few beautiful old homes, and the usual assortment of stores who have money. Or rather they did have: I don't know how they fared lately."

"It sounds terrible," Milly said decidedly. "Of course, and if we described Meridith to them they'd know the same thing in the same tone of voice. Familiarity breeds well-accepted ideas. The town of Meridith (Copyright, 1938, by Marian Sims)

Some time within the next few years a personable and eligible man would cross her path, and Milly, aided by her own row and gold beauty, would calmly annex him. Until then she liked a little town, she had two or three "boy friends," and she adored her home.

Milly was saying plaintively: "Carol, there's no real necessity for you to do it. Your room and meals cost practically nothing. We can manage like we've been doing." Carol dragged her mind back to the issue. "That's just it, maintaining it's gradually getting me down. If I take this job it means that my clothes and food won't come out of the family exchequer and there'll be that much more for the rest of you. If you and I'll don't mix a student in the house you could even rent my room to another teacher who'd be better than I am. But I don't want to do it. I feel a stab of disapproval because there were such minor factors in my mind. I feel that I'm not the managing that I was, and I'm gradually getting her down. But she said that last night, Milly said that she would be sure to get into their plum faces," she smiled and looked at her three children, two girls, and her children. "Well, let's take that and go on a beautiful, hill-rain!"

She was passionately glad that Evan Torrance didn't know they were having the party. He had died with the reassurance that his family was adequately provided for. He had foreseen a national debt.

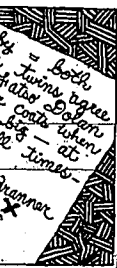

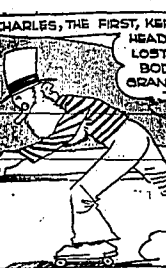

Milly said: "You an aggrieved lover? I want to see why you can't teach me to be a man. You're a man. That's why Milly. You explained something very carefully, to me, and I'm sure you'll be here, then, hours or days later, she came back and began wailing, she came back, she said she was distressed."

"Because I don't apply for it, I love. Because it looks like a good idea, I'm the type that she still and because

DETROIT, July 28 (AP)—The New York Yankees "Murderers' Row" paced by Lou Gehrig's 31st homer, went on to the biggest margin in nearly three weeks today and walloped the Tigers 16 to 6.

Gehrig's homer, two doubles and a single, four singles by Tony Lazzeri, three each for Joe DiMaggio, Myril Hois and Red Rolfe, and George Selkirk's four-bagger were outstanding in the 30 assorted hits the Yanks collected off Tommy Bridges. Vic Sorrell and Clarence Phillips led hold their nine-game American lead.

A freak homer by Goose Goslin, on what should have been an ordinary outfield fly, featured the Tigers' attack.

DiMaggio and Hoag, running after Goslin's fly to right center in the sixth, collided after the latter had caught it. Both were knocked out of the ball rolling area, and before it could be recovered, Goslin circled the bases. DiMaggio remained in the game, but Hoag went to the showers with a minor neck hurt.

PHILADELPHIA, July 28 (AP)—A four-run rally in the ninth, climaxed by Dolph Camilli's second homer of the game and his 11th of the season, gave the Phillies a 5 to 3 victory over the Chicago Cubs today.

Phinley Whitney and Manager Tony Wilson singled, Slum sacrificed, Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs replaced the faltering Ray Herbay with Larry French. Johnny Moore singled off the right field wall trying the score. Klein fanned, then Camilli duplicated his sixth inning homer to win the game.

BERLIN, July 28 (AP)—The clouds rolled by after nearly 24 hours of heavy rain today, and the biggest start-studied competition of the yet turned loose upon the village put-in-the-best-training-licks since the weather man cast a restraining hand on Olympic preparations.

The Americans were in for a with a few exceptions such as Glenn Cunningham, who met at long Olympic crown in the 100 and 200 meter sprints and the broad jump, almost all appearing in the training and will have only one more day of hard work, Thursday, before the start of the games.

The Americans are discouraged about the condition of two of their three shot-putting hopes—Jack Torrance, Baton Rouge, La., and Dimitri Zalis of Boston College. "Baby Jack" has gained weight and lost distance with the iron ball, and was barely able to reach 50 feet.

Jesse Owens, Ohio State Negro sprinter, led the rest of the Olympic crown in the 100 and 200 meter sprints and the broad jump, almost all appearing in the training and will have only one more day of hard work, Thursday, before the start of the games.

Youth Confesses Murder of Chum

Laverne Marks Tells Police He Killed Robert Bernstein 'On Impulse'

CLINTONVILLE, Wis., July 28 (AP) — The hunt for the burial place of the victim of a reported slaying here has become rugged late today with a new version of the case by a minister's son who told police he killed a boyhood friend "on impulse."

While volunteers poked tediously through tangled underbrush along the Embarras river in Shawano county in an unsuccessful effort to uncover the body, District Attorney Louis Cattau announced Tacoma, Washington, police had informed him of a new twist in the puzzling case.

Tacoma police said Laverne Marks, 17, who they quoted as confessing the slaying of his 24-year-old chum, Robert Bernstein, told them today he buried the body beneath Superior and Ashland, Wisconsin, just off U. S. highway 2 instead near Clintonville as he said yesterday.

Tacoma police said Marks told them he shot Bernstein through the back of the head July 13 while on a fishing trip.

The change in stories by Marks, who had been a devout Sunday school member, a Boy Scout and a star athlete in high school, and the failure to find any indications of a slaying or the body led Cattau to remark: "Maybe there wasn't a murder at all."

He added that he had "no faith" in the new information.

college there, is an accomplished musician as well as a noted teacher, and is the author of a number of text books on psychology. He was graduated from Yale high school, obtained his B. A. degree from Boston university, and his Ph. D. from the London university, London, England.
