

Bitter Debate Marks Legislators' Approval Of Additional Relief

CHARGES 'AND COUNTER CHARGES OF POLITICS HURLED AS SESSION AT BOISE HEADS FOR ADJOURNMENT

BOISE, Idaho, July 30.—After a day of blistering debate that brought enactment of a measure providing an additional $400,000 for relief, the 23rd Idaho legislature headed tonight for adjournment sometime tomorrow.

Charges and counter charges of politics and condemnation of the government's policy on taxation were hurled in both houses following introduction of three resolutions by the minority in the senate at the beginning of the day's activities.

Opposition Forces Hearing The predominantly Democratic administration leaders held the whip hand, but the opposition picked up sufficient strength to get across what it had to say.

After a long caucus the house passed its bill providing for diversion of an additional $400,000 for relief by a 58-1 vote. The senate adopted the measure later in the day by a 4-1 ballot after repeated attempts to throw it into committee for amendment to increase the amount.

SPEAKING PROGRAM CLOSURES WEED TOUR

Borah, Clark and Other Officials Praise Work of Control Chiefs

Approximately 200 farmers and business men toured Twin Falls county yesterday to view damage wrought by noxious weeds and demonstrations of methods for their control. The tour was held at the session at the county fairgrounds at 10 a. m. after the afternoon session of the noxious weed control and extension division.

In addition to Senator Borah and Congressman Clark, speakers at the afternoon session included J. Leo Hood, state WPA administrator; H. L. Spence, extension service; and Harvey B. Hale, county extension.

Farmers Speak
Several Twin Falls county farmers also expressed their views on the subject, including E. M. Buhli, Twin Falls County Homeowner's Association; W. H. Harvey, Buhli; N. G. Sharp, L. O. Cobb, F. L. Davis, Roy Durk, Kimberly. Several candidates for state and county offices also spoke briefly on weed control.

The meeting was presided over by Oliver Johnson, Murtaugh.

After the close of the open by the state which struck shortly after the meeting opened, the speaking program was held in the merchants' building at the fairgrounds.

The speakers all agreed upon one thought—that control of noxious weeds should be permanently carried on by the federal government and that more stringent legislation should be passed to assure such control.

Praises Program
Senator Borah was lavish in his praise of the weed control work in Idaho and said that the program has now reached a point where he believes it will be permanently established as a regular function throughout the country.

Congressman Clark explained the procedure by which governmental aid was secured in the weed control program and strongly urged that the set up be placed on a permanent basis.

The tour left Twin Falls county court house at 2:30 a. m. and the first stop was at a vacant lot at the corner of Blue Lakes boulevard and Second street east where sodium chlorate was sprayed in liquid form over morning glories by use of a power sprayer. The next stop was at a farm south of Kimberly where 80 acres had been infested with morning glories, was examined. Due to weed infestation, the farm has during recent years produced but a small crop.

Carbon Bisulphide
The tour then led to a farm near the sugar factory where a WPA crew was treating patches of morning glory with carbon bisulphide, inserted in two one-gallon cans in holes six inches in depth and 18 inches apart. Spence pointed out that the cost was 65 cents per square rod under the WPA plan, representing one-half the cost of the material. Remainder of the material and labor cost is covered by the government. Spence recommended sodium chlorate treatment for along fences and ditch banks.

Two farms north of the county hospital were shown as representing clean cultivation methods, recommended for large areas of weeds. The cultivation treatment had been

Senator Ralph E. Whitten (R-Boise) will be in charge of the committee to investigate the relief rolls, expenditure of public moneys by the governor as the state's relief commission. "You're for it," he introduced to furnish additional appropriations for the fish and game department.

Among the bills adopted by the house was "the unemployment insurance measure. It was approved by a 21-10 vote, and sent to the senate. It provides for creation of a fund out of which compensation ranging from $1.00 to $15 weekly will be paid persons thrown out of employment. The state industrial accident board will administer the law. An excise tax of 1 per cent was imposed on employers to be paid on the basis of their payroll for 1936. The state tax is deductible from the income tax and from the federal unemployment insurance tax of 1 per cent.

Other bills adopted by the house during the past three days before adjourning—were three supplemental appropriation measures for state departments and bureaus that had exhausted operating funds, and a measure legalizing cooperation of county and municipal contributions for state and federal social security program.

Besides the $400,000 bill and the amended tuberculosis hospital bill, the senate approved one of 17 supplemental appropriation measures.

Chase Clark (D-Boonville) got the house bill for hospitalization of tubercular patients into the committee of the whole for amendment to increase the appropriation from $13,000 to $20,000.

Tonight the house had enacted all but one of its nine bills. The "un-adopted" measure provided for creation of a state board to supervise the commonwealth's public health activities. It will come up tomorrow.

ACCIDENT VICTIM'S HISTORY REVEALED

Fingerprint Identification Basis for Disclosure of New Facts

Fingerprint identification of Tom Otle, 45, which was completed several days after he met death under a freight train here the night of last July 14, led to further investigation by Twin Falls county sheriff E. F. Prater and disclosure by that Otle was a disabled Canadian war veteran, a former postal employe at Vancouver, B. C., who died with his father and two brothers are residents of England.

He left also an adopted daughter about 12 years old who lives with his divorced wife whose address is unknown. Sheriff M. B. Driver, Oakland, California, reported to the local sheriff.

Oakland authorities were given to understand that Otle's discharge papers were on file at Ottawa, Canada, and that part of his bonus was still due him.

California authorities questioned by the local sheriff said Otle had no police record except for a local one for overindulgence in alcohol. Fingerprint records in connection with the case were checked to make possible his identification after he met death here, where he was unknown.

Sheriff Prater said he had forwarded a report on Otle's death to the father, William Otle, a boat and shoe merchant at Barnsey, Yorkshire, England, and his brothers.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and waste out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 20 pounds of waste matter.

If the 16 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, rheumatism, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 60 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 16 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

SYNOPSIS: Carol Terrance just has told her delightful family that she is leaving them next month to teach school in Ashboro, Ga. Billy, her mother, flutters and objects, but sister Jill accepts the news matter of fact; Pal, the gifted member of the family, understands perfectly and calmly confesses the foolishness in prospect for him while abounding gift with Carol, and Carol craves a reason from them that he will keep on with his writing.

Chapter Three

DOZ KIDS UP

"Don Richards appeared that evening unexpectedly, his habitual grin buried under an air of perturbation. He knew his sister Jill had considered marrying—because he was so solid and amiable, and because his magnificent body and equable character had made people into thinking him handsome.

He walked in without ringing, and confronted Carol in the living-room.

"What's this about you going to Ashboro?"

Carol stared at him. The almost indecent intimacy of small towns, had she said? None of the family had been out of carbor since she first brought the matter up for discussion.

"Will you please tell me where you have been? And when you get back, I'd like to see you with a traffic cop."

He sat down with an air of impatience. "I saw Jim Henley in the drug store, and he said, 'Brother, I recommended you and that he imagined you'd take the job.'"

"You're not going, are you, Carol?"

His eyes begged her. They were blue and impudent and she looked away from them. He got up and walked the length of the room, a habit he had when he was worried.

"Let's go to ride, I want to argue with you and I don't want you running out on me."

"All right. Let me get a hat."

It had to be faced, she knew. Don was part of her life in Meredith, and she Meredith his image was distorted, enlarged, by the impetuosity of separation. He talked aimlessly until they reached an untraveled road. Then he turned on her.

"Listen, Carol: this whole thing sounds screwy. What's the idea?"

She meant, of course, to tell him what she had told Billy. She tried to tell him that, but he brushed her words aside like gnats.

"You wouldn't go to another town and teach school for that. Your salary won't go any farther than your income does here. You're just sounding dippy-blurred."

She watched the flow of paramecium beneath the lights. The car seemed stationary, while a soft August night moved past them. She was rather like the car, she thought; standing still while her life went by on the wind. What was it the Queen had said: that you had to run very fast to stay in the same place? And much faster than that to get anywhere? Don looked at the road and waited, and she had to tell him the truth, if a man loved you, that was the least you could do.

"I guess I am, Don. There's no little point to the way I live."

"That's surprising. There's no much point to the way anybody lives. Ashboro's no different from Meredith; don't kid yourself about that."

"I'm not. But I don't intend to stay there."

"You mean...you're not coming back?"

Her throat ached intolerably, and Don's arm was across her shoulders. His arm had been there before, and she remembered how warm it was, and how pleasant a warmth—a sort of tempered pleasure: it had never appeared the sword-like ceiling of Bill Faraday's embrace. Bill Faraday was in New York, and the dust of five years lay thick on the memory of him.

He sensed her uncertainty, and with one hand he wrenched the car into a deserted side road and stopped.

"Carol..."

He had both arms around her, and his mouth was hunting hers. She eyes up and kissed him reluctantly.

"But it wasn't the sort of kiss she had had from him before. This was a kiss that she had never had before. She wrenched herself away finally and sat, shivering, in the far corner. She was intensely angry, with herself as well as with him, but she despised him now for touching a string she hadn't known was there: that farred discordancy in her ears.

"I don't," she admitted shortly. "I wasn't your fault at all. I suppose it was purely natural."

Natural. Damn nature anyway, with its insensate urge for perpetuation. To avoid making any further methods to achieve its end; if he below the belt. You saw samples everywhere: grossly mistreated men and women who shared each other for the sake of the children. But unless you had a mind like Erast Terzian's you didn't see them like that; you saw them as good, substantial people.

And if you could see them that way, Carol reflected wearily, you would be a good deal better off.

Neither of them spoke until the car had stopped before her own

LIGHTNING KILLS YOUTH IN FIELD

Roy D. Quisenberry, 17, Victim of Bolt While at Work

Roy D. Quisenberry, 17, of Veneta, Okla., was struck and killed by lightning while he was at work shocking grain on a farm four miles south of Twin Falls early yesterday afternoon.

His father, Thomas Quisenberry, he had come to Idaho from Oklahoma only a few days ago. He leaves his mother, one brother and four sisters, all of Veneta.

Quisenberry's companion, Jean Buchanan, was struck and slightly injured by the bolt. He fled from the field. The farm owner, George Heinrich, and a neighbor, Carl Addy, brought the fatally injured youth to a physician's office here.

The father, at work on another farm, was told of the tragic occurrence. Stricken with grief Quisenberry tried to communicate with his family and with an old friend in Oklahoma.

The body rests in the White mortuary chapel, pending funeral arrangements.

Twin Falls Visitor Finds British Isles Prosperous

"Prosperity has returned to England," F. W. Meech said yesterday upon his return to Twin Falls from a summer vacation in his native country, which he had not seen in 33 years. This is most apparent in the field of industrial and home building and remodeling which prevails throughout the British Isles, he said.

"Restoration of property is not the result of political or governmental reconstruction, however, but the initiative of the country's business heads, unhampered by restrictions."

"The English policy has been to protect home industries, encourage business expansion, and permit private industries solve their economic problems. How well business has rallied under these conditions, is everywhere manifest," he explained.

Slums Being Eliminated

Slum districts in all of England's cities are being eliminated with surprising rapidity, and the ramshackle dwellings are being replaced by sanitary, livable habitations.

"The English are building to catch all classes," England's middle-class is enthusiastically engaged these days in erecting bungalows and other houses of the region. Owners of England's historic estates are improving their properties with equal zest.

Agriculturists and dairymen are being assisted financially by the government in small measure at present, Mr. Meech said. England has more grazing land than at any time in her history, and emphasis is being placed on the dairy and cattle industries. Little wheat is being grown in England at this time, the British farmers leaving that phase of agriculture to their Canadian and Australian competitors.

Hawthorn in Bloom
Mr. Meech was especially enthused

in his description of the pastoral perfection of the English countryside. Perhaps the memory of the hawthorn in full bloom throughout the land, as well as the desire to renew family and friendship ties, was a motivating influence in Mr. Meech's return to England. The British farmer does not enclose his pasture-lands, his fields, with the effective but brutally barbed wire which is used in the United States. Rather, to keep his cattle and trespassers out, he employs high hedges, principally of the picturesque hawthorn, which was blossoming abundantly during Mr. Meech's visit.

In numerous parties of the scene are the hazy mountains, which have been taken on the aspect of a national hobby, so widespread is the vogue for this healthful, stimulating sport, according to Mr. Meech.

Frates "Floating Palace"

Mr. Meech sailed from Southampton for the United States, July 22, on the Queen Mary, which he depicted as a luxurious, floating palace. The Queen Mary made the trip in four days, eight hours, and thirty-seven minutes, averaging 22 1/2 miles, and beating the Normandy's time by three hours. The world's largest steamship coming a shorter route than the Normandy did not equal that ship's average, however.

Ten days were required to make the same voyage 23 years ago, Mr. Meech reminisced. Informed of the opportunities in the United States by his uncle living in New York, Mr. Meech made his first trip to this country at that time. Within three years he was secretary to E. H. Hartman, the road magnate.

While abroad, Mr. Meech visited Liverpool, London, Bristol, his former home, and Teignmouth, England, and Elie, Scotland.

CRAFTS AND SPORTS LEAD IN POPULARITY

Camp craft and swimming are the most popular phases of camp life, vying in popularity with archery and tennis, according to a news dispatch from the Camp Fire girls' camp above Easley. One hundred fifty girls, a larger number than ever before, are attending the camp.

Dr. J. N. Davis, Kimberly, visited at the camp at noon Monday, and the evening. Indian legends were read and dramatized.

Mrs. Charles R. Scott's visit to the camp was an interesting event of Tuesday. An impromptu stunt program was presented in the recreation hall that evening, each group taking part.
