Grivesnes Park Taken By French Troops After Short Bombardment

American Troops Holding Line in Vicinity—Germans Massing New Divisions on Both Flanders and Somme Fronts—British Carry Out Minor Operations With Great Success—Immense Barracks At Brussels Reported Filled With Huns—Three Points of Concentration Opposite Allied Line Are Noted.

PARIS, May 10.—Following an intense but brief bombardment on Thursday afternoon the French seized the park at Grivesnes including important terrain that the Germans had occupied. The French war office announced today: "We captured 250 prisoners, including four officers and much material. We maintained our new position and organized it in spite of German counter attacks."

"On the right bank of the Ailette river, in the Champagne district, near Massiges and north of Rheims, as well as in Loraine wood we carried out several minor operations and repulsed raids, capturing 36 prisoners, one an officer."

Grivesnes is about five miles northwest of Montdidier and 14 miles southeast of Amiens. American troops are holding part of the line south of Grivesnes.

LONDON, May 10.—The International News Service learned this afternoon that the Germans have brought a considerable number of new divisions to both the Flanders and Somme fronts during the past week.

It is expected that the enemy will continue his attacks for the Flanders ridge and the high ground between the Somme and the Aisne river to enable him to continue his drive towards Amiens.

The main enemy reserve force is massed on the Somme where the principal attack is looked for.

(Frank Charlton, I. N. S. Cable Editor)

In the continued absence of any big scale operations on the battle front interest swung away from the fighting zones today to a brilliant enterprise carried out by the British navy which has resulted in the bottling up of the German submarine base at Ostend.

While bombardments have continued along the southern end of the Ploegsteert front the British carried out a local operation northwest of Albert (in the northern zone) which resulted in the capture of an advanced trench which the Germans occupied Thursday morning.

There have been no operations of any consequence on the Flanders front, though the Germans continue to mass troops.

All of the barracks in Brussels are reported to be crammed with German reserves all ready to go to the front when Hindenburg resumes his drive.

The Germans are reported to be concentrating at three points on the Flanders and Aisne front. There is still no decisive indication as to where the offensive will be renewed although there is a disposition on the part of the French military writers to believe that it will come between Albert and Amiens and that it will be launched in the general direction of St. Pol, with a view to reducing the Arras salient. (Albert is about 17 miles northeast of Amiens.)

This was the fifty-first day of the German offensive, but for nearly three weeks now the Germans have been comparatively inactive.

The old cruiser Vindictive, filled with concrete, was sunk across the entrance to the Ostend harbor on the Belgian coast and now both from filling up this harbor.

SUCCESSFUL COUP CLOSES SECOND SUBMARINE BASE OF THE KAISER

IDAHO TO FURNISH 3,257 MORE MEN

WASHINGTON, May 10.—State quotas in the second draft of 800,000 men were announced by Provost Marshall General Crowder today. The draft will take 33,257 per cent of the total number of men in class 1 in each state. The whole number in class 1 is 2,421,480. This number is expected to be 25 per cent increased, however, when the deferred classes have been called through, for persons liable to draft throughout the United States. The quota for Idaho is 2,527 men under this call.

The next draft has not been set. It will not be until the differences between the house and the senate over the exemption of clergy and medical students have been threshed out.

The provost marshal general, after his calculation on the experience in recent levies, figures that approximately 16,257 men will be selected in the next draft because of physical disqualifications. The cancellation of the house yesterday of its amendment to the draft quota legislation, which would have given credit for volunteers toward the quota, is general to go ahead with the plan announced today.

SHIP VINDICTIVE SUNK ACROSS THE MOUTH OF FORESS CHANNEL

Opening Is Effectually Blocked

British Loss Slight in Move That Is One of the Most Brilliant Strikes That Have Taken Place in the War.

(F. N. Staff Correspondent) LONDON, May 10.—British naval forces carried out another brilliant and successful coup last night. They dashed down upon the Belgian coast and barred the sea way to the important German submarine base at Ostend.

The operation was similar to that at Zeebrugge on April 22 when that important base was made ineffective by the sinking of block ships.

The Vindictive, which had been the first to dash down the coast, was shot up by a battery of 10-inch guns at the outlet of the Ostend harbor.

The enterprise was successful from every point of view. The only loss sustained by the British was a motor boat while the casualties were light.

The blocking of the Ostend and Zeebrugge harbors will go down in the history of the war as two of the most daring exploits of the navy. At both submarine bases the Germans have massive stores of long range guns and keep a keen lookout for attacking parties.

Both of Germany's bases on the Belgian coast are now out of commission. Not only were two block ships (filled with concrete) sunk across the Zeebrugge harbor, but the mole was cut.

The Vindictive played an important part in the preceding operation. She was the first to dash down the coast. The Vindictive was built in 1895 and normally carried a complement of 400 men. Her armament consisted of a 10-inch gun, eight 3-inch guns, one 2-pounder and five machine guns.

On the night of April 23 a naval force under Vice Admiral Keyes swooped down upon the Belgian coast under cover of mist, part of the ships striking the Ostend harbor and the Zeebrugge mole.

The British were emulating the feat which Captain Heberlein had done at Ostend and the Japanese at Port Arthur.

The leader of the British force was the Vindictive, the other units being the destroyer flotilla and the battleship Orestes.

Two block ships were sunk while three were sunk at Zeebrugge. The Germans were forced to direct their main effort to the position where they wanted it.

The fog blew away at Ostend and the British were able to direct a heavy fire against the British naval units.

Zeebrugge landing parties were sent ashore and did immense damage to the German military works.

The admiralty this morning issued the following statement: "The operation designed to close the ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge was carried out by the British navy. The operation was successful in that the Vindictive was sunk between the pier across the entrance to the Ostend harbor. The British attack on Zeebrugge on April 23 the Vindictive has been filled with concrete and set out at a block ship. Our light forces returned to their base with the loss of one motor launch which was damaged and sunk by orders of the Vindictive. The Vindictive was shot up by the enemy. Our casualties were light."

YANKEE BOYS READY FOR A BOCHE ATTACK

Huns Lose Courage Out of Trench

Both Sides Crouch Like Tigers Ready to Spring—French Pesants Driven Out, but Come Back to Plant Fields.

(F. N. Staff Correspondent) "WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE FRENCH BATTLE FRONT, 10—Standing shoulder to shoulder with the French on the Ploegsteert front, the Americans are tenaciously awaiting the new boche offensive. A return of pleasant weather coupled with military observations indicates early attack.

The Americans say that the German loss their punch and courage when they are out of their trenches. Yankees call the German "swear fighters."

Both sides are crouched like tigers ready to spring across the narrow strip of freshly tilled ground between the hastily laid wire protecting the front lines.

American are billeted in picturesque villages behind the front lines. The "chow gun" (portable cooking stove) is used under cover and bread is stacked about in corners like corn cobs.

A majority of the civilian population was driven out by shell fire, but there are a few grandmothers in white bonnets and blue aprons and children under the care of their grandmothers. Women are veritable mothers to the Americans, many of whom now speak French fluently.

A wonderful spirit and courage of the French peasants is shown by their plowing and planting the land with the new boche regime. The field in history. Children and women are provided with gas masks for fear they are within the gas attack zone.

The registration board gets notice of draft. The Twin Falls county registration board was notified of the new law compelling all who have reached the age of twenty-one since June 5 last year. Registration for military service for the first time must be made at once in order that the next action can be taken when the day is set.

Hundreds Surprise Departing Harman

Passengers Christian Church and "Hill" Wintered at the Parish Ranch Last Night.

Two hundred and fifty friends of Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Harman, gave them a parting surprise at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Parish last evening, in honor of their forthcoming departure for Atchison, Kansas. The people gathered in autos and drove to the Parish home near the city to which place the Harman had previously been invited by innocent looking invitations to dinner and from whence they had been spirited away while the crowd assembled.

After the crowd had finished extending greetings it divided into two parties, the younger set playing games on lawn while the older members sang patriotic songs and gave patriotic recitations.

The recipients of the surprise were presented with rings with appropriate settings. W. T. Harbert making the presentation speech in behalf of the "Hill" club in the case of Mr. Harman, while Miss Bowen in behalf of the presentation speech accompanying the taking of remembrance to Mrs. Harman. Both of these addresses and the responses were peculiarly happy.

It is quite unnecessary to say that there was an excellent repast. As Sunday is the last day of Mr. Harman's pastorate in this city a banquet was given for all members of the church and all friends of the minister and his wife who are not members of the church are invited. The dinner will be held at the church at noon.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Even Belgian children are now being reduced to slavery by the Germans, according to a statement by the Belgian government. Women Aired are all being forced into servitude, in great numbers, in the front lines, and the practice is now being extended to all over the military zone, which includes all of Flanders and a considerable portion of Flanders. Berlin Says Air Bombing Harmless

Declares That Effort to Destroy Zebruge Mole From Aeroplanes Was Futile

BERLIN, May 10.—On Thursday afternoon an evening strong enemy air squadrons carried out "bombing" attacks against the mole at Zebruge without causing damage of military importance, the war office announced today.

As a result of the bombing at Zebruge a church was damaged and four Belgian women killed and four were badly wounded. Three hostile aeroplanes were shot down.

The mole at Zebruge is a long sea wall built to keep shifting sand from filling up this harbor.

COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION AND COMMUNITY PROGRESS

The old proverb, "United we stand, divided we fall," is as true of a community, and especially of a rural community, as of a family or any other institution. There are certain interests which are both vital and common to all the people of every community. It is true, there are in nearly all communities, both urban and rural, people who do not seem to recognize their relatedness to other people nor to the institutional life of their community. They see and feel no vital ties or bonds between themselves and the larger group life of which they are integral parts. Such people will not work with other people. They are not interested in others than themselves, their own influence, their own and any other one's job and his wife, us four, and no more. Such people are not usually so completely self-centered, but as an individual, as an individual, there is too much of this spirit in our national and international life, and has been the cause of it. It is a thing from which we cannot get too far away for our own future welfare as a people. It is the spirit in drawing ourselves into little, self-centered, self-interests, we shall develop still life. This will be true of the larger rural life of the nation of the world after the war is over. But it will be none the less true of the smaller groups like the community in which we live.

Every rural community ought to have an intelligently arranged program, made in advance, for the whole year. This program should be both clear and elastic, but comprehensive. All the vital interests of the community should enter into this program. It should be planned so that it will have its rightful place and not interfere with any other interest which is important. Baseball and horse racing and fishing and milking and Sunday school are all legitimate, commendable, praiseworthy. But they should not be scheduled for 10 o'clock on Sunday mornings. The ancient proverb, "Right might be said," is "overweighting there is a season a time for every purpose under the sun"; but we sadly erred when we try to make one thing appropriate to another and confuse our normal, legitimate interests. There is, or ought to be, in every community a Sunday school and church in which are centered the vital interests of the people. But if some go automobile riding every Sunday to church, and others go fishing, some go to the movies, some go to stay home and milk the cows and irrigate or cultivate, it is very evident that the people of the community are not united in their Sunday program. And if the people are not united on the things which are spiritual, they are not united in their material interests. Such a community is hopelessly and helplessly divided, and its program-maker is right, that community will fail. With all this, though we are scrupulously correct, that community has fallen. The catastrophe has already happened, and it is being unheeded by the inhabitants of the neighborhood.

The writer has a friend who went into rural communities for many years ago. Being a man of training and vision, he invited the leaders of the community to come together and give their opinions on the things which were being done. A program was made covering all the interests of the community which were common. The meetings and evenings were left wholly to the people's culture and worship. Nothing was allowed to get into their program that would interfere with their primary interest. Of course, the public school came second in their program, and it was given five days in the week for nine months in the year. Along with the school there are related interests such as a parent-teacher association, and their provision was made in the program. There were also student gatherings of various kinds and these were planned for the week and placed in the program. A layman course was planned and arranged so as not to interfere with anything else. Chautauque came at a time when it was not doing other things to conflict with it, because it had been prearranged that it should have the same place as particular time. The special days of the year were planned for in advance—Thanksgiving, Christmas, Washington and Lincoln's Birthdays, Labor Day, Children's Day, Mother's Day, Fourth of July, Decoration Day and Easter. They were given their rightful places in the community program. Many years have passed and we are told that there has grown up in these communities a spirit of co-operation in the entire community. It is a one-church community and everybody goes to church at the same time, and the church and learns the same message and receives the same inspiration to seek unity and co-operation in the corner of the Kingdom of God where they live. There is unity of action because there is unity of program and unity of interest.

But we imagine some one saying that all of this seems too much like "pie in the sky" and that it is all living by a plan, and that it is not intelligent plan. Too many communities, like too many individuals, live with a plan, and they are not intelligent. And we are sorry to say that in the past nothing agencies or individuals willing greater unity and co-operation have been tried and have failed. But whatever our sins in this respect in the law of life which is the law of co-operation, the law of the greatest good to the greatest number of people, individualism, personal rights and the determination to have one's own way frequently resolve themselves into the law of the

EXPLAINS POISONING BY FOOD

Science Has Discarded Theory, Long Held, That Poisoning Are the Cause of Infection.

Poisoning by food is no longer explained as "diphtheria poisoning," but in an address to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. E. O. Jordan showed that it is either to true bacterial toxins comparable to those of diphtheria and tetanus bacilli, or to infection with specific infection carried by the food and the best known example of this is the food-borne infection is the bacillus botulinus, which has produced in the United States 22 recorded cases of poisoning, of which 17 were in California, while Great Britain has reported 10 cases. This type of poisoning is rare, but infection with food-borne disease bacteria seems to occur in a great number of cases. The bacteria are either present in the food itself, or are introduced from human sources. The chief food-borne infections hitherto traced to human-contamination are typhoid fever and the various paratyphoid infections. To these must be added certain infectious rarely transmitted by food except milk, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever, and streptococcus sore throat. The types of infection from food are distinguished by the source of the infection. In the diseases of certain food animals. The chief infections known to be due to food infected at its source are those—namely, botulism, typhoid fever, paratyphoid enteric fever, and those resulting from the use of infected milk. The bacterial diseases of plants do not infect man.

Chinese Queues Not Barred

Although the practice of having hair has not been so high during the past few years as formerly on account of the veering of the fashions in hairdressing toward the extreme simplicity, there are millions of Chinese in the East who still wear the queue. One of the peculiar facts in connection with the queue is that often after the Chinese send the hair to be cut, it is sent to the barber to be cut, and the barber is not allowed to cut it. The queue is a mark of honor and is a mark of respect. It is a mark of honor and is a mark of respect.

His altar has made many friends outside of his own congregation as well as in it and it is believed many will attend and bid him farewell.

GUNFIRE TOWARD OSTEND STILL HEARD IN BELGAIN

LONDON, May 9.—Intense gunfire accompanied by vivid flashes, could be heard on the southeastern coast from the direction of the North sea throughout the night and a dispatch from the Star today said that the heaviest between midnight and 2 o'clock and could be heard well inland. It was thought possible that the guns were being fired from a point near Ostend, but it was thought it was possible that the gunfire was being fired from the Ypres front.

Serving in a World at War

We are doing our utmost to serve the public as satisfactorily today as we did before the war upset the commercial world.

In the face of greatly increased costs of material we are endeavoring to maintain our plant at the highest point of efficiency.

Despite the high cost of labor, we are maintaining full crews that there may be no part of the work neglected or neglected.

While the demands of the signal service of our armies have deprived us of many technically trained men, those who remain have spread out to fill the gaps by extra effort.

In some places congestion has occurred because we have been unable to secure equipment for relief, but in such cases the traffic is being handled to the full extent of human ability.

With the work rooking under the weight of war, with conditions unassisted and abnormal, we are striving always to coordinate our efforts to the great problems involved in the winning of the war.

We feel that uninterrupted, efficient telephone service is playing a conspicuous part in the forces that will bring ultimate victory.

Dear Friend:

The French water hand took your letter at dinner. The writing looked familiar and I had figured out the author before I reached the post office. I am now on detached service in Paris. It is the only city in France we are allowed to mention. It seems just like New York only every man has some kind of an allied uniform. On Brown is here too. We have been through several air raids and I suppose you have read in the papers about the big German gun. The air raids are interesting. It they take place about 10 o'clock, but when the alerts sounds at 10 o'clock, the morning a man never realizes the humor of the situation. I've made several runs for the hole. They say it's no shame to run when you are wounded. We are here at a special artillery school trying to learn to be experts on the border.

There are just three great corporations furnishing daily news service to papers in the United States.

Of these the Associated Press is the oldest, and still stands first, although in some departments its work has been—and is being—excelled, especially so in the foreign field by the International.

There is no question among those who really know and are also honest, that the second place is occupied by the International News Service, now used by the TIMES. The International has the highest paid men and every facility of capital and organization; and its daily reports will bear comparison with those of any other service any time and all the time.

What We Must Do to Prevent Starvation

(By Hudson Maxim, in Leslie's)
Whatever else they have promised Germany to launch the world war, whatever vain-glories ambition is in the mind of the Kaiser and his military clique, whatever other economic considerations there may have been, one thing is certain—land and food were among the things they wanted. When the populations of western nations entrove their land accommodations and their food supply, it has been their habit to attack their neighbors and rob them of their land and their food.

In China, however, as the population outgrew the land accommodations and the food supply, the Orientals attacked the problem in a different way. Instead of attempting to enlarge their land areas, they introduced new and improved methods of farming, discovered new ways and means of raising more edible plants upon a given acreage, and by making use of fertilizers, forced on barren wastes, desert sands were irrigated and re-forested, and the soil in the crevices between the rocks on the mountains—was cultivated.

As the population continued to increase and become denser and denser, and the food question more and more serious, the cultivation of the soil became more and more intensive. Roots of houses were made gardens. Underground gardens were dug for raising vegetables and fruits. The soil was never allowed to rest. Fiestas upon unoccupied lakes and rivers were covered with earth and cultivated. The water was never allowed to overflowed areas unutilized to other cultivation became a national staple, and the Chinese became a people of rice eaters.

But owing to the imperative necessity of fat and protein, which rice does not contain, the Chinese discovered that animal food in sufficient quantity could not be raised upon their marginal lands. They therefore began to collect within their dietary almost every living thing that is in the heavens above or that is in the earth beneath, and in the water under the earth.

But all these things were not enough to supply the necessary protein of the nation. They had to get four hundred million Chinamen, and Almighty God sent them a manna in the form of soy beans, which are very rich in fat, sometimes containing more than 25 per cent of oil, and some varieties containing nearly 50 per cent. The protein of the soy bean is truly vegetable meat. It is the most best, the most lamb, and the most nutritious of any food. It is rich in its casing, and makes a rich milk in nutritive value to serve milk for infants. It is the best food for the sick. Of this milk they make curds and cheese and all manner of delicacies, and all things that delight the Oriental palate.

It has been a subject of much wonder how the Chinese could live on rice, a food containing hardly any thing but starch. The fact is they do not live on rice. Their dietary is well balanced between the starch of rice and the protein of the soy bean.

France, like China, is a land of little farms intensively cultivated, but neither so intensively nor so skillfully cultivated as is possible by Chinese methods. Then large numbers of men taken from the French farms to fight in the world war soon produced a very great shortage of farm labor. The means of increasing the output of the happy exponent of bringing in Chinese agricultural laborers. Already more than a quarter of a million Chinese have been imported into France to cultivate the farms. The French farmers are delighted with the new labor. They produce twice and even many times as much as they have ever produced before as Chinese never hesitate upon a question of loyalty and honesty, faithfulness and integrity. To them there has been no desertion, no desertion. His character has for twenty-five hundred years been shaped to the point of respect for the machine.

The French have found that the Chinese laborer is, for all practical purposes, an automatic machine. He never goes on strike, and his employer a distinction will high as great as though he were no other than a piece of machinery. He fills his niches on the French farm as society distinct from his employers as though he were merely a valuable domestic animal. The cost of his hire is a negligible quantity. Two hundred and fifty thousand Chinamen in France last year, and the work of five hundred thousand French farmers to feed the French people. It is reported as reason for us what the French have done with the Chinese!

A week ago a West Virginia farmer said to me: "You men who are in the world war must understand what it is up to the fact that you must do something to help the farmers." He told me that he had a son-in-law who had acres of land and that his son and son-in-law have gone to the war and left him alone. He has three thousand acres of land, but he is unable to take care of the land because he can not get labor, and the apples rot on the trees.

I was told several weeks ago by one of the big men in congress that, last autumn, in Idaho, farmers paid an average of $15 a day for children to pick apples and potatoes, and paid men and women as high as $18 a day and men and women as high as $18 a day. The men struck for $24 a day. It was found, furthermore, that the larger the wages paid the fewer the days of labor, but the money that laborers who received from $15 to $20 a day, would not spend these few days of work because with such wages they could afford to loaf the other three days, spend their money and enjoy life.

It is a sad thing to see, while passing through Arkansas on my return from Mexico, I saw a large party of some of our prisoners dressed in military uniform in convict clothes working on the railroad, under guard armed with guns. I was informed that very few of these men were really criminals; most of them had been arrested for vagrancy. My informant told me that, if themselves, they would not work at anything longer than to get a little spending money, and they would remain in idleness until the money was gone. Consequently, they only reigned way to arrest them for vagrancy and compel them to work.

It is a sad thing to see, while passing through California on farms and in vineyards will pick four times as much fruit in a given time as American laborers. Consequently, the introduction of the Iron Chink for the preparation of salm in the process of curing, and the introduction of the Iron Chink for the preparation of salm in a given time as two or three Americans. They called the Chinamen Chinks, so when the machine was introduced it was called the Iron Chink.

The New Jersey farmer actually sold $100,000 worth of produce which he raised on one hundred and fifty acres. He saved a thousand dollars more and more than he could do it! The average Jersey farmer could not for the life of him do that much part as well as that part of the Department of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C. The New Jersey farmer not only the market also a number of specialized vegetables.

Now, if it is possible, by the employment of Chinese labor, to increase the production of our lands to such an extent, how much more could be the benefit of wide introduction of such labor. The exhausted lands of New Zealand could be made to produce like a tropical land, and the soil in the great west that are today not producing ten per cent of what they ought to produce could be made to produce ten times as much by the introduction of Chinese labor.

When we take into consideration that the soil in the United States is a very stringent shortage of farm labor throughout the country, and again take into consideration the fact that the Chinese laborer will give many times as much of a given area of land as an American laborer, it is safe to say that the introduction of American farms could, by the introduction of Chinese labor, be made to produce very large amounts of crops, and that the introduction of Chinese labor in the United States to raise food enough to fatten the world.

The average American laborer also finds the occupations of the city and town more congenial than the farm. Consequently the farms are denuded of labor, and there is no remedy in sight unless we shall be able to overcome prejudice, enlighten our minds with understanding, and introduce Chinese labor to work our farms.

The individual, independent family unit is rapidly going out of existence. The means of increasing the output of the household for quarters in the cooperative apartment house is an attractive proposition for the city dwellers—worse, for the city dwellers not barred from the child-dwellers. Chinese, imported as agricultural laborers and household servants, will solve the agricultural labor problem and the servant problem, and the means of increasing the output of the household for quarters in the cooperative apartment house is an attractive proposition for the city dwellers—worse, for the city dwellers not barred from the child-dwellers.

farmers' sons and daughters who do stay on the farms would find the larger part of their burdens lifted. With less labor of their own hands they would have more time for recreation and greater profit.

A million Chinamen should be imported with suitable apportionment. This measure should not be opposed by labor unions, because Chinese imported as agricultural laborers and household servants are much more plentiful with union labor in any way, while the Chinese would be producers of wealth which would greatly reduce the cost of living, and consequently give to every dollar a greatly increased purchasing value.

If a million Chinamen were to be imported, as I have suggested, their labor could be restricted to agriculture and household services, and such laborers distributed throughout the country would so increase the food supply and so lower the cost of the necessities of life that the laborer or who now earns $3 a day would be able to buy for $3 more food than he can now get for $3. The article would be able to buy twice as much for his weekly wage to feed his family as he is now able to buy.

It is to remember the great trouble that was made in Oklahoma the last time public land was offered free by the government. If the Chinese labor of the United States could by some magic be doubled and the acreage divided among the people, there would be a land which would utilize the free land. It also, by some magic, our present acreage could be made to produce twice what it now produces, without imposing any greater burden upon the farmer, there ought to be just as much a vast for such an expenditure as there would be for free land.

This expedient is a possibility. It is no magic. It is an actuation. It is merely necessary to import a sufficient number of Chinese agricultural laborers and household servants, and the thing will be an accomplished fact. Not only as much as this has been done, but also more. Not only could the world double its food supply, but also more. Not only could the world double its food supply, but also more.

It is nothing new to the plan of restricting a certain class of people to a particular kind of employment. The driving the middle aged Jews was always done with the Jews. They were permitted to do only certain kinds of work. It may have been an ancient procedure with respect to the Jews, but with the Chinese, as compared with their present lives of idleness, employment under such restrictions would be a godsend to them, and although their wages might be very low judged by our standards, they would be very high by their standards. Furthermore, the Chinese could be prohibited from buying or owning land, and their labor could be put to use from buying and operating farms in competition with American farmers.

Unless the Government in the war within the next six months—and Providence will betray the world if they should fail—the Chinese laborer will be in the world for many years longer, for if we take many years to bring Germany to terms.

Some of the main elements of Germany's strength and endurance depend upon the large numbers of cheap laborers that she has. The prisoners of war and the entire population of conquered countries are being forced labor, merely to keep her war machine going. Germany has today at least five million such laborers in her service, and the conduct of her war effort is largely dependent upon these five million laborers who are rendering Germany free service.

There is a means at hand, through Chinese labor, which will enable us to compete with the cheap labor of Germany, and unless we do so we cannot compete with Germany.

There is another thing we must take into consideration. The introduction of Chinese labor would permit of the removal of one American citizen from the labor force to some other capacity to help with the war.

But these are not all the considerations that we should take into account consideration, and it is that the only way to forestall famine, the only way to prevent the utter ruin of the world, the only way to import Chinese laborers, is to import Chinese laborers.

Lurid Literature In I. W. W. Trial

CHICAGO, May 9.—More lurid examples from I. W. W. literature, including sabotage as charged by the government, was read today in Judge E. M. Landis' court at the trial of I. W. W.'s by Frank W. Nebeker, counsel for the government. One paragraph cited by Nebeker, read as follows:

"The question of right or wrong does not concern us. No terms made with employers are final. All peace so long as wage system lasts is but an armed truce. At any favorable opportunity the struggle for more control of industry will be renewed."

"Another read: 'Direct action may assume two different forms. Either the workers will stop altogether and will perform work detrimental to the employers. In the first case they will strike and in the second they will apply sabotage.'

ASQUITH BEATEN ON MOTION TO INVESTIGATE

PRIME MINISTER WINS BY VOTE OF 283 TO 108.

Has Been Drenched By Cocoa Press

Pleads For National Unity—Opponent Says Matters Raised Are Too Important To Be Discussed Openly In Commons.

Floyd MacGirth
(I. N. C. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, May 9.—Premier David Lloyd George was a signal victory in the house of commons this evening when that body by a vote of 283 to 106, rejected a motion by former Premier Asquith that the house investigate the charges by General Maurice that the British minister had issued misleading statements on the strength of the British army.

Although "great pressure" was brought to bear upon Mr. Asquith to withdraw his motion he stood firm. Even the declaration by Sir Edward Carson that the nation was "on the eve of the crisis of the war," failed to move the former premier and his motion went to a vote.

There's prolonged cheering as the vote turning down the Asquith motion was announced and Premier Lloyd George received an ovation as he left the house chamber.

In outlining the court of honor which he proposed Lloyd George said that the work would be "short and sharp," so that they could get a decision immediately.

"Since I have thrown myself into the prosecution of the war I have been drenched with the 'cocoa press' (the Daily News), and the former premier declared. Touching upon the question of the extension of the battle line the premier said:

"Sir Douglas Haig (the British commander) and the war cabinet were reluctant to extend the line which was done in response of very great pressure from the French.

"The military representatives at Versailles suggested a compromise and the extension was made on agreement between Sir Douglas Haig and General Petain.

"I went back to the question of relative strength on the western front. Mr. Lloyd George said that General Haig on two recorded occasions, had said that the forces on the western front were practically equal.

"These controversies are distracting—paralyzing, and I believe, that it should be ended before national unity and the army are threatened, went on the premier. "The Germans are preparing their biggest blow of the war and I implore that this 'sipping' cease."

"General Maurice is a friend of mine. He was in commons when I made my statement. Barely before making an example of indiscretions he ought to have come to me and said: 'I think you should correct this.' He didn't and our fate will be in the balance in the next few days."

Mr. Asquith in his speech stated that the government's proposal for a court of honor to investigate amounted to an admission that an inquiry was necessary. Matters had been raised that are so important that they could not be discussed in commons, the former premier asserted, making at the same time if the government still thought an inquiry necessary or that the case could be considered without the production of secret documents. The extreme minister expressed the belief that it is in the interest of the allies, prosecution of the war, and the duty of parliament to establish an inquiry which would give a prompt decision and render authoritative judgment.

Mr. Asquith went on to say that he did not think it the business of parliament to inquire into the conduct of executive phases of the war. It is enough, he continued, that such a one had already characterized General Maurice's action.

Mr. Asquith denied that his vote would be construed as one of censure.

"I was censuring the government, I hope I would have the candor to do it directly."

Mr. Asquith suggested that this committee be impartial and at that point he was interrupted by Chancellor A. Bonar Law, who said:

"Mr. Asquith could not name five unrepented members."

Thereupon the former prime minister expressed regret to hear that from the leader of commons. I have done all in my power to help the government in all executive phases of the war. It is enough, he continued, that such a one had already characterized General Maurice's action.

REAL PATRIOTISM

OAKLAND, Cal., May 7.—A shabbily dressed little woman entered the State Savings Bank here and made her first payment on a $50 Liberty bond.

"My husband and I have only one pair of glasses between us and this man says to me, 'Give me your glasses,'" she said, as she tendered the deposit. "I don't need much more, but for my husband feels that he needs the glasses more than I do, while he is at work, and at night he likes to look over the paper. He tells me the news, though, and I can see that we will have to get in and help if we want to win."

CLOSE-UPS IN SPORTSDOM

Allan Markley,
(I. N. C. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, May 9.—Yale will be handicapped in her race with the university of Pennsylvania when the two crews meet there May 11. The Yale crewmen will go to Quakerstown without their shells and contest with the crew which conquered the Midshipmen—brought from her opponents. This has never been done before but has been decided upon this year on account of the difficulty in transporting the shells.

The Yale crew remained at home during the Easter vacation, when they did most of their practicing. The time allotted to practice for the crewmen has been limited this year. The shortage of material at the start of the season proved a great drawback; but Coach Abbott has now selected men whom he declares are capable of winning over the Pennsylvania crew.

There are only three veterans. The rowing order follows: Stroke, Captain A. R. Hyatt, '15; No. 7, D. T. Hull, Jr., '15; No. 6, J. D. Knox, '20; No. 5, J. B. Pierce, '19; No. 4, T. A. Robinson, '18; No. 3, W. B. Mead, '18; No. 2, Morehead Patterson, '20; bow, Robert Wier, Jr., '18; and coxswain, J. F. Knott.

The same crew will also meet Harvard May 26. It has been decided to use a borrowed shell for this race also. Ell will not, however, be represented this year in the customary three-cornered race with Cornell and Princeton.

SOME FAMILY HAVE MR. AND MRS. FISHER

CHICAGO, May 9.—A family that would undoubtedly make the heart of Colonel Roosevelt pound with joy that of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher today are celebrating the arrival of their fifteenth child, a daughter. And both are reported doing well. Mrs. Fisher is 49 years old. All her children are living. Ostend and Zeebrugge (the two submarine bases on the Belgian coast) have been rendered ineffective as submarine retreats. The closing of these two harbors is bound to have important effects in curbing German U-boat operations for the Germans will be compelled to use Heligoland as a base, which is far distant from the usual submarine hunting fields and which has already been rendered fairly ineffective by huge mine fields which the British have planted in the North sea.

LONDON, May 10—It is now believed that the German offensive expected between Albert and Amiens will be aimed at St. Pol with the evident design of reaching Arras and, said a dispatch from Paris to-day, quelling the military expert of the Ecole de Staff. A general of the German drive is due to commence today or tomorrow. It was reported. Advances from Italian sources said that the Germans were assessing at three points on the Flanders and Amiens salients.

Staff experts think there will be a resumption of the offensive in Italy before long. They are only a few Germans on the southwestern front. The Italian staff is controlled by Austrians. The Germans are attempting to develop inland success again because now the surprise factor is removed and it is necessary for artillery of all calibres to follow the infantry closely.

The artillery activity on the Belgian front, which included a few days ago that the Germans are preparing for a blow against King Albert's gallant little army, has died down.

A report issued by the Belgian war office at Huy on Thursday night said:

"During the past 24 hours the enemy's artillery has been inactive. Our batteries have been very active in retaliation."

Crack Rifleman, Undergoing Treatment for Shattered Hand, Describes Joy of Sniping Boches

St. N. S. Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, May 10.—George H. Bishop, crack rifleman of Company G of the Eighteenth Infantry, has been sent back to this country and is at the army hospital at Fort Meade, Md., undergoing treatment for a shattered left hand, mangled when the barrel of his rifle burst on the twenty-first day of his service in the third-line trenches northwest of Toul.

"No, it don't look like I would ever do any shooting of any account again," he said today. "I had a good shot in the good spots I could while the good spot was good. When I get the hand fixed up I'll get back on some job. It's a matter of trying to get used to having only one hand, but I'm getting so I don't have to say much more."

Bishop's story of the long days in the trenches, of the never ending search on the horizon for the bobbing head of a German in a machine gun, of the skill of the Yankee purveyor and his stoic attitude toward the discomforts of his life, gives a clear picture of the part the boys from home are playing in the struggle to smash the Kaiser's cohorts.

Bishop is a six footer, with dark brown eyes which bring back to the mind the eyes of the native Americans famous for their length and vigor. He is earned to a deep brown, and even though he may never again be able to use his left hand, he still would prove no unworthy foe to any German soldier.

This is Bishop's story of how he went to the trenches and what he did in the snipers' nest.

"I went into the army several weeks after I left my home in Youngstown, Ohio. I had been a chauffeur, but I was sent to the army. I was sworn in December 15, 1916. I got my hand blown up just a year and one week after that time."

"I was sworn in at Douglas, Ariz., and stuck with my outfit right through the first three months of the war. There was much to do around Douglas, where we were stationed most of the time. The best fun was in getting used to our outfit and getting so we could hit that old booby eye nine times out of ten. I never got the hang of the trick pretty early."

"And I was glad I had when we got to France, because I was given a chance to do more shooting than lots of the fellows got. After we had been in training awhile, we went up in the trenches to the front."

"Almost as soon as we got up near the Verdun sector, that is near this town of Toul, we were assigned some work to relieve some of the boys. It was rotten weather when we went in. Rain most of the time and cold. For all that we just figured that better weather was on its way and as long as we were in for it we might as well go through."

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Naval officials here were officially elated today when they learned of the latest exploit of the British navy. The bottling of the German submarine base, Zeebrugge, following so closely the sealing up of the Zeebrugge base was conceded one of the most spectacular features of the war. It was pointed out that in addition to strategic results obtained the psychological effect upon Germany would of necessity be marked.

The British navy has been discounted continually by Germany and often held up to ridicule. But now that it has asserted itself in two brilliant exploits in less than a fortnight the effect is certain to be highly discouraging to the Germans.

Naval officials pointed out that the sacrifice of the Vindicator was in consequential in comparison with the results obtained.
