CITY'S FIRST AND LAST FALL

Jericho's Siege and Capture One of the Spectacular Stories of the Old Testament.

On the morning of Washington's birthday Gen. Sir E. H. Allardyce's Australian troops rode as conquerors into a little village of bits, noted geographically as being the city of low elevation on earth, and in Biblical history as being the scene of the Promised Land, observes the Minneapolis Journal.

In the Canaanite days Jericho was a fortified city, commanding both the river ford of the Jordan and the controlling up to the highlands of Judah. The story of its siege and capture and the destruction of its population is one of the spectacular stories of the Old Testament, which contrasts strongly with its gentle seizure by a Christian army in a year of our Lord thirty-five centuries later.

According to the Old Testament story, the city was left desolate with a curse from Joshua upon the men who should attempt to rebuild it. And it is related that Hiel, the Bethelie, did rebuild it, but his two sons in the construction of the wall as punishment for his covetousness.

It was at Jericho that Joshua instituted his campaign of righteousness upon his enemies; and it was on the Jericho road leading up to the Jordan highlands that Jesus laid the stone of the story of the Good Samaritan who gave first aid to a wounded enemy. The advance from Joshua to Jesus in the human ideal of duty toward one's neighbor is the very measure of the spread between the ideals of blind obedience and liberty on the same question.

This war is fundamentally a conflict between the ideals of modern brotherhood and ancient orderliness; and nowhere is the contrast more noteworthy than in this little village of Jericho, where the people today profess in the hearts of their enemies that they were under the rule of their own people. The world, with the exception of Germany and Turkey, has traveled a long way between the two falls of Jericho.

SEEK EXPERIENCE— CHECK OTHER CARS

Every Franklin car owner should drive some other car occasionally, especially one of the heavy ones. The way a heavy car feels, the way it drops into the depressions of the road, the way it rides and guides and many other points make interesting comparisons.

With the heavy car the Franklin owner has the feeling that if he tries to get over the road with any speed, he is feeling all the time that the tires are sure to go bad; you feel that they are being abused. No matter how quiet the heavy car is on a pavement you are annoyed at the noise at rough places or railroad crossings.

It is equally true that the owners of heavy cars should occasionally drive a Franklin, a few miles. Although he may feel quite thoroughly satisfied at present, it will drive a Franklin twenty miles over any kind of road—good, bad or indifferent—his complete satisfaction with his present car will change to comparative dissatisfaction.

He will have a new standard of excellence for motor cars. He will regard the Franklin as both different from all other cars—but immeasurably better than any other car—at no matter what price.

LOP-SIDED PLAN OF NON-PARTISANSHIP

There is something funny about this talk of non-partisanship as a device during the beginning of the campaign.

First—To use every possible means to win the war.

Second—For peace with victory and never by compromise.

Third—Same preparations now for peace after the war.

And then there were promptly construed to mean that in order to carry them out it would be necessary to take the management of national affairs out of the hands of the party in power and place it in the hands of the Republican party.

The same delightful nativeto was manifested by the Hoosier statesmen and near-statesmen.

There has been a lot of utterly useless discussion of this question of partisanship pro and con.

tion not to run a candidate against Senator Keppon. In this state many Democrats feel inclined to leave the long term senatorship vacant.

The League of National Security has a very sane view of this matter, which was recently expounded by Elitha Root.

If it could be understood that purely national economic issues not determinable during the term of office of the congress to be elected this fall should be eliminated, voters could largely choose between the candidates.

Some Republicans are actuated by the very bad partisan motive mentioned.

and at no point were the lines broken nor was the interlocking formation of the two armies split.

The Anglo-French forces were outnumbered, very heavily, but the masterly strategy of General Foch, the allied generalissimo, made itself felt in every move and the tactics of the Germans were met by brilliant counter-movements.

The Germans struck at Soissons from the east and succeeded in driving into the city, but at last reports from Soissons were still clinging tenaciously to the western outskirts.

Ludendorff's blows have been fairly well unmitigated energy and the battle was continuing with the utmost violence at last reports.

Evidently there is no point on the line where the Germans have concentrated—their greatest pressure. They have been striking out furiously on both flanks and along the center, making the utmost efforts to extend their salient so that the allies would be unable to menace the flanks.

Reports from the battle front show that the French force holding Soissons fought with extreme courage for hours a bloody battle raged in the streets before the salient pillar finally withdrew into the western outskirts.

The German war office, in an official report issued last night claimed fresh progress near Soissons and between Soissons and Rheims. In an earlier statement it was claimed that the number of allied prisoners had been increased to 25,000. Thousands were arriving in Paris from the new battle zone around Rheims.

American Red Cross agents who are meeting the troops are caring for the fugitives.

Despite the loss of Soissons and the critical situation at Rheims the people of Paris smile confidently while reading the war office communiques and awaiting the projectiles from the long range German cannon.

Reports arriving here from Paris last night, stated to interviewers—journalists that the situation would soon be re-established.

"The morale of the French troops is excellent," the premier said. A fierce battle is raging around Soissons. For-ont-Tardenois (west of Rheims), where German reinforcements under General von Winkler, General von Cania and General Schmettow have been brought up.

The French are resting magnificently against superior numbers. Those they have defeated are fighting abnormally.

Soissons was captured furiously and Paris is being held in a stranglehold before it was finally occupied by von Lathau's army.

South of Soissons the French have checked the Germans. General Vichers of the German army, has been driving in the direction of Guisey chateau.

Hard fighting has been carried on night and day around the shell sheltered city of Rheims. The German objective evidently is the Paris-Chartres railway, but they will find their path blocked by seasoned French resistance.

Only chateau is 17 miles south of Soissons.

Fresh allied troops are pouring in and "technical" reports indicate the situation. The retreating troops fell back in the best of order, leaving the roads and railways clear for fresh reinforcements.

The British soldiers who took part in the gallant defense of Trier arrived in Paris and were hurried to hospital. They were cheerful and full of absolute confidence that all would be well.

Impressive Services at Arlington Cemetery

All But Pressing War Business Suspended in Capital—Cuban Minister Makes Touching Speech

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Peculiar solemnity was lent Memorial day services for the nation's heroes dead today at the Arlington national cemetery. With the knowledge that Americans daily are giving their lives in humanity's cause on the battle fields of France, the nation's capital suspended all but the most pressing war business to pay homage to those who gave all to their country in past conflicts.

President Wilson, members of congress and allied diplomats suited at the national cemetery in attendance on the exercises to laud the memories of the fallen, whose spirit is now in living form overseas.

President Wilson did not deliver an address.

Flags hung at half mast and every national monument was draped with the stars and stripes. Thousands of Washington's war workers journeyed to Arlington to participate in the ceremonies. Representatives recall the deeds of heroes who have passed but who never will be forgotten.

Those who have already perished on land and sea in the present great struggle were honored by great floral wreaths launched on the Potomac at the foot of Arlington slopes. In other wreath was floated down the river in remembrance of those who went down with the Lusitania. American and British cruisers lying in the harbor fired salutes as the floral tokens were launched.

Memories of the fallen were recalled when the graves of the men taken from the wrecked battleship at Havana were draped with flowers. Dr. Manuel Capodice, the Cuban minister, whose country has joined with the United States in the world war, paid a stirring tribute to the men of the Maine.

"We have nailed our flag with yours to the old mast of the Maine, and we won't give up the ship," he said. The floral wreaths released on the Potomac and those placed upon the graves of the Maine were sent to Arlington by President Wilson.

THE "Apostle of Vengeance"

ZACH HUDSON made moonshine whiskey six days in the week, read the Bible to his children at night and between times taught them to shoot. Besides the father and mother, the Hudson family comprised four sons and a single daughter.

The history of Breathitt county, Kentucky, recorded no period when the Hudsons and the McGeeys were not assembling for pot-shots upon one another, but with a righteous wrath. The feud itself was so old that the living generations of Hudsons and McGeeys hardly remembered the details of the original quarrel, which dated back to before the Civil War, and just after the two families had come into the Kentucky hills from Virginia.

How everlasting peace was established in Breathitt county is the stirring events in this play, "Apostle of Vengeance."

"The Store of Values"

The Story of Red Cross Doctors and Nurses Who Refused to Retreat.

As Related by One Who Was There

William D. Hines.
(A. N. S. Miller correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, May 29.—The story of the part America and Americans played in aiding the British and the French during the early spring of 1918 is a story of the Germans on the Somme can never be adequately told. The whole picture is too big to paint on one canvas. It is only by describing the work of individuals and particular groups of workers that some idea of the American effort and its effectiveness in this historic battle can be brought home to the people back home—and then only in a small way. While it is perhaps only a very small incident in the history of that great affair, the story of how a small band of American Red Cross workers "carried off" at one of the evacuation hospitals lack of the French front should make Americans proud. When all but a few of the hospital staff had left with the two hundred or more patients and the Germans were advancing only a few miles away, four American army surgeons, assigned to the American Red Cross work at this particular hospital declared their intention of "sticking till it was blown over." And six Red Cross ambulance and truck drivers, as well as several American Red Cross nurses and aides "stuck" with them.

The Americans made their decision not because of sheer bravado, but because the hospital had the reputation of serving a few wounded soldiers from day to day, and could save lives. And at this writing those Americans are still there, doing much needed medical attention to French and British soldiers who are brought back to this hospital because it is the nearest one back of the point-of-the-line.

The big guns of the British and French have been planted in the rear of it—and then moved farther back.

The boche armies come over at night. The little group of Americans in the tent, even the troops, guns and transports go by in streams to points in the rear, but as long as the wounded are brought here, these Americans will stay.

A few hours after American Red Cross headquarters in the rear sent a dispatch of big German airplanes it dispatched eight trucks and motor cars to this hospital to aid in the evacuation of the wounded. Night and day the Red Cross drivers worked bringing the wounded from the hospital to Paris, a drive of from six to eight hours depending upon the congested condition of the roads.

When this had been accomplished, the Red Cross cars went out into the surrounding country to pick up the wounded, who were attempting to walk to a hospital, and to all the refugees struggling along the road. Besides transporting these two hundred or more wounded men to places of safety, the Red Cross cars aided 150 refugees to the railroads in three days.

But their work had only begun. Despite the evacuation of the hospital and the consequent order for more of the staff to accompany the patients to points of safety, the wounded were coming in sixty per cent of them—very serious cases. Practically all demanded immediate attention and the same operations. But major ones, where a steady nerve, delicate touch and sure hands were necessary to give the wounded the best chance for life.

Night and day the American surgeons worked. There were a few nurses to assist, but all were doing completely exhausted, mentally and physically. Every one needed rest. But there were the men coming in every few hours, their bodies pitifully torn, and suffering untold agonies. So no one thought of stopping, and even when he did get a few hours of duty there were the big guns only a few hundred feet from the hospital. They belched and roared all night.

One night at this hospital one night, or that is, I attempted to sleep. With several drivers I selected a bed in one of the vacant wings. The night had just been completed. We collected a few blankets and tumbled in with all our clothes on—taking off one's clothes in the battle zone "isn't being done this year, you know," is the way one driver expressed it. "Every few minutes the big guns would hit the windows of the hospital, which, by the way, is one of the most picturesque and prettiest chateaux in France, and it owned by an American woman who married a French General, rattled and banged from the concussion. Between the gunfire the accented wail of the big German airplanes could be heard. They were attempting to locate the battery—so the Red Cross can't sleep—they just doze and rest.

Of course, some of the cases were hopeless and an amount of surgical skill or medical attention could save them. Here again the American Red Cross was called upon to help. They had to dig the graves and act as pallbearers.

One night was especially hard. The doctors were kept busy in the operating room until 3 o'clock in the morning. The nurses had to have a bit of rest. One nurse only was available. So again the Red Cross was called upon. One became an aid to the operating surgeon, remaining beside him until the wounded man was rolled finally to his bed.

That day the boche was reported a bit nearer and the drum fire of the big batteries rolled over the hospital like peals of thunder. All the patients who could be moved without endangering their chances of recovery were evacuated and then the order came to take away most of the supplies. At 6 o'clock the Red Cross drivers were rounded out and began loading their trucks with blankets and food, which constituted the greater part of the supplies. These were taken to a town a bit farther back where they could be used for refugees and the troops that were passing through in endless streams.

When I left the hospital the next day things had become "about normal," so a Red Cross man told me. They were working only fifteen hours a day.

Jewish Fraternal Order Considers War Problem

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 30.—The twelfth convention of the Independent Workmen's Circles of America, a Jewish fraternal order, opened today at the grand meeting hall in the auditorium. Over 150 delegates from all parts of the country, representing eighty-three circles, with a membership of over 6,000, are assembled for the meeting. The national officers and part of the Boston home office staff have been here for the past week.

The center membership of the Springfield circles and those of the neighboring towns were here to greet delegates and witness the opening session. Late today a public meeting was held at the auditorium, where the teachings of the Circle were expounded by its ablest speakers. Recognition by Boston talent of national reputation was given in connection with the meeting. Tonight 400 delegates and members will be given a "War Banquet" at Liberty hall. The independent Workmen's Circle order, composed of members of the Order and Juniors, played a prominent part in the festivities of the day. Of that 20,000 reserve fund, which is held for the protection of the members of the order, $20,000 is invested in Liberty bonds and the balance in state municipal and other securities. A heavy percentage of the membership of the circles is in the U. S. military service. The convention is to make provision for assistance to such members and their families and for general war relief work. Another proposition is to raise a

To Idaho so far away,
Where the cooling breezes play,
My thoughts drift back each day,
To Idaho, so far away!

Oh, Idaho, the beautiful!
No words can voice the praise
From a heart that's ever true
To the state of boyhood days.
No place where I have wandered,
Upon the land or on the sea,
Since dear home hills were surrendered,
Calls, dear Idaho, like thee.

SUPPORTING THE BATTERY
At a certain battle of the Civil War a Federal Captain happened to get into the vicinity of a battery of artillery which was hotly engaged. The Confederate shells were ploughing furrows about the guns, and the cannonceers were grimly and actively at work to answer shot for shot. The captain addressed himself to a Sergeant, who was very efficient, but at the same time rather profane, in the following words: "My friend, if you go on this way you can expect the support of Divine Providence." "Ain't no such thing as that," said the Sergeant. "The Ninth New Jersey has been ordered to support this battery."

also among their own kind, and especially if any of the women acquaintances are present. It was at a recent country dance in a barn where the lumbermen and their girls were present. There was no talk about anything else. The women sat on one side of the barn and the men on the other, all watching a spot in the middle of the floor and showing considerable nervousness. Suddenly one of the holders of the men walked over to a shy girl and standing beside her, said: "Ma'n, how's your mother?" And then, adding apologetically, "not that I care a darn, but we've got to talk about something."

GIANTS WANT BUDDLEPH
NEW YORK, May 29.—A deal between the Glantz and the Dravos which will make Dick Buddleph, hold-out Boston pitcher, the property of the New York club, is being predicted in baseball circles here today.

GERMANS USING BIGGER GUNS
PARIS, May 29.—The Germans are now using guns of bigger calibre and a higher powered explosive, for the bombardment of Paris. It is revealed by an examination of fragments of shells which fell in the city on Monday and Tuesday.

Suddenly one of the holders of the men walked over to a shy girl and standing beside her, said: "Ma'n, how's your mother?" And then, adding apologetically, "not that I care a darn, but we've got to talk about something."

An Alarming Situation

We have told you in our advertisements that our business in Idaho last year resulted in a deficit in our revenues of $118,233.76.

Here are some figures showing an even more alarming situation:

So far in 1918 our gross income increased 9.8 per cent over the same period of 1917. But—

The expense of operating our plant during the same time increased 47.5 per cent.

The expense of maintaining our lines and equipment during the same period increased 18.1 per cent, and—

This means that unless some measure of relief is accorded us through increased revenues the year 1918 will close with a deficit of over two hundred thousand dollars in Idaho.

Obviously, our revenue and expense problem is one that will not solve itself—the solution lies in adjustments of rates that will produce revenues sufficient to cover these ever-increasing costs.

KITCHEN WAR WORN

Hoover says food. Hurley says ships. Priary says appliances. Creel says printer's ink. Schwak says cars, and Ford says submarine character of the war. All are important and indispensable factors, and not the least of these is food.

It has been demonstrated many times that by utilizing electricity for cooking it is possible to reduce the shrinkage in the roasting of meats. A number of tests carried out in a hotel in England and advertised to its customers by the Stowmarket Electricity company, demonstrates the saving of most accurate from electric cooking.

19 pounds of top-side of beef cooked in the electric oven cost one cent at shrinkage during the process, whereas a similar piece of meat cooked in an electric oven shrink but one cent.

The reason for this is attributed to the radical difference in the manner of heating. In the electric oven each even is heated by circulated hot air which has a drying effect on foods cooked therein. Electric ovens are not absolutely uniform by direct radiation and with no circulating hot air to dry out and shrink the foods—Adv.

Mirrors in History. During the middle ages, from the twelfth to the end of the fifteenth century, pocket mirrors or small hand mirrors were at the disposal of the aristocracy. It is considered a necessary part of a lady's toilet. The method of backing glass with metal for mirrors was well known in the Middle Ages, but those metal and silver mirrors were almost exclusively used. It was in Venice that the making of glass mirrors on a commercial scale was first developed.

It is interesting to read in the Journal of Heredity: "The remarkable grasping power of a new-born infant is cited as the survival of a trait that developed from the grasping power of the tetrapods. Finally with reference to the unelated-about upright position the author remarks succinctly that the human child sits up before it stands; the human stock sat up before it stood."

Annals Production. The shrubbery tree that yields cranberries is now extensively cultivated in tropical America. The ripe cranberries are gathered by women and children, and are extracted and pressed into a thick liquid, after straining out the seeds, allowed to ferment. The dry extract to the bottom-gum is incorporated in pans to the consistency of putty. Wrapped in banana leaves, it is the annatto of commerce.

Soldier Dead in France Honored

Army Observes Memorial Occasion in Europe—Widow Frances Strawn as Cannon Bearer. Newton C. Parks (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent) WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 30.—The first time in history America honored her soldier dead upon European soil today, Memorial day was observed everywhere from the ports of debarkation along the lines of communication to the various headquarters and down to the very trenches. In many villages French civilians learning that it was the day when America pays tribute to her fallen heroes, joined in the ceremonies. They brought bouquets of wild flowers to the little burying ground where the Americans killed in action or who have died of disease.

While the guns were booming along the entire front a detachment of Americans early in the morning visited the graves on the grassy slope of a hill between Nancy and Lunville where a fencible enclosure marks the spot where the first soldiers killed in the war with Germany lie buried. The chaplain held a brief service over the graves and read the names of the fallen with flowers. Similar scenes were enacted elsewhere in other burying places in the later sectors taken over by the Americans and in the rear of the areas where the mortally wounded have died.

At field headquarters, American and French civilians took part. The regiment full strength LAREDO, Texas, May 30.—The 37th Infantry was brought to full strength today when 1,276 recruits from Jefferson barracks, St. Louis, arrived at Fort McIntosh.

When Water Falls. Water will not always put out a fire. This applies particularly to a fire where grease is present in quantities. A technical paper cites an instance where a fire in the oil box of an engine was spread over a large range when water was thrown upon it. The water scattered the grease in all directions, and some of it was caught up by a flywheel, spreading the burning grease over the building. In a few minutes the whole plant was burning.
