PACT OF LONDON DOES NOT HELD PROMISE TO ITALY

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The situation at the peace conference "clearing rapidly," it was stated in a notice reaching the White House from Paris today. The president's action in reference to Fiume was stated as "inching with endorsement everywhere."

Official Washington today believed that the crisis caused by President Wilson's refusal to sanction the disposition of Fiume to Italy would speedily pass, and that the Italians would not withdraw from the peace conference.

Secretary Lansing's interview here in a formal statement, published Tuesday, was widely and correctly held that the Fiume episode would not be a question of "good judgment."

"There are one or two matters connected with the Fiume situation that should not be overlooked," Secretary Lansing stated. "First, Fiume was not to be given to Italy by the secret treaty made on Italy's entrance into the war, called the London Treaty. Under this treaty Fiume was to go to Croatia, which is now a part of Yugoslavia. And this is what President Wilson wishes it to go to."

"Second, the question of giving Fiume to Italy, thus becoming a question of good judgment, and President Wilson and Premier Orlando and Clemenceau mutually concluded that to give Fiume to Italy would be unjust to the new republics east of the Adriatic, and Fiume is the only port on the eastern side of the Adriatic, which can be so given as an entrance to Jugoslavia and adjoining countries."

"Third, the Italian claim is based on Italian desire, not on any right other than the claim that as its people are Italian they should become a part of Italy as they were one hundred years ago. But to grant this desire now would be manifestly to wrong others who still maintain a sort of hold on the Adriatic which would cause constant friction. Italy, with Venice and Trieste, may live happily and peacefully without Fiume, while the young republics on the east of the Adriatic would have a free life without access direct to the world by sea."

OLANDO ARKED FOR PARSONS BEFORE WILSON'S STATEMENT

PARIS, April 26.—Premier Orlando of Italy, without a previous interview with President Wilson, left for Rome today before the president's statement on Fiume was made.

Wilson issued his statement on the disposition of Fiume, it was learned in France tonight.

Today, the complete picture of President Orlando's attitude is not clear, but it is believed that the president in Sunday Premier Orlando has found that unless the situation is cleared up, the president will not be able to make a public statement setting forth the position of the American government.

Future of Poland Hangs in Balance

Alfred G. Anderson, U. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, April 26.—It is said that Germany has submitted on other questions of the peace table which it has at least one point for which it will fight to the last ditch, and that for retention of her colonies.

So declared the German colonial secretary in an interview on the subject with a U. S. staff correspondent.

"You have observed that notwithstanding sharp party lines on all other subjects the national assembly has been able to unite, together on the colonial question," said Mr. Anderson.

"From the extreme right to the extreme left, the opinion is unchangeable that Germany must retain her colonies. Our representatives will be fighting the whole German people for the retention of the colonies."

"The fact of the matter is that the national assembly has been able to unite, together on the colonial question, as well as on the question of the future of Poland."

Receivership Talk for Chicago Lines

CHICAGO, April 25.—Talk of receivership for the Chicago surface line street car system and of a strike of employees is an attempt to reduce wages is made following in the wake today of the refusal of the Illinois public utility commission to grant the application of the street company for permission to increase fares from five to seven cents.
Officials of the company declare that the present fare, five cents, does not produce sufficient revenue to cover operating expenses and say they would not increase revenue. It will be impossible to maintain the way the street car line was in operation. Employees assert that any attempt to reduce present wages will result in a strike.
The utilities commission declared that it is possible for the company to "make both ends meet" with the five-cent fare and added to "burden the public" with the $1,000,000 per year it is estimated the increased fare would have produced.

BRICK HOUSES ARE SUBSTANTIAL

Provide Homes That Will Last for Generations.

COST NEED NOT BE LARGE

Design Shows Attractive Building That is Modern in Design and at the Same Time Economical in Construction.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give plans of the new brick house. He is the author of the book "The Modern Home." On account of his wide experience in the building of brick houses, he is without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. He has designed and built many of the finest brick houses in Chicago, Ill. and only makes plans for other cities.

Everyone who lives has lived in a small town knows or can remember "the brick house." The owner usually was the most influential member of the community. Not that the better houses are much more than the others, but just the word "brick" conveyed the thought of stability.

Brick and brick houses are almost as old as civilization. One or two bricks of certain age did not compare with the bricks of today, but the ancient (solid) bricks of clay in the mortar, cleaned, allowed them to bake in the sun and constructed houses of them. And they lasted and supplied a home for generation after generation.

These are the reasons that brick houses are popular. They give an air of stability, because they are stable themselves. The man who builds a brick house knows that his "home" will last and his family, but for generations to come.

In the era of home building that is opening this morning, there will be a great revival of brick houses of all types. There will be the largest for the small family; the large frame house for the large family; and the best of the modern, comfortable, beautiful, and planned in spirit for the future will select a brick house.

The accompanying illustration shows a style of brick house that has the advantage of being constructed of a well-known, permanent material, and is planned in spirit for the future will select a brick house.

Three windows on the front wall and one at the side make it a bright and pleasant room. Above the fireplace has been provided for this design it will be satisfactory in the accompanying floor plan that the floor runs through the wall at one corner and will be an easy matter to provide one.

Sense of Spaciousness.
The dining room is connected with the living room by a colonnade. This, through the generous openings, the fireplace, light, living room and dining room are practically one room, giving a sense of spaciousness.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN
The second floor is a very good size, being 11 by 14 feet. As this also is a corner room, it is extraordinarily light and cheerful, there being three windows at the end wall and one at the back. On the dining room and part of the reception hall is the kitchen, 11 by 10 feet. A good pantry opens off the kitchen at the back, looking the refrigerator necessary for the best service.

The upper arrangement of rooms is as follows: A good size bedroom, 11 by 12 feet, with its own bathroom, 5 by 7 feet. A second bedroom, 11 by 10 feet, with its own bathroom, 5 by 7 feet. A linen closet and a wardrobe in each bedroom.

New Bounty Law Effective May 7

HOUSE, April 26.—One of the measures enacted by the recent legislative assembly in the payment of bounty claims for destroyed animals is the new bounty law, effective May 7. It has been made before any other authorized to acknowledge legal paper and who, in the capacity of a "poster," would receive the feet of the poster, which together with the claim, would be transmitted to the office of the state veterinarian. It has been the belief that the law had been passed, but the capital after the claimant had collected a bounty by an additional state.

The new law, which goes into effect May 7, 1920, requires proof of all claims to be made before the sheriff or his deputy in the county in which the animals have been killed, bringing in with him a certificate of the state veterinarian. This manner of making the claim will have no effect on the value of the bounty.

The department of agriculture is preparing to send out blank forms to the several counties and all claimants should transmit to the sheriff or his deputy, when directed by the department of agriculture at home.

The new law outlaws the bounty on deer, which was the only state in the northwest paying a bounty on the animal and deer claims were running in excess of $1000 per month.

The Glory of Evening Wraps

The story of evening wraps has its origin in the days of the ancient Greeks. It was a simple, but elegant, garment that was worn by women of all classes. The wrap was made of a light, flowing fabric that could be easily adjusted to the temperature of the evening. It was a practical and beautiful garment that has since become a staple of women's evening wear.

KNOOKING THE ADMINISTRATION

It is with good grace that the country will accept the criticism directed against the administration for extravagance and lack of business care in its ship-building program, when that criticism comes from a man who is presumably profited by that program.

A member of a ship-building company yesterday at Chesteon took into the extravagance of Congress, charging that the American government had spent a total of five billions of dollars for the building of ships that it estimated were not one-quarter as efficient as the British marine, which, he said, had cost only one billion dollars. In other words, the American government was called upon to pay four dollars for something that is not as good as Great Britain paid one dollar for. Indeed, in the ship-builder's opinion, what America got was only one-fourth as good as Britain's equipment, as each ton paid to pay sixteen dollars for what Great Britain bought for ten dollars.

Now, if this criticism came from somebody other than one of those who presumably will in the end of getting sixteen dollars for one dollar of goods delivered, it would be accompanied with less manufacturing feelings. But coming from a ship-builder, one of those who in the time of the country's great need had the advantage of that need to come to themselves by patriotic proffering, it is disappointing.

The criticism would be far more irrefragable in the judgment of the country if it were directed to the patriots who took advantage of the administration's necessity rather than to the congress which was compelled by war to have ships, no matter at what cost to the public.

SEPECULATION IN CORN

It is unfortunate that the fall which appropriated a million dollars to guarantee the best price of wheat at $2.25 a bushel until the end of the 1918 crop and to continue the prohibition of speculation in that grain did not include corn also. Then the price of corn could not have been manipulated to the profit of one individual of $200,000 in five days, as was reported several days ago from a middle west city.

If it is so reprehensible to speculate in wheat at a time when the world's supply was believed to be about exhausted, it is less reprehensible to speculate in grain simply because that particular grain was not included in the anti-speculation bill.

It is admitted that the wheat supply of the world is about exhausted, and that the world must look forward to the North American wheat crop for its supply of this commodity. Meanwhile, a bunch of profiteers may get together, corner the greatest substitute for wheat, and boost the price into prohibitive levels at the expense of the gratifiers.

Monopolistic proffering and starvation go hand in hand. It would be interesting if some statistics of the number who suffered from lack of food while the monopolists were filling up a fortune in a stead which they deem to be the basis of business.

PORTLAND LIVE STOCK REPORTER SUSPENDS

With the issue of April 22, the Portland Live Stock Reporter, a faithful chronicler of the Portland markets, suspended publication. During the nine years of its existence it saw Portland grow into perhaps the most important stock market on the Pacific coast. The paper had considerable circulation among stock raisers on the Twin Falls trail, who will join with the Times in congratulating the suspension.

HEAVY DAMAGE SUIT IS FILED

Local Doctor Made Defendant in Complaint of Woman Who Charges He Was Permanently Disfigured During Treatment.

Suit for $25,000 damages was filed in district court today against Dr. J. H. Boyd by Mrs. Emma Elizabeth Boyd, who alleges she received permanent disfigurement from a course of x-ray treatment given under Dr. Boyd's attention about two years ago. Mrs. Boyd's complaint states that she was treated by Dr. Boyd at his office, which has been previously been treated by other methods. The x-ray treatment, it is set forth, started May 2, 1927 and continued to August 1927.

After asserting that a high degree of technical skill and knowledge is required to handle the x-ray apparatus with relation to the workings and danger from the patient, the complaint charges that none of these qualifications were observed by Dr. Boyd at the time the operation of apparatus was being used and the treatment was given, also that the defendant would not leave and not return until after the treatment was finished.

Negligence is charged in reference to the adjustment of apparatus and its operation with respect to the amount placed from the patient and because of this alleged negligence the plaintiff declares that during July her face was disfigured and she received a treatment; also that the alleged negligence continued and her face disfigured and she was permanently scarred and she has been permanently scarred and disfigured.

Boyd and Sweetey are attorneys for Mrs. Boyd.

TWIN FALLS IS WINNER IN THE INITIAL GAME

Open Series With Boise by 8 to 1 Victory Due to the Mastery Work of Fix on the Firing Line

Twin Falls, Idaho, 20,000 spectators and many more than 100,000 spectators witnessed the first game of the Idaho-Buhl tennis tournament at the Idaho ball tennis courts at Boise, Idaho, yesterday.

It was all that the Buhl ball tennis team could do to win the game. The Idaho-Buhl team, consisting of Harry Fix, captain, and B. J. D. Moore, second, defeated the Buhl team, consisting of B. J. D. Moore and B. J. D. Moore, 8 to 1.

Fix's playing was a combination of skill, strategy and endurance. He played the entire game, and his work on the firing line was the key to the victory.

In spite of the fact that the Idaho-Buhl team was open, the Idaho-Buhl team was the winner. The Idaho-Buhl team was the winner of the game.

Unemployment in Germany Serious

BERLIN, April 25.—There are at present 2,500,000 unemployed men in Germany; 250,000 of them being in Berlin. It was declared today by the director of the labor department, in an exclusive interview, the conditions.

"It is true that if the German war prisoners were repatriated, it would seriously complicate the employment situation. The workers already left cannot be employed until peace is made, because of the materials without which they must be reemployed."

"The registration of prisoners has its human and sentimental side as well. Wives, mothers and sisters wait their men back here if they have to go on starvation diet after they get here."

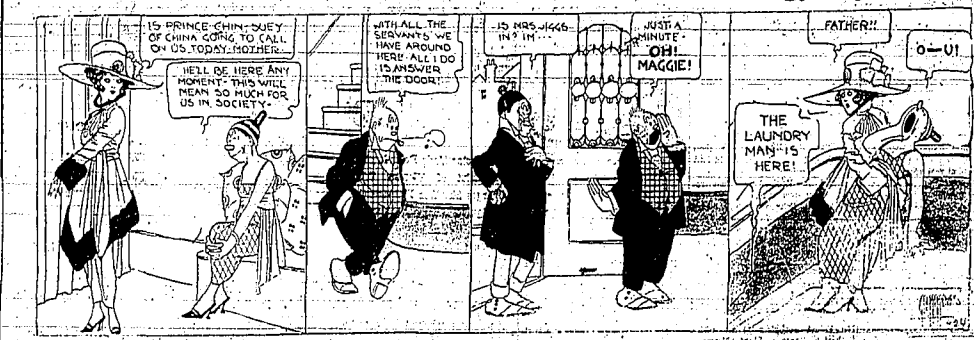

"There is another factor. Their return would increase the drain upon the government which is paying the unemployed a daily subsidy, by keeping this figure high and by having to re-employ them afterwards. At the beginning of the blockade, our difficulties would disappear."

Commission Fixes War Responsibility

PARIS, April 25.—The report of the commission of war responsibility was adopted by the peace negotiators on Tuesday. The commission has the full responsibility rests on Germany and Austria-Hungary. Thirty-two accusations regarding the violation of the rights and customs of war were submitted to the conference. These violations took place without the excuse of military necessity.

"There is no doubt that the central powers did the will of the victors and the Turks, employed barbarous and brutal methods of war. The commission demands that another inquiry be held for the purpose of a list of all of the crimes perpetrated by the Germans and their allies. The

AMERICAN Y. M. C. A. WORKER

TALKS OF RUSSIAN CONDITIONS

SEATTLE, Wash., April 25.—(Special Telegrams.)—The Y. M. C. A. worker in the remote village of Siberia, for instance, from the railways and despite of his military significance, Japanese police are seeking reliable references for a son from disinterested sources, depending on their government to protect their claims with its armies. The Japanese government is flooding Siberia with Russian printed literature, which are backed only by the press that presents them, and complete the printed to access three times the number of copies of the Russian press. No stated Wilfred Humphreys, who has been here Sunday night.

He has been in the United States for the last October for the Russian Y. M. C. A. mission. He was later informed by the U. S. bureau of public information to circulate a million copies of the Wilson's fourteen points, over the trans-Siberian line to Germany.

"I have one of these without its title," he said. "It is a plain sheet of paper on which is printed the Wilson's fourteen points, over the trans-Siberian line to Germany."

are beginning to hate us for helping to bring them there."

Lumbriza detailed some of his experiences when Harmand Hobbins first visited him with a quartet of a million rubles to care for 1200 Siberian refugees and take them over into Siberia.

"That is only 40,000, after all," he said. "With that sum I cared for only three thousand of them. It took three thousands of more into Siberia to collect them. That is only 80,000 per person for four months, (I could that be done.)"

"In the first place, the Soviets have no free transportation. They have no secure houses, and gave us free use of many hot cars to live in while we were waiting. They assigned us food and helped us get tools. We also bought our food through them, and our leather and home-made goods. Our own committee made up into clothes and shoes."

"I had dealings officially with more than one hundred Soviets while on this trip. They were not only very helpful, but very efficient in their help. Since they consisted of direct representatives from all the various industries of the locality, they were able to handle a problem of this kind far more directly and ably than a city council or state legislature elected by the orthodox parliamentary method could."

Mr. Humphreys showed pictures of a peasant woman in a remote district, most of whom could neither read nor

International Relations Will Be an Important University Study Now

By NICHOLAS BURBY RUTLER, Prof. Columbia University

Unless the very first fall, among the most important university subjects of study in the immediate future are to be international relations, including international law and public law, both constitutional and administrative, and foreign languages.

The new international movement, as far as it is healthy and sound, is founded upon a common respect for law and justice, a common interest in the steady improvement of individual nations, and the promotion of their satisfaction and happiness; and upon a earnest purpose to unite the forces of reason and right to the removal of causes of international war.

That the universities are to play a powerful part in carrying forward these movements can hardly be doubted. In many lands the universities have already shown themselves to be the active centers of interest in international life and international relations.

The change to be sought is not a few shallow and superficial sentimentalities, but a new plan which leads to reasonableness and to straight thinking. If the world will be made other, wiser or happier in a day, we will it wisdom and happiness be secured by judicial, legislative, executive or international agreement, however judicious and well supported these may seem to be.

Folklore Dignified as Science Phenology

Apparently we are to have a new science, phenology, the science of phenomena. This seems to be the making of a science out of old "superstitions," or signs of the farmers. Many farmers do not do their other work by saying that "in some plant or tree is in bloom or in fruit at this time of the year," or "in some tree is a sign of a 'quadruple' foot, or 'snake's ear'."

Now comes Dr. A. J. Hopkins, former chairman of the department of zoology, and says that science in phenology depends on the care in noting these changes in nature, and in seeing upon their significance.

Plants are a better index than animals, because birds can be fooled; rabbits will come to a place only on the day of the month, but a rabbit will not come to a place every year, even though a late snow may startle them after they are used to the snow. It is exceptional and of little consequence in a long period of years.

The very name of phenology, the common plants indicates that they have long been recognized "as science." In the "olden times" the significance of the wild rose blossoms told the Indians when it was time to fish for trout in the Pacific coast, the Salmonberry blossoms when the salmon are running. When white oak leaves are the size of squirrel feet, says the folklore of many regions, it is safe to plant corn and other tender crops. When the blackberry is in full bloom, the home-coming in any region, where they grow, may know that the frost danger is nearly past, and tender plants may be set out. In the "olden times" it was winter when snow between the time of full bloom of the tall late (goldenrod) and the time when the flowers are nearly all gone from the Clematis, is not only the best time for the wheat, but it will be free from danger by the fall attack of the Hessian fly.

"The old-time 'quadruple'—that time date of significance is now obsolete." The time of application of sprays for insects is now determined by the development of the bud, the stem and fruit of the apple tree. It is simpler, more reliable and more easily remembered. Anyone can keep a record of the simple fact that "the calyx spray, sets the coding, moth."

"Close observation of the flowering or other striking events in the life of the yearly wild or cultivated plants may give desirable information in connection with the planting of certain crops."

For years, "whom" was inclined to laugh at these signs, "but now they are found to be true enough to find a new science." We regard this as a tribute to the farmers' common sense and power of observation. The longer we may actually find out that the former know more about his own land and desires than the "hinkers" do.

TAKING UP TENNIS

MOSCOW, April 25.—Tennis will be recognized at Idaho this year. Ten tennis players on the Idaho campus will be sent to the annual conference tennis meet to be held at Pullman, May 23 and 24, and will be accompanied by the team which will play the best players on the campus will be held May 16, 17 and 18.

Tennis players are having some playing variety tennis on account of the universal cooling—raining, prohibiting freeman from playing, on variety tennis.

At the conference meet, Idaho racket players will enter three doubles and singles. The first round is being held a week early so that the two winners will be able to practice together in a double match. The doubles will enter the doubles at the conference, on May 23.

Tennis courts have been filled all over the campus, during the winter, for the last few years. The girls are taking great interest in the game.
