FACTS ABOUT THE ARMY

Until we arrive at that happy state of perfection when self-defense shall no longer be necessary in a civilized world, it will be necessary for Uncle Sam to maintain an army, and it will be necessary for the citizens of the nation to furnish that army. To some young men army life may not appeal very strongly, yet there is much about it to be commended.

The advantages of travel which army service affords is an important consideration. The best of the army having its troops stationed in China, the Philippines and Hawaiian Islands, Alaska, the Panama Canal Zone, France, Germany and Siberia, as well as in nearly every state in the union, affords an excellent opportunity for a soldier to see a large part of the world, places that men of moderate means would otherwise never be able to visit. The journeys that soldiers necessarily make afford him a most excellent opportunity to acquire an education that is itself in worth more to him than his pay. He constantly sees new peoples, and in many instances strange ones of whom he has heard but whom he has never seen. He has an opportunity to study the habits and customs of the peoples in the Far East, such as the Filipinos, Japanese, Chinese, and Hawaiians, and Eskimos in Alaska; and in addition to this he may see that greatest achievement of the world's engineering, the Panama Canal. The American soldier is as well known from the ports of Gibraltar to Manila, and from Manila to San Francisco, as he is at home.

Another consideration is the opportunity for advancement. More than one-fifth of the enlisted men of the army are non-commissioned officers, all of whom draw more pay, and as vacancies are constantly occurring, through discharge and retirement, these positions are open for men who are intelligent, ambitious and self-reliant. After a man has served in the grades of corporal and sergeant, he is in line for promotion to the many other non-commissioned grades which pay as high as $121.60 per month.

The president is authorized to appoint cadets to the United States Military Academy from among enlisted men between the ages of 16 and 22 who have served at least one year. All enlisted men who can pass the required mental examination are eligible to promotion to the grade of second lieutenant. The commissioned force of the army is largely represented by soldiers who worked their way up to that position, and some of the highest ranking officers of the army are men who were promoted from the ranks.

The pay of enlisted men serving in foreign countries, excepting Panama, Hawaii and the Hawaiian Canal Zone, is increased twenty per cent. Extra pay is allowed to gunners, skinkmen, sharpshooters, expert riflemen, cannoneers, electricians, overcoats, plotters, planters, leaders and gun pointers, wagoners, mechanics, cooks, artificers, farriers, saddlers, horseholders, firemen and others.

WALT DISNEY PRESENTS HOUSING SITUATION

Oh! I hear you're sick and tired of slugging, hear the loud and lament; men are wearing coats and breeches hunting homes they can rent. Every village, town, and city sees the same discouraged crew; and it seems to me that you that good homes are so few.

To my native Jingo, I say, women chasing round, and they tell the same old story—houses simply can't be found. And the same old story is spoken everywhere I chance to roam; from Topeka to Hoboken folks are hunting for a home.

When the men are sick and tired of slugging, when their throats are sore, and their eyes are filled with tears, they'll do some thing, maybe they'll do some thing. But it's higher on us than ever, and the price won't slump back, and that man is really craver who will build himself a shack.

"But that can't!" I hear men saying, and they put up thoughtless roars, for they never have been shopping at the modern lumber store. Building goods today are cheaper than all other goods you buy; all commodities are cheaper—just the lumber dealer's trick.

Moneyed men are often queuing for gold bricks, and when the price is always ready for investing in the sky and pickled ice, they'll build a lot of houses they might dwell in Easy Street, where the catapwump browns, and the dingbat's song is sweet. Every time they'll build a dwelling crowds would come, and still increase, crying, clamoring, and yelling, begging for a five-year lease.

There's no better proposition than this thing of building homes, and the fact should find position in the plutocratic dome.

And the man with modest bumble should be renting nevermore; he should take his wad and trundle to the lumber dealer's store.

There should be a boom in building such as we have never seen; palaces with ornate gilding, motored homes, all painted green.

PROHIBITION AND THE WORKINGMEN

There can be no doubt that a great many working men want their beer. If there was any doubt before the demonstration in Washington the other day, that doubt must have been eliminated. Of course, the working men who thus demonstrate their dislike against prohibition do not know what is good for them. It is a false assumption that anybody knows what is good for himself, except those who have studied the problems of the world and its people, and working men never have opportunity for such deep study as will give them an adequate conception of their needs or desires. So it may be accepted as a fact that the working men who want their beer want something that is not good for them.

There is no doubt that indulgence in beer, or any other intoxicant, has a tendency to break up the finer mental attributes of the individual, that it stupifies the intellect, dulls the memory, destroys ambition. Even a moderate indulgence in intoxicants, especially of beer, after the manner of the Americans, tends to the reaction of dulcifysluggish mentality, amounting to apathy, unconcern, stolidity. Doctors of medicine, physiologists, students study working men, teachers, cultivators, veterinarians and bricklayers all agree, if they have had experience with the amber fluid, that that is true. Yet there are a lot of people who insist upon having the drink, and a lot of others who insist that they shall not have it.

As a purely moral subject, there is no doubt that the prohibitionists and prohibitionists have the better end of the argument which always accompanies any discussion of this subject. But the working men who insist upon having their beer in a great many instances must have their faculties dulled by some extraneous thing, else they will not consent to remain in the class of working men. Take their beer from them, and the faculties so long dormant under the blighting influence of the intoxicant, will revive, ambition will awake, dulled mentality will begin to stir, and they will come out of their stoniness, as befits them, and they will begin to wonder how they could have been such stupid creatures as to remain unconcernedly as workers while others about them with mentalities that were never dulled by drink, some because they never had any such mentality to dull, were living on the fat of the land and not doing my work at all.

Take their beer from them, and they will awaken, and they will not be satisfied to go to work Monday morning and work through till Saturday night. They will ask themselves why? After a few weeks without the ordinary stupor they will do something more than ask themselves; they will begin to ask others. And the whole crew of working men, freed from the torpor superinduced by beer, now awake, freed from the disease that has made them dull, like the aroused lion, or herd of stampeded elephants, will begin to make things interesting.

As a moral proposition, there is no doubt that beer should go. But if it is the hope to maintain content among the workers, better let them have their stupor, their pacifier, for they may not work without being properly dulled for the job.

BATING LOUBERS

Dr. Ethan Allen Andrews, who is professor of zoology in Johns Hopkins university, said a handful of lousers the other day. "And he killed 'em. He says the lousers is pleasant, and they taste like shrimp. And some other experts have been studying the insects with regard to their habits—which are admittedly bad—and their possible utilization as food. All of them seem to be enthusiastic about the food possibilities.

"If there was a scarcity of other foods," says Professor Andrews, "persons who had tasted them would probably think nothing of eating them in large quantities. Those of us who have eaten them find them agreeable and nourishing. It is important, of course, to pick them just after they have come out of their shell, while they are still white and tender. After a few days they become hard, and would be unsatisfactory as food."

The professor is not the first man to eat lousers, of course. There is the familiar example of John the Baptist, who lived on locusts and wild honey. But it has never occurred to most people that John might have adopted that diet from choice.

Unfortunately Professor Andrews does not tell exactly how he went about his disgusting experiment. Did he eat "hot lousers," or fry them in butter, or roast them in honey, or after the British manner, or bake them, or make salad of them or what!

In the absence of dependable details, any man is free to experiment for himself. It may take courage; but did it not take courage to eat the first shrimp!

HOMES FOR EMPLOYEES

According to a statement of long experience, steel-workers of the United States plan to start at once expending large sums improving their plants and assisting their employees to build their own homes.

It is believed that this plan will do much to revive building and to restore business conditions to normal.

More than the impetus given to business will be the result of such action. It will have a marked effect upon labor unrest and dissatisfaction.

Men who own their own homes are less easily led astray by the marcher and agitator than transient dwellers. If the home ownership has been made possible by the concern for which the man works, there is the added element of personal gratitude and loyalty to restrain the worker from violence or intemperance.

When the steel men have led the way it is to be hoped that other business concerns will follow. Such a policy will promote good times and sound labor conditions; two things sorely needed right now in America.

WEALTHY DAVY JONES' CHEST

Salvaging wrecked ships has always been a fascinating occupation, both in fact and in fiction. Just now, one important factor in the effort to pry wealth from Davy's lockers is the fact that the waters about Great Britain are so strewn with wrecks that in many cases navigation has been rendered dangerous.

Some of the cargoes can be saved, of course, but many of the derelicts must be blown up simply to get them out of the way.

Somebody with an imagination compounded of those of Jules Verne, Victor Hugo and the creator of Sherlock Holmes ought to write the fiction which these facts inescapably suggest. It is doubtful, however, if any fiction could equal in allure the straight, uncolored facts as they will set down from day to day in the British records.

Let your own mind play with it a bit. The names of the ships, when you may for their probable sea-graves, is like the catalogue of some airplane armada. Suppose some time hereafter, with perfected airplane vision which sees below the surface of the sea, with perfect diving methods making depths and heights alike accessible—suppose—suppose!

The annual convention of the Amalgamated Profit Sharks decided to change the spelling of their slogan from "servants" to "servants," as being more in keeping with the present-day spirit of conservatism, but they left without changing their old working rule of "Nothing for nothing, and little for two-bits." Their chairman asserted that outside efforts to have this rule changed were clearly bohemian.

If we are to have a plan for getting the soldiers back to the land, why not a plan by the Secretary of Commerce Redfield to get the boys back into stockpiling, banking or into running factories? Why specialize in farming, when not half get more than mere wages? Why not hand out a few of those mop-tops!

There is only one thing to do with the bomb-throwing red. Trace him to his hole, then treat him rough.

FISH THAT KNOWS NO FEAR

Killer whale Easily Hides With Most Fearless of the Animals of the Deep.

The killer whale is one of the most deadly animals that swim in the sea. Killers are found in almost every ocean of the world, but because of the nature of their food, they are seen as feeding grounds the sounds and bays along the coast, rather than the open sea. They are ferocious voracious, constantly destroying more than they eat.

"Killers apparently will eat anything that swims or floats in the water," says the American museum, who has been studying whales for some time. "Fish, birds, seals, walrus and other animals are all its prey. Its appetite is almost unbelievable. There is a record of fifteen porpoises and fourteen seals being taken from the stomach of a 21-foot specimen." The capacity of the killer has given rise to a number of fantastic tales, one of which is that of a killer being seen with a seal under each flipper, a third under its dorsal fin and a fourth in its mouth. In pursuit of the killer, belugas in a terrifying manner.

Killars are the only whales that feed upon their kind. They sometimes go in company by dozens and eat upon a young whale, killing him like so many butterflies. Some whales are said to bite tails, while others bite at his head and thrash him until the animal drowns. So great is the strength of the killer that a single one, fastened to the teeth into the body of a dead whale being towed by several whaling boats, can carry it to the bottom in a few hours. They know no fear and in parties they will attack the largest whale.

Not even a whole number of ships can dare the ferocious killer, who frequently, through his boldness, attacks whaling parties by surprise, mistaking prey into non-resistance.—From an American Museum of Natural History Bulletin.

MANY PERSONS 'SOUND BLIND'

Peculiar Affliction That It Is, Now Assured to be Common.

Color blindness is by no means an uncommon condition, for many people, although they may possess perfect eyesight for reading or seeing long distances, are unable to distinguish between green and red and may other pairs of colors. Lately it has been reported that a certain boy could not distinguish at all between the sounds of "very" "berry" and "ferry" and yet he could hear at as great a distance as anybody. Another youngster would spell "different" "different" and "different" and "different" sounded to him. Several others ran the letters "y," "m" and "n" together in a hopeless case, being unable to tell one from the other.

LAY NINE EGGS IN HAY!

LA CROSSE, Wis., June 15.—No one in La Crosse believed that Gus Rhodes, farmer, living near West Salem, claimed he had a white cock which was able to lay a country egg, as La Crosse men sent J. H. Benson, of La Crosse, to the farm to watch the hen for two days. Later Benson reported that he saw a country judge's office here and swore in a sidewalk that Rhodes' hen had laid two eggs in two days. The next day Rhodes called and announced that he had laid nine eggs that morning.

"Keep your eye on the barnyard and you will see a white egg. The best ones are advertised in the Times."

Powder Puff,

Rouge and Booze Used by Student

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 18.—(AP)—Whiskey, powder puff and rouge "legitimate" side in securing a U. S. degree at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, that J. J. Young, student, who said he lived on the Kansas side, should receive his "sheepskin" marked "unquestionable honor."

Young was arrested at the Kansas City, Kan. depot as he was about to depart for Lincoln, by Henry Hayward, law enforcement officer, who also carried off a copy of the student's general of Kansas. Young said he would graduate in June. In his suit case was the following:

Twenty-three quarts of whiskey, North-west powder puff, box of face powder.

List a jar of rouge, pair of men's dancing pumps. In police court Young was asked by the judge: "Was there you ever on all that liquor?"

"Drink it," replied Young. "You see, some of the other boys wanted some, too."

"And who used the 'powder and rouge' questioned the court. "Oh, I do. You know, our own."

"You may have read some of them yesterday, but there are a good many new arrivals admitted every day."

Scotch Shorthorn Sale Next Friday

Preparations are now complete for the Scotch Shorthorn day, Friday, June 18. The sale will be held at the Salt Barn and commenced at 10 a. m. Pure Scotch Shorthorn cows and bullers and bulls will be offered at the sale.

ALL COAL BIDS ARE ALIKE—NO CHOICE GIVEN

By a strange "co-incidence" eight bidders operated by the county commission yesterday made identical offers on supplying coal for the county hospital. No action has so far been taken on them.

Bids were received from Shovel & Moberg Coal Co., Warburg Coal Co., Central Coal Yard, Warburg Coal Co., Western Coal and Iron Co., Home Lumber Co., N. B. Brothers and the Nibley-Chandler Lumber Co. In each and every case the figures were $150 per ton on Utah coal run, delivered at courthouse, or $150 delivered at hospital, and $100 on lump coal.

Expressing the opinion that the bids were too high and also wonder at the "co-incidence" of all being alike the commission took time to confer and voted to withdraw the bids.

SO THE PEOPLE MAY KNOW

President rumors, intended to hurt the reputation and standing of DR. WYLY, have been spread throughout the city and country that Dr. WYLY is about to leave the city.

The malicious intent of these rumors is so plain that it had been my intention frankly to ignore them, but there are a few people who, not knowing the source whence these lies came, believe them, so I take the chance of informing the people that it is far from my intention to move away.

With the largest practice I have ever had since I opened my office here, and with plans almost complete to build a fine new sanitarium, I want to inform the public and to my worthy competitors that I am here to stay, and will continue to serve my patients in the same efficient manner that has built up the largest chiropractic practice in northern Idaho.

BEING THE AUTHENTIC NARRATIVE OF A TREASURE DISCOVERED IN THE BAHAMA ISLANDS IN THE YEAR 1900—NOW REPRODUCED AND GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC

By Richard Le Gallienne
Copyright by Doubleday Page & Company

Book I
"Noble but that I know of, a Jug full of old coins goes and them."

Introduces the Chapter of the Treasury of His Britannic Majesty's Government at Nassau, New Providence, Bahama Islands. During the summer of 1903 I was paying what must have seemed then an interminable visit to my old friend John Saunders, who at that time filled with becoming dignity the high-sounding office of secretary of the treasury of his majesty's government in the quaint little town of Nassau, in the island of New Providence, and those Bahama islands that lie half to the world to the southeast of the Caribbean sea and form a somewhat neglected portion of the British West Indies.

"Time was when they had a sort of general assembly," he said, "when the now 'slimy little' would have a party to invite to the island. I was there for the first time in my life, and I was very much interested in the proceedings. I was there for the first time in my life, and I was very much interested in the proceedings. I was there for the first time in my life, and I was very much interested in the proceedings.

"Those Old Fellows Would Buy Their Heads"

found one a year or two ago in a plain beer-laden yard among the ruins of that old city. "They, you see, were the men that were the most anxious to get their heads bought. They were the men that were the most anxious to get their heads bought. They were the men that were the most anxious to get their heads bought.

"The very thing for you!" he said; "I don't know if I ever thought of it before."

"What do you mean, John?" we both asked. "I don't know if I ever thought of it before."

"I don't know if I ever thought of it before."

old left on Wood. The following method is given for applying gold-leaf to wood—the surface must first be carefully cleaned and prepared. The gold leaf is then applied with the appropriate gold size which is laid on with a very soft hair brush or camel-hair pencil; great care must be taken to apply the gold leaf before the application of the other, and finally smoothed down. To the surface of the gold leaf, into suitable size, is taken up by the tip of a special brush and laid on, being covered down by a dry camel-hair brush, and so on piece after piece until the whole surface is covered. It is then covered with a coat of varnish, and a certain amount of experience to obtain satisfactory results.

The Perfect Mind. Truth is bigger than our minds, and we are not the same with it, but have a better participation in it. The intellect is not a mere tool, but a part of the mind that comprehends thereof. This is, indeed, one of the great errors of our age, that we have not a sufficiently comprehensive knowledge, or such as is adequate and comprehensive, of the whole of things. We are too apt to be led to this acknowledgment that there is another perfect mind or understanding being there in the universe from which our imperfect minds were derived and upon which they do depend.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Not a Joyous Occasion. A pig belonging to James Newman of this city was recently stolen and was being sought for by the police. The pig was found in a field near the city and was being taken care of by a farmer. The pig was found in a field near the city and was being taken care of by a farmer.
