Diefendorf Hailed Into Court For Purchasing Bond

State Official Accused of Violating Idaho Statute Issues Statement

BOISE, Dec. 1.—State Commissioner of Finance Ben Diefendorf was haled into probate court late today by Karl Evans, public accounts bureau, and charged with purchasing a bond in 1934 secretly in violation of an Idaho statute.

The complaint was filed a few hours after the hearing by State Attorney General Willis Moffatt, Ada county prosecuting attorney, and Ariel Crowl, assistant attorney general, issued statements in the immediate probability of a grand jury investigation of Evans' charges of "irregularities in state accounts."

The complaint against the 63-year-old commissioner, who was appointed by Governor Ben Ross six years ago, was signed and filed by Evans.

Released on $500 Bond

As soon as notified of the hearing Diefendorf and his attorney, Dean Driscoll, appeared before Probate Judge Jackson. Diefendorf was released on a temporary bond of $500.

The law describes the offense as a felony punishable by a fine of $5000 or imprisonment for not more than five years.

"The commissioner of finance is the head of three consolidated departments and has under his many technical laws and details."

"I am no lawyer, but have concluded that the department is the very best of my ability with absolute integrity and honesty."

"I have seen only violations of law, they were purely technical in nature, and I have no knowledge of any violations of law, without profit to myself or damage to the state."

Record Open

"The record is open to inspection and if, after months of unbridled investigation, you find any irregularities in my record, please refer to my office, I think my record speaks for itself."

Told of the charge against the commissioner, Governor Ross said: "Diefendorf bought the bond in 1934, and I am not sure that he was violating the law. He paid part and secured interest. There was no bond in 1934, and I am not sure that he was violating the law."

CRITICISM OF KING GROWS IN ENGLAND

Government Leaders Seek Affecting Crown

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Government leaders tonight sought a solution for the king's position in the face of the criticism of the monarch's private life caused the British press to lift its self-imposed censorship of the delicate subject.

British statesmen, informed persons were not, however, inclined to believe that the king's position was so serious as to require a bill making it necessary for the king to obtain permission of the crown before he could marry.

Prominent political newspapers followed with editorial comment on the king's position. The Yorkshire Post, implying criticism of the monarch almost unprecedented in modern times, said the king's "private life" must have had good reason for so pointed a remark.

Disappointment Expressed

Declaring the nation's hope that Edward would follow in the footsteps of his father, King George V, the paper said it was disappointed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—A severe cold which kept William L. Curry, 60, of the town of Ellettsville, Indiana, farmer, confined to his home until today, almost robbed him of a lifetime ambition of being crowned 1936 corn king of the world.

The alert, official said, was a 100 percent ear of corn, 10 1/2 inches long and 1 1/2 inches in diameter, with a 1 1/2 inch diameter ear of corn, 10 1/2 inches long and 1 1/2 inches in diameter.

Two grand champions were named for state universities, Illinois' college of agriculture exhibition, and Kentucky's exhibition, among others.

Foreign Secretary Promises Protest Before League Against Other Nations' Taking Sides in Spain

Spanish Socialists last night launched an attack on the capitalist of their fascist enemies made in Europe to keep the conflict localized.

Madrid's defenders, in fighting labeled "fiercer than ever" by the war ministry, drove out the insurgent forces from the northwestern edge of the capital.

A double-barreled Socialist advance toward Bilbao, seat of the Paez Juntas, whipped forward through the night.

President Outlines Three-Fold Peace Program

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 1.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in the historic moment on the hemisphere, bent on peace, petitioned the American people, and making clear his thoughts as "shoother" against aggression, and pledged forever against the use of force.

His words gave the vivid breath of life to a solemn congress of 21 American republics as he told three of "colours, who, driven by war madness or land hunger, might strike against us."

Standing in the costly hall of delegates of Argentina's congressional palace, Mr. Roosevelt formally outlined the three-fold peace program, which he followed, in a dramatic climax to two days of pending talks.

Three-Fold Program

The congress heard President Roosevelt outline this three-fold program:

1. Strengthening and utilizing the process of constitutional, democratic government in the western hemisphere and making clear to "war mad" nations that the two Americas stand ready to consult together in the event of aggression from abroad.

2. Steps to prevent creation of conditions that give rise to, including establishment of the highest possible standard of living and political, religious and educational freedom.

3. A more free exchange of goods among American nations, removing the "barriers" that lower living standards and collateralize economic freedom.

War of Exhaustion

The war of popular exhaustion, the president said, followed his trip down the continent, and he reached the congressional palace.

A crowd which packed the Plaza de Congreso for three days, directly in front of the congress building, greeted him as the visiting president rode in an automobile with President Augustin P. Justo of Argentina.

As the president's reception of Mr. Roosevelt on his arrival was described as the greatest in Argentine history, and today's demonstration.

KNIFER FACES NEW TERM AT PRISON

District Court Jury Reaches Quick Decision in Voluntary Mayhew Case

Voluntary Mayhew, 47, faced a possible second term in the Idaho state penitentiary after a jury in the district court here last yesterday found him guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with the alleged knifing of Glenn Henry in a public room at a local lunch counter the night of last September 20.

Authorities here said Mayhew had been sentenced to serve a 2-to-10-1/2-year term in the Idaho penitentiary for burglary committed at Boise in 1934; that he broke jail at Pocatello, where he was held on a parole charge in 1935 and that he violated parole from the Kansas penitentiary where he was sentenced to serve a 10-to-15-year term for highway robbery in 1931.

The jury yesterday found Mayhew guilty of the knifing charge after deliberating for only 40 minutes.

District Judge Adam B. Barclay announced next Friday will be pronounced next Friday.

Relies On Spectators

The court's instructions to the jury included a definition of the penalty that may be imposed—imprisonment for not more than two years or fine not to exceed $500, or both fine and imprisonment.

Mayhew did not testify in his own behalf at trial in the district court but at preliminary hearing he testified he had drawn his knife in self-protection after he was struck by two or three men.

Mayhew relied at trial yesterday on testimony of three witnesses: Fred S. Lloyd, George Royal and H. N. Hunsenmaker, who said they had witnessed the encounter in which

TREASURY CALL FOR NEW BONDS

Secretary Takes Advantage of Market in Finance Operations

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (AP)—Taking advantage of favorable market conditions, Secretary of the Treasury moved last night to put $3,000,000 of new money in the treasury's cash box through December financing aggregating almost $1,500,000,000.

At a press conference, Morgenthau announced the new cash would be sought when $750,000,000 of notes are refinanced and $400,000,000 of bills are retired December 15.

The call for new funds was in line with his policy of keeping the treasury's working balance close to the billion-dollar level.

In addition to the December financing, the treasury chief said, the treasury will borrow about $200,000,000 in weekly bill issues between now and January 15. These bills will be retired from tax receipts on March 15.

U. S. SIGNS NEW TRADE AGREEMENTS

Negotiations Opened With Italy, Spain, Salvador for Other Treaties

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (AP)—On the eve of President Roosevelt's address at Buenos Aires to the Inter-American conference for promotion of peace and trade, the state department announced Monday the signing of a reciprocal trade treaty with the eighth of the 21 nations attending.

"The newest signatory is Costa Rica, whose agreement to extend reciprocal trade benefits brings to 15 the number of countries with which such treaties have been announced.

Negotiations have been opened with Italy, Spain and Salvador for other reciprocal pacts. The Spanish conversations have been delayed pending settlement of current internal troubles.

On the heels of last year's trade, the Costa Rican treaty affects approximately $3,000,000 worth of United States products yearly, chiefly manufactured goods and processed foodstuffs, and importations from that country running between $200,000 and $300,000.

Chief United States exports to benefit from the treaty are wheat and cereal products, cotton equipment, and cigarettes. Existing duties on them will be maintained.

In return, the United States agreed to retain on the duty free list sheep, bananas and cocoa beans, Costa Rica's principal export products, and several less important products.

Contentment's Where You Find It 'Though There's No Too Easy Life'

(The following was written by a person "on the road" at the present time.)

One month on the road, in assorted intervals with all classes of men, poor people, thieves, hypocritical dudes and forthright bums — would convince the most selfish minded of individuals that there is no escape from life no matter how broad nor how long the highway.

Life demands a practical solution. On the way from Seattle to Twin Falls, hitch-hiking along the highway by right thumb, this writer encountered several experiences of a devastating nature to those who place who believe in a life devoid of toil. Let me tell you about one.

On the eastern Oregon coast, in a small salmon fishing port, we encountered a thin, graying headed little man about 60 years of age. We met over a glass of beer.

Somewhere it was impossible to leave him, once we had started talking. He was a Communist, he said. He sympathized with my jobless plight because, as he suggested, he had been on the firing line himself.

"I have nothing to worry about now," he said. "I work only by the notion. In fact I don't do much of anything and I've found contentment."

"This fine and dandy," I replied. He sympathized with my life of leisure that spells contentment.

"I'll tell you what," he said, "to prove it to you, I'll invite you up to my place for a few days. There you can see how I live and if I haven't really found a way, I'll beat this rap called work."

I had nothing better to do, besides I was curious, so I agreed to go with him to his homestead for a few days.

I took a boat up a river which led into the back country, for about 25 miles. We packed in for 18 miles before we reached his cabin. Immediately we arrived there was wood to be chopped. There were one or two cows to be milked. There was a small footbridge to be repaired.

Wings for Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Sally Warren, one of the editors of the Warrenton Courier, is secretly engaged to Terry Maynard, boyish blond athlete who has a South American job prospect. But her pretty headstrong younger sister, Philip, falls in love with Terry. Philip then returns to her hometown and begs the Courier, backing the workers in a strike at the Morris mill. Terry urges Philip to get married at all she asks a week to decide. Wealthy, handsome Mr. Morris thinks she's in love with Philip and asks Sally to help her interest him.

Chapter 10

'A LABOR OF LOVE'

Sally was thinking. Mary Morris and all the country club were so far from Philip Page in all their interests. They knew less than she did about her. But she had a hunch about her. They were the people with money, the people Philip Page wanted to shake out of their employment. If Mary Morris became interested in Milltown, she could do a great deal to help Philip Page in his fight for better housing and food for the underemployed of Warren-ton. What matter how she became interested?

Sally had a sudden idea. "Do you ever have any sewing to be done?" "Mother sometimes has a number of things done for her at a time," said Mary. "What has that to do with Philip?"

"I've been tremendously interested in helping the folks in Milltown," said Sally. "I know, he got out in such a hurry that he couldn't take breakfast for his whole day."

"There's a family in Milltown," said Sally, "the McDonaids. McDonald has a delegation to your father. His wife's a dressmaker and needs all the money she can make."

"But when does Philip come?"

"Philip admires and respects McDonald. He's helped them—got it. If you want to contribute to their welfare, why not take some sewing to Mrs. McDonald? You'll learn a lot about the things Philip's most interested in."

"Over Sally'll do it this very day and you'll come with me, won't you?"

"No, I can't," said Sally. "You'll have to do it for yourself."

"But you can't have wandering around Milltown alone," said Mary coaxingly. "Just take me three or four times."

"Well," said Sally reluctantly, "seeing that Mary would never get any further alone, thinking that she had a good idea, she decided to go the way back to town Mary was thoughtful.

"I've got something," she said, as they started at Sally's office. "The McDonaids, so my father says, is a trouble-maker. Father means to run him out of town when he gets around to it. That makes everything doubly complicated and twice as exciting. I'd like to see you and Philip! If either catches me in the act, there'll be a marvelous row."

"Sally went back to her desk, feeling none to certain that she had been right in helping to take Mary to Milltown. She had been thinking more of helping the McDonaids than of Philip. Philip could fight his own battles, but she probably preferred to keep Mary out of them.

"As for Mary's intention of pursuing Philip Page and leading him to the mill, Sally refused to think of it. Mary was not in town with Philip—yet."

Mrs. Warren was sitting on the front porch in a rocker. "Is that you, Sally?" she peered through the door. "How that boy, Terry Maynard, went here a full hour for you. I told him you'd be back. Finally tip came in that you'd be with him. "Thank you, Mother," Sally's spirit sank like lead. Terry must be for everlastingly with her, not for a while. Or perhaps he wanted to take her.

Sally was sorry it was dark when she came through the door. She would have liked Mary to see the place under the lot glare of the sun.

"They ought to pave this court- yard," said Mary disgustedly. "I bet it's lined with broken bottles and old tin."

When they stopped before the McDonaids' house, Mary brought out a large bundle of fabric. "Mother couldn't understand my sudden interest in having all these odds and ends made over," she chuckled. "As they went up the path, they heard the hum of the sewing machine inside. Sally wondered if Mary never saw the machine, the gully, bringing her new burden."

Three children were sitting on the top step, playing with tinetti they had caught and imprisoned in a bottle. They stared at Mary and Sally as they entered. "I've brought you some more over," said Sally appreciatively. "Have a look to understand. I'm real kind of you. Such a pretty friend you've got, too."

"This is Mrs. Morris," said Sally, watching Mary closely. May darted a quick look at Sally, then shrugged. "I've seen her picture in the papers," said Mary, nodding comprehension. "I bet she'll be glad to see you."

"They did not stay long. Mary explained what she wanted done, and Mary was chosen to make it. There was none of the friendly talk that Sally and Zola Hopkins enjoyed when they came to see May. Mary, Joe Morris' daughter could do nothing but an enemy, come for some other purpose than to get sewing done. As for Mary Morris, she was frankly in a hurry to get out of the stifling heat of the little house."

"Terry waits an hour," Sally mumbled as they went down the path. "This is certainly interesting. Sally wouldn't set foot in that house except for Philip."

"What about Mary?" demanded Sally. "She lives there."

"She must be used to it," said Mary. "Or, she'd get it if I was standing by the car."

"Hello," said Sally. "What's your name?"

"Mrs. Morris McDonald. Pop's sorry he named me for old Joe. He's going to change my name."

"That's good," said Mary. "Did Mr. Morris know you were named after him? I bet he'd have given you a present."

"No, he wouldn't," said little Joe. "I don't get nobody nothing. I want to be a hero like my father."

"Good again," little Joe shouted after them.

"Come along," said Mary. "I don't want to see her here."

"Good-bye," little Joe shouted after them.

"I don't want to see her here," said Mary. "I don't want to see her here."

Browns' Boss Speculates In Talent Market

ST. LOUIS (AP)—They say the St. Louis Browns are backed by $200,000, and that probably is about the worth of the new owners—but more to the point is the $175,000 the team has for retooling.

Manager Rogers Hornsby once said a stack of dollar bills equaling "day baseball" they still have, but $175,000 can help buy players, and the Browns, with their cash, are definitely and openly in the market for new talent.

Hornsby says his entire team, without exception, is on the trading block. The Browns want pitchers. It was on the mound that Hornsby saw the greatest need for help.

NEW IDEA TO BROWNS

This determining to rebuild the Browns—and spend money in doing so—something new. In the past several years, deals have been closed more with an eye on the clubhouse green to the team's treasury than to the club itself.

DeWitt, executive assistant to Branch Rickey of the Cardinals before coming to the Browns, expects to see the general manager's office to coordinate the chain which carried the Red Birds to the top.
