MONUMENTS LEFT BEHIND BY DOUGHBOYS IN FORM OF BASE BALL DIAMONDS ACROSS SEAS

NEW YORK, July 15.—The American doughboys when the last of the kind finally bid farewell to occupied territory in Germany and the Tolls of France, Belgium and Luxembourg, are going to leave some monuments behind that will serve as reminders of their visit abroad for some time to come.

These monuments will be in the shape of baseball diamonds scattered far and wide over the countryside of the lands we have mentioned and left as a reminder that the Yankees, who came and helped conquer the Tolls were here at some time.

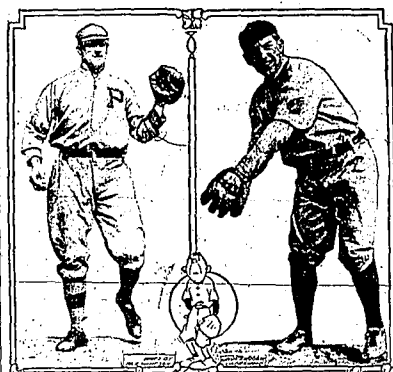

Following is the schedule of play for the South Dakota League during the second half of the season, commencing the first round, which was played last Sunday.

QUEER CLAIMS TO GOVERNMENT FOR RELIEF

When Armistice Was Signed, Millions of Dollars in Mining Machinery and Developments Were Wiped Out, Just As Were Manufacturing Contracts—Miners Went Reimbursement.

WASHINGTON, July 16—Here a host of deep-pockets miners in the claims presented to the war minerals relief commission in connection with the effort of the government's stimulation of war mineral production.

The commission's former deputy chief of Colorado, former U. S. congressman of Illinois, and Philip N. Moore, formerly president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, have spent the past four months trying to straighten out the tangle.

When the news came that the armistice was signed, the bottom dropped out of the market for tungsten, molybdenum, chrome, pyrites and several other war requirements, and miners in communities which had grown up quickly in various states, were as quickly wiped out along with the fortunes invested in machinery and mining development.

A convention was called by the American mining congress in Washington, and a bill was introduced making for reimbursement for actual losses. There was a hard fight in congress. It being charged by representatives from agricultural and manufacturing states that the "millennium mining operators" were trying to put their hands into the pockets of the government, to live their own with unearned government money.

The war department was at that time endeavoring to secure reimbursement for incompletely munition contracts, amounting to more than a billion and a quarter dollars. The war minerals relief act was attached to the munition bill. An interesting contest followed, the friends of the manufacturers making a strong endeavor to make themselves free from the mineral relief rider, and the mineral men organizing representatives and senators from mineral states so thoroughly that a head-hot result and for a few days it looked as if the munition bill would fall to pass.

An interesting development has been that while engineers for the business of dollars would cover all of the actual claims, more than thirteen hundred claims have been presented and the total claims are in excess of eighteen billions of dollars.

Many distressed by amazing claims have made the situation one of the most unusual ever faced by a government commission. One of the oldest transportation line. One claimant wrote that his claim covers five trips to the mountains with his packages loaded each way.

The smallest claim was for $20.75, which the claimant stated was due to him for the valuable time he had while waiting for a letter from the United States government.

Some of the mining claims seem to have been produced by hand, as for example, "The April Fool" claim and the "Great Catastrophe Mine."

The war minerals relief commission is now visiting the various districts in which the largest number of claims are located, and at this time is in California investigating transactions and claims cases.

SERBIA'S PLIGHT IS DESPERATE

WASHINGTON, July 15—A nation starved, raged with disease, boiling with unrest and greatly neglected, in the description given of Serbia, by Colonel Henry Hyde Forester, New York commissioner of charities, and Jack Yark from Europe after an exhaustive survey of Balkan state conditions for the Red Cross.

"If I were to try," said Polks, "to summarize the things that Serbia is unable to do on her own, a declaration of her economic condition, I would have to begin at the top and follow down the list of all means of sustenance and survival, as affecting there is a wide variety outside of the actual soil of her country—and even that must be re-ferred to the Red Cross for relief. There is a nation paralyzed—except as to fight. And that will go, no, before long. If her needs are not met, for the forces of hunger are close to her border, waiting for the moment to sweep down her and hover in the air, ready to take the cure of the world's unrest, which Serbia, for a reason as yet unexplained by historians, has always been, still to be considered the most important of the Balkan states."

Summed up this is the message, which the Red Cross is carrying to Serbia's actual internal condition:

Not a bank is doing business there; there are no schools open for children; there are practically no doctors or hospitals for the sick; there is nothing to sell in stores; except what food supplies locally produced; there are no factories in operation; practically no fuel can be had; there is no labor available; the entire man-power of the country has been driven into the hills, which is in Austria-Hungary; and there are no means of transportation, no houses, no utilities, no food, no gasoline, no trucks and but few oxen.

Of course, much must be rushed to Serbia, but the only address is at Belgrade, and that is being done, but it will be difficult to fill her up with supplies, and her transportation is still in some sort of shape.

Belgrade on the south to Belgrade on the north is not a direct road in Serbia. Her railroads are in ruins. In conjunction with this must be sent rolling stock, automobiles, gasoline, tires, and other necessities, and immediately she must have garden tools, seeds and agricultural implements. She must have her hospitals, and when these have been attended to, she will be able to feed herself.

The ships are the cruiser South Dakota, with 1,800 troops and, last night, July 13; the California Amphibious Troop, with 6,000 men; the Annapolis, with 1,400 men; and the Annapolis, with 1,400 men.

SOVIET RUSSIA IS BONE DRY

By Frank J. Taylor
(United Press Correspondent)
NEW YORK, July 15—Soviet Russia is bone dry. One cannot get a drop of vodka anywhere. There is no wine nor beer, either.

It is surprising to find the water-wagon compulsory in that wild land, where scarcity is what one anticipates.

Mr. W. C. T. could have been more diligent in enforcing the bone dry law than the Bolsheviks. Russia never had so much vodka as she has now.

According to eye-witnesses, lovers of the vodka habit almost riot against the Bolsheviks when Lenin ordered all the bottles and barrels of fire-water withdrawn from the gutters.

In place of vodka the Russian drinks tea several times a day. "To satisfy that craving" for alcohol he sips it through a lump of sugar held between the teeth. In all institutions and factories operated under soviet rule, tea is served to employees at least four times a day.

The Bolshevik reformers did not stop with taking the country dry. They have gone on to take away the salt. In the first place, the salt industry has been nationalized and has succeeded to the extent that there is less of either in the market than in the pre-revolutionary days. In the second place, the salt industry has been nationalized and has succeeded to the extent that there is less of either in the market than in the pre-revolutionary days.

To the Woman Who "Never Has Any Luck Putting Up Fruit and Berries"

How even a Beginner can be Sure of Perfect Results in Making Jams, Jellies and Preserves

Good home preserving is now easy to accomplish. Even the housewife who "never has any luck" with all sugar preserving can put up fruit perfectly if she will first make her preserving syrup with 1/2 Karo (Red Label) and 1/2 sugar—instead of all sugar.

By this method you can always have the finest, most delicious jams, good clear jellies, and preserves with a rich, heavy syrup.

Karo is a fine, clear syrup, with a natural affinity for the fruit juices.

It blends the fruit with the sugar, and keeps away with one of the great advantages of putting up fruit at home, and just as cutting the work in half.

You can depend on Karo that fruit prepared by this method will never grow tough or "candy" in the glass.

For a complete recipe and Candy-Making Karo (Red Label) is used in millions of homes. In all cooking and baking recipes use Karo instead of sugar. It is sweet, of delicate flavor, and brings out the natural flavor of the food.

FREE The experienced housewife as well as the beginner will appreciate this unusual interest-free, ready-to-go, easy-to-use, and suggestive guide for preserving. It is free with today's Karo.

DECORATED FOR HEROIC ACTION

Six Officers and Fourteen Men Given D. S. Cross

WASHINGTON, July 14—For remarkable heroism in the defense of the Philippines has awarded the distinguished service cross to six officers and fourteen enlisted men of the American expeditionary forces, the war department announced today.

Among those decorated was Brig. General F. W. Sladen, headquarters Fifth brigade, Third division. On October 14, 1901, General Sladen, on learning that the foot line was held up by enemy machine gun fire, proceeded to the advanced position through three or four lines of enemy machine gun fire. He was then almost exhausted from 48 hours of constant duty. Upon arrival he found the position completely abandoned and killed and the troops disorganized. Once fighting, but refusing to be repulsed, General Sladen, personally rallied the units, and due to his efforts the American troops carried the position successfully. His home is at 1, Boden Lane, Flushing, L. I.

Unfolding of Summer and Sport Suits

No one is prepared for misadventure unless she has ready for warm weather a sport suit, or a sport coat that may be worn with skirts of the same fabric, supplemented by a sweater or cardigan. Many women who have made a place for (self that nothing can fill it. It is not an extravagance, but a necessity. The sport suit has become a necessity. The sport suit has become a necessity. The sport suit has become a necessity.

The suit of the right is made of a heavy ribbed, silk-knit and coat of the same material. There are several patterns in these sport suits, some of them in two colors, others in figured designs of one color. Amongst cloth is a favorite for schoolgirls, though placed in bands about the skirt and cut and as cuffs and collar. But many of these suits are worn, as the beautiful fabric makes variety enough. Even in sport suits the vest has made a place for itself, and it appears in this model either as a sport suit, or as a separate garment, or as a separate garment, or as a separate garment.

ARIAL INTOXICATION

Many people say that men must have some sort of artificial exhilaration, and if they can't get alcohol, they will take dope. But how about aviation?

Many aviators have written of the joys of sailing far above the earth. A striking account is given by Major R. W. Schroeder, in Popular Mechanics, of a flight in which he ascended nearly six miles. He had the usual pleasure of soaring upward for the first two or three miles, and then came some unusual ones.

The sun grew strangely dim. He felt light-headed, and began talking to himself. Then he took a few whiffs from the oxygen tank—flutters have to carry oxygen with them when they rise to great heights, because there is not enough of it in the thin air.

As soon as I started to inhale the oxygen the sun grew brighter again and my motor began to exhaust so loudly that it seemed something must be wrong with it. I was no longer hungry, and the day seemed to be a most beautiful one. I felt like singing with sheer joy as I gazed about through the small portion of my goggles which had no frost, due to a drop of oil which had splashed on them from the motor.

I felt at it until my oxygen gave out, and at that point I noticed my aneroid indicated very nearly 25,000 feet. The thermometer showed 32 degrees centigrade below zero. The lack of oxygen was affecting me and I was beginning to get cross. I could not understand why I was only 25,000 feet after climbing for so long a time. I remember that the barometer seemed to be very much out of place, but I felt that I was flying correctly, and that I was right and the horizon was wrong.

Then his gasoline gave out, and there was nothing to do but to glide down to earth. And when he dropped a couple of miles, his mind began to clear up. Surely an aviator, at least, need never miss whisky or champagne.

PACKING PARCELS

If more care were exercised in packing and marking parcels intended for shipment by express, it would mean a saving of about a million dollars a month, in which express companies and shippers would share, to say nothing of the saving in time and temper which are usually lost in the process of adjusting claims.

A package which, in its march to its destination promptly and in good condition must be prepared properly for its journey.

Only new, sound containers should be used; old ones do not stand the strain, and frequently come entirely to pieces, or burst open enough to reveal their contents, making them liable to damage of themselves.

Paper wrappings, if used at all, should be stout and clean. No old labels or writings should appear on any parcel or box. They lead to confusion and mistakes in shipment.

All packages should be labeled plainly with the address or consignee and destination. For these addresses ink or paint which cannot be erased or rubbed off should be used.

Those consignees who come from the chain brand of a big express company, a man old in wisdom on the subject. He also adds with quiet humor that express packages are of all sizes, weights and shapes, and while the company may do the best it can in loading or unloading, not every package can go at the top; hence it is best to pack every one strongly enough to stand the pressure at the bottom of the pile. The same advice naturally applies to packages sent by parcel post.

REVOLUTIONS TODAY AND YESTERDAY

Strange how the world jukes upon revolutions of today and those of the years ago. Yesterday the allied nations held a great celebration in Paris in commemoration of the first big act in the drama of the French revolution one hundred and thirty years ago. On July 3 the whole of the United States joined in celebrating the great American holiday, based on the revolution of 1776. In this, too, the people of other nations took part, each extolling the virtues of the revolutionists—that is, the Revolutionists of past times.

For revolutionists of the present, for the jobshock of Russia and the folk of Hungary, nothing but condemnation and the firing squad is mentioned. Which is as it should be. Revolutionaries are not pretty things, but if they are successful they mark eras of economic improvement, and if of the present are encompassed in the knowledge that we have attained perfection. That's all there is to the story.

Meanwhile, while America and Americans in the years past were busily engaged in exploiting the natural resources of the country, the profane have turned upon the profiteer and exploit him. The profiteers hold the enviable position of being the goats upon whom the profane prey, and as long as the consumers think they can beat the game there need be no fear of revolution in America.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY ARE MIXED IN THIS AFTER-THE-WAR DRAMA

Work of American Jewish Relief Committee on East Side, New York, Runs Gamut of Human Affections and Passions—Every-day Performances That Touch the Heart.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The most dramatic lost-and-found column that the world has ever known is a street corner sign in the East Side of New York. No charge is made for advertising in it. No reward is offered to the finder. Whenever it is posted, this extraordinary column will bring in money, tears and off-putters, excited sobbing and hysterical squeals of grief.

Example: They are the lost-and-found article's advertisers. Sam Schuenen's wife and six children, who haven't been heard of before his death, are advertised for. The lost truck of which she was driver from Russia. Lela Haddock's sweetheart, who might have been killed in the war for all she knew until today. The girl of a column it is. Such a lot is posted almost every day in the drug store office of the American Jewish relief committee-transmission bureau at 98 Second Avenue on the East Side of New York City. There all the comedy and tragedy of the work that the Jews of America are doing to save the lives of the war-stricken dead and their relatives. The dollars now totalling more than a score of millions that American and other humanitarian agencies are contributing to the American Jewish Relief Committee and other organizations of its kind are there seen in "action." No war has so far seen so much of a kind of play, so straight from the heart as these men and women and a child, too, now and then. They come to the lost-and-found.

You get a new idea of the extent to which war has occupied human life, as usually as a child might be taken there, from that crowd around the bulletin board. In just one average day last week 42 men and women and children were missing relative to Europe, war-torn and victims of the Bolshevik "uprising." Without name, rank, or service, they are in charge of the work at 98 Second Avenue, where able to give information to almost half of them from Poland, Lithuania, Lithuania, and half a dozen other places.

Last Monday noon was turned in. A Harry Kozloski, aged 29, had been killed in action, and his wife, Mrs. Tuesday it was $5000, and there were several days. The money was not in large sum, either, but in many little pieces, such as 100, 500, 1000, 5000, 10000, 50000, and so on.

Another old man comes in, with a gray hair and a beard that seems to have been blown in by the wind. He has a black eye, but in behind his rimmed glasses with window-panes in them, his eyes are bright. He is in his manner both useful and intelligent.

Like if you find me my wife," he demands. "And six kids," he adds, as an afterthought.

"When did you hear from her last?" asks a woman. "Four years," he tells her. "The last address was London, Magnificent Street."

There was a missing man, but he was not in the war. He was in the war, but he was not in the war. He was in the war, but he was not in the war.

"We Gave You the Diadem of American Citizenship—and Then Left You"

By U. S. JUDGE CHARLES F. AMMON, North Dakota

[In sentencing a North Dakota preacher convicted of disloyalty.] You received your final papers as a citizen in 1898. By the oath which you then took, you renounced and adjured all allegiance to Germany and to the emperor of Germany, and swore that you would bear true faith and allegiance to the United States. What did that mean? That you would set about earnestly growing an American soul and put away your German soul. That is what your oath of allegiance meant.

Have you done that? I do not think you have. You have cherished everything German and stifled everything American. You have preached German, prayed German, read German, sung German. Every thought of your mind and every emotion of your heart through all these years has been German. Your body has been in America, but your life has been in Germany. If you were set down in Prussia today you would be in harmony with your environment.

CRIME WAVE IN BERLIN

By Carl D. Grant (United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN (by mail)—Berlin at present is in the grip of a crime wave such as has never known before. Careful analysis shows it to be a rather natural corollary of economic depression, though it is variously described by theorists here. Home, who years ago in the "old days" of the latter, say it is quite easy to see that robbers, murderers, jokers, second story workers, are all largely because Germany now is in a democracy.

Others say it's all the fault of Nudde and his volunteer nationalism; and these persons are trying to have something done by the Prussian assembly to check the wave of crime. Everything from pell trousers to a fast suit to a jacketlock. In fact, a word near the city was carried away placed recently. And, as for pocket-books—well, they were safe once in Germany, but certainly no more.

One particular during this has to do with a man who had stolen 40 million Hungarian lei, which had to be quite a sum of money, but he was later runked up by the police authorities in company with an attractive woman who is believed to have been his assistant. Murderers occur with too much frequency, while "stick ups" are of nightly occurrence. Robbery of dwellings and hotel rooms causes no comment, it's of too common occurrence.

Lighted most of these crimes like a particularly simple economic explanation. The most engaged in these things are men who in normal times would work. Now, they get nearly enough to get by, but many are not turning to the easiest way out—robbing and so on—as a means of making a livelihood.

One branch of crime arising from economic conditions quite directly is that of food smuggling. "Schleichhandel." The government makes very strict rules as to amounts of food to be rationed and issues bread, meat and potato cards. But, it has long been recognized that it is unwise had the money he could get the food—without all kinds of food. The "Schleichhandel" makes a big profit. He gets eggs and meats and butter from the countryside, perhaps through one or two middlemen, and markets them at a profit price in Berlin; or perhaps he brings in choice foods from Holland and the Scandinavian countries.

Along with the development of violent crime, has come, too, a marked growth of social evil. This appears to be true of all the European capitals. An outgrowth of abnormal economic conditions, wherein unemployment is high, and the price of food, is the most spreads vice.

Read the Advertisements

You read your newspaper to get the latest news. To get all the news you should read the advertising columns as thoroughly as you do items of local, national or world-wide interest.

For every advertisement is a news item. Each advertisement tells a story of its own—a story of economical interest to you and your family.

Advertisements tell you what, where and when you can buy to best advantage.

Advertisements keep you posted on the latest improvements in every article of human need, whether food, clothing, articles of household utility, necessities and luxuries.

Advertisements have established standards of quality for nearly everything. You insist on that quality when you buy—perhaps unconsciously of the fact that advertising has implanted that standard of quality in your mind.

Your local merchants deserve your support and patronage.

PREPARE COMPLETE HISTORY OF TWIN FALLS COUNTY IN THE GREAT WORLD CONFLICT

Official Publisher Is Now Gathering Data for Publication Which Will Serve as Full Record of Those Who Went and Those Who Stayed—Soldier Photos Will Be Feature of Book.

Twin Falls county is to have a complete history of the part she played in the world's war, and its official publisher is now gathering data for that purpose, under the supervision of the council of defense.

This history will contain the photos of the boys that served from Twin Falls county, with their military careers and a complete record of all that was done by the army that stayed at home.

Special mention will be given to all activities pertaining to Liberty loan, council of defense, Red Cross work, war saving stamps, nationalistic activities, and a complete list of all subscribers of the five Liberty loan drives.

Arrangements have been made with Weyle's Studio of this city, and the Fritz Studio of Idaho, to take photographs of the boys without cost to them, and all possible stories will be put forth to make this history 100 per cent complete.

As this will be the only history concerning the war that this county will ever have neither time or expense will be spared to make this a most valuable volume, and a book that will be just as to the remarkable record made by Twin Falls county during the past struggle for democracy.

HIGHEST EVALUATION AMONG AVIATORS

PARIS (The Associated Press)—The statistics of the French losses in aviation for the entire month of the war demonstrate that without question the victors were the allies of the war.

The total loss of airplanes in the first nine months of 1918, 2467 planes, and of whose death there can no longer be any doubt, and 2267 killed.

Among the aviators flying back of the war zone, there were a total of 1267 killed. Of these the greatest bulk were lost in cutting down a forest, the total however about equal for the number killed in the war zone.

RUSSIANS HAVE SOME SUCCESS

LONDON, July 15 (Russian Bolshevik troops fighting Admiral Kolchak's forces on the East front claim the capture of Perm and Kangra and a News Agency dispatch from Helsinki today. Both towns are important and were previously held by General Romanov's troops. Perm is the capital of the government of the game zone and Kangra is fifty miles south of it.

It was considered the helplessness of a man who thinks he can do everything himself. How much headway can one now make by cutting down a forest and building a city? There must be co-operation with other men.

Announcing a Change in Management

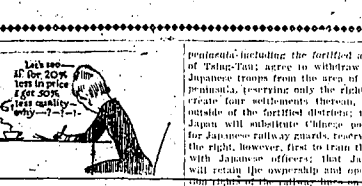

The Home Bakery Lunch Room is now under the management of Mrs. W. J. Cook, who will continue to serve delicious luncheons.

If you appreciate Home Cooked Foods, just try one of the delightful luncheons served here. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. You'll never know how good the things we serve are until you give them a trial.
