TEAR HOLES IN RABBIT RANKS

Roseworth Ranch Getting Rid of Long Ears With Vengeance

Donald McLean, former county agent, now superintendent of the Roseworth ranch, estimated that 25,000 rabbits have been killed and poisoned since spring at that place. They have used strychnine on green alfalfa, have used traps in their fences in making rabbit drives and have two men spending a good deal of their time shooting the rabbits that get inside the fence. One little girl, Jacqueline Perkins, has killed 1150 with two dogs, the last two weeks. McLean states that the campaign has saved practically all of their crops while those around them have been almost totally destroyed.

AIRPLANE PATROL FOR FOREST FIRES

Federal Forest Service Is Making Experiments With Army Machines.

FORESTER TELLS ABOUT TRIP

Gives Interesting Account of Experiences Together with Observations as to Feasibility of This Method of Fire Detection.

Washington, D. C.—Airplane patrol of the national forests by army machines was begun as an experiment for the forest service recently. The first report from a forester has just come to headquarters here after an exciting observation flight from the field made over the southern part of the Colorado, covering portions of the Eldorado and Stanislaus forest preserves.

The trip was taken by Assistant District Forester How for the collection of data on an important question, the method of fire detection; what should be done to fight the flames, if possible from the plane; how aircraft may promptly be given; what type of plane or machine is best adapted, and what additional apparatus may be necessary to make successful this attempt at more effectively safeguarding remote and inaccessible stretches of practically unexplored country. The source which annually destroys thousands upon thousands of acres of timber rapidly becoming well high prices.

Tells Striking Tale. Forester How not only covers all the important points, but tells a striking tale of adventure in doing so. After describing his preparations for the trip, he continues: "I was one of the army flying instructors. The plane we used was a Curtiss J3B-1, a biplane with a top wing and controls in front, so all I had to do was sit strapped to my seat. We started about nine o'clock, I had heard a great deal of rumors concerning a forest fire that I was expecting to find today, but never knew the kind of a symphony of destruction was that we were standing still, when in fact we were going 70 miles an hour. We flew up the American valley to the coast, then to Chinese, ten miles southeast of Helena.

THE MAGICIAN

(Reprinted from Collier's Weekly)

One of the fine satisfactions of life is the recollection of a great artist in his prime. It makes little difference whether the performer was a statesman or an actor, a military hero or a singer. In the days of our childhood the old people kindled among the joy of living with the memory of public performers, of which they had been lucky witnesses. With one they may have been Daniel Webster at Bunker Hill; with another Jenny Lind at Castle Garden, Paganini playing in Paris before Helme and Berlioz; or that genius for luring, acting, the Prince of Wales, at the Grosvenor House. But the people who are fortunate enough to see and hear the President this summer will have a reminiscence to store away that will be worth more than wealth to soothe their closing days. For Mr. Wilson is at once the foremost statesman of the world and its greatest artist. We know of no more enjoyable treat than to see him at his best. But we have come to us at the very peak of his fame, his skill, his self-confidence, wearing, as he were, the shew of victory in his buttonhole.

Having heard him more than once, we can assure the adoring public that they will not be disappointed in his interpretation of one of the most stupendous events in history. They will hear the very top notes. To say that his power of statement is unparelleled is to give him the faintest praise. In our time no one has approached him as a platform speaker. He has all the arts and graces, natural or acquired by long and careful practice. His opponents and rivals are bodily mated against him. Lodge is cold, Borah violent, Knox talks like a lawyer, pleading a case; Bryan is a mere blabber singer. The president legitimates the intellect and soothes the senses of his hearers. Always himself at ease, he never ceases in his audience the disquieting apprehension that he may strike a false note. He has the "bad cents," but always in complete control. He is as certain of his audience as a good singer, and apparently indifferent to them. No matter how carefully prepared his speeches have been, they sound extemporaneous and effortless. He exhibits none of the extravagances and overemphasis of the "popular orator," but speaks as if in pleasant and familiar but earnest conversation with his audience, whom he wishes to convince of something which has deeply impressed itself on his soul. Orderly, convincing, logical, blandly humorous, he yet continues to suggest strong feeling animated by a stronger mind. If you admit a single premise, always carefully, without measure, lost as an opponent. In any case, your antagonism, however alert when he begins to speak, eventually is soothed to sleep by the grace of his eloquence and the melody of his voice. His speeches sound even better than they read. In hearing him you wonder how a man in his position dare say so much; in reading him you wonder how a man in his position dare say so much; in reading him you wonder how a man in his position dare say so much.

The League of Nations may be a very good thing or a very bad guarantee perpetual peace or threaten perpetual war; enable democracy with a world union or degrade it to the level of wicked European greed; free us or bind us. No matter. The opposition to it, rapidly fading now, will come entirely under the spell of the lyrical interpretation to which many hundreds of thousands of Americans will listen this month, and the tone will be recorded as one of the most important musical and political events in our history.

CONSUMER AND PROFITEER

Few housewives have patience to read lengthy columns of testimony and denials and accusations and counter-accusations and technical evasions and statistics and details generally about government investigations.

But there is hardly a housewife in the country who does not know, and who has not known for months, that something was radically wrong about the meat situation.

The up check with the meat situation is the slow situation. There is manifestly no excuse either for the retail price of meat or the retail price of shoes. That both should rise as the dollar drops is natural. But when it comes to paying ten to thirteen dollars for white canvas shoes, or 50 cents or more for a pound of lamb in the lamb season—why, the value simply is not in them. The difference between the cost plus honest profit and the retail price is simply a hokey, and there is no sane explanation which will satisfy the victim.

During the war wonderful things were accomplished by concentration of the public mind upon one point after another. The nation was able to save food in an astonishing manner because the whole nation put its mind at once to saving food. Other things were done in the same way—sweaters were limited and shells were made and ships were built and camps sprang up like mushrooms.

This matter of profiteering in necessities is just as important as any of those matters were. And it is just as needful that it be settled now and once for all. If we let this slip, we are in for it, with no recourse.

The absolute concentration of the public mind upon the profiteering situation, the determination that some way must be found to deal with people who try to grow rich upon the fundamental needs of the people, is imperative.

If every individual will make it plain to his senator and congressman that he wants an effective check put upon the greed of the packing industry and the clothing and shoeing and other vital industries, something will be done about it.

This is not vaguely up to some commission. It is a matter of duty up to each man and woman in the country.

REFORMERS

(Editorial by the Rev. W. A. Moore)

The world is in its reforming. Many things need adjustment. But enough is the path of the man who dares to help in the adjustment.

The world needs nothing more quickly than an attempt to carry out a new and better measure than the one which we have endured, and under which we have suffered. He who would be a reformer, and by his life bless his community, must first take leave of his own reputation, for his fellows will not suffer him to be a blessing until they have first laugh him.

Once the followers of the Christ were persecuted, the persecutors, thinking they had God service, today His name is above every name even in the minds of those who do not claim fellowship with Him. — Roman men hunted victims being played together, all before court place. A Paganini with his Cremona suddenly breaks in with his strong instrument of true pitch. One hundred musicians are arranged. They say Paganini is spoiling the music. It is not so. Paganini would help them to produce, not discard, but perfect music.

Just so it is with the reformer. His fellows think him as playing the discordant note, but when truth is fully known it will be found they themselves were below concert pitch. For the reformer, comfort it may be said that it is written "beware when all men speak well of you."

Country wide "Price insanity" has made living impossible without hard-ship, says a Chicago paper. "Price insanity" is right. The producers are insane to ask such prices, and it drives the customer crazy trying to pay them. Who's lonely now?

A leading newspaper says that "just where to attack the problem of the H. C. C. is worrying the Republican senators." Yes, and it is worrying a lot of Democratic senators, and a lot of people who never saw the senate-tee.

Marshalls Joffre and Foch, who, more than any two other men, perhaps, saved civilization, have had their salaries raised to $7,200. Thus they receive now almost as much as an American congressman.

John D. who used to give away prizes when he felt generous, now distributes tickets freely. No change in policy—severe recognition of the changed standard of small change.

If you are troubled with mosquitoes, get a water dog. It is a kind of lizard that eats them alive. If you can't get a water dog, perhaps the trees will bark at them for you instead.

That Englishman who named his all-horse the "Flying Pig," so long ago, was a bit of a prophet, judging from the present prices to which pork prices have flown.

Now Hindenburg gets into the game and offers to stand trial in the Kaiser's stead. Don't worry, Himy! You'll stand trial all right—but for your own crimes.

Switzerland threatens to bolt the League if Germany is not admitted at once. If that's her attitude, let her bolt, then bolt her out.

Every Element in Purchase of Thrift Stamps Contributes to Patriotism
BY THE WIFE OF THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY GENERAL

The habit of saving by means of Thrift and War Savings stamps is a personal benefit as well as a help to the country, combining patriotism with a good and thoroughly safe business investment.

The person who with his savings is taking a part in financing his country takes up the same relationship to his country as a new investor in any enterprise. Like the investor in an industrial project he has a personal interest in the organization, the management, and the prosperity of the nation. It pays careful attention to public affairs, and a hitherto indifferent attitude is transformed into serious and vital thought. He has a new desire to promote in every way the well-being of the country. The well-being of a country, thus looked after, becomes a matter of healthy development, and leads to encouragement to boldness and anarchist.

There is patriotism, too, in the personal gain accruing to the individual from investment in War Savings stamps paying four per cent interest compounded quarterly. The person who is accumulating such a reserve fund is ready to better his condition when the opportunity comes his way; he cannot be displeased by some unexpected storm of adversity; putting his savings into Thrift stamps and War Savings stamps, he is developing the habit of handling his earnings to his best advantage; he is keeping out of debt; he is evolving steady habits of self-development. A nation of such individuals means national stability and ever-increasing growth.

In other words, every element in the purchase of War Savings stamps contributes to patriotism. Even the personal profit they pay makes for national stability and advancement. For War Savings stamps are constructed in such fashion that they benefit both the buyer and the government.

GOVERNMENT MUST OWN CORPORATIONS MAY PROMOTE EXPORT TRADE

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The United States must come to government ownership of railroads, W. D. Boyer, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, this afternoon told the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee.

"Why not adopt the government ownership plan now?" Boyer asked. "Any other plan is simply a half step and you must take the full step to safety."

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The Edge bill providing for the incorporation of corporations to promote export trade and finance foreign industries was reported favorably in the senate this afternoon by Senator McLean of Connecticut, chairman of the banking and currency committee of the senate. The committee at first voted to take no action on the bill, but reconsidered and ordered the bill reported favorably.

The measure was amended so that the controlling interest in the corporation must be owned by American citizens.

GIVES CAT PALK OF WISDOM

Writer in California Newspaper Censures Former Wife and Child of Householder Pat.

It is often a subject for discussion as to which is the wisest animal. Some say it is the dog and some are in favor of the horse, while scientists appear to think it is the elephant. We beg to differ with all these views. Do not even agree to the movement to create quarters to give the pelts for wisdom to the fox. To our mind the wisest animal that lives is the cat. And if it goes to that, we have no further objection to the fact of all animals we like the cat the best.

A cat is so wise that it succeeds in not letting a fellow know why it really is. If you will be friendly with cats—and that's an easy thing to do—you will be wiser for it. And you will not know that you can't imagine how affectionate a cat can also be.

For Success in Business.

Wealth is, after all, only what is produced by us, either by mental or physical labor. It stands to reason, therefore, that a man would become rich in this world's goods, or in knowledge of things or men, he must work hard and long to acquire such knowledge and skill. And he will be rewarded in proportion to his work. Despite a lucky stroke occasionally here and there, success has usually been prepared for, striven for, helped onward by his own innate ability, work, or tact in ways the exterior world often failed to recognize. Hard work is the best friend any man ever embraced.

I would say to all youthful beginners in business that business is like the hand—the more you put into it the more you will get out. If you put nothing in, you will get nothing out; if you get it in deviously fashion, you can only expect an indifferent harvest, if any at all.—Exchange.

MERLIN BATLEY RESUMES PLACE ON TIMES STAFF

Takes Old Position in Advertising Department, Held Before Entering Service

With the return of Merlin G. Batley to a position on the advertising staff of the Daily Times, the lure of the newspaper "game" has once more been demonstrated by Batley, and university man and well known local Elk, erstwhile lieutenant in Uncle Sam's army and more recently executive secretary of the Elk Round Up, has returned to the job he held before the war.

Graduating from the University of Oregon, Mr. Batley came to Twin Falls in 1916 and associated with the Times, first as reporter and later an advertising manager until May 1918, when he entered the army, winning a lieutenant's commission in the ordnance department. He was stationed at Camp Hancock, Georgia. On his discharge from service at the first of this year, Mr. Batley entered the employ of the Johnson Auto Sales company where he remained until assuming the position of secretary of the Elk Round Up in the engineering of his big event he naturally took a "responsible part."

Colonel Hies, commandant, said no effort would be made to make the men go to work, but that the men would be kept in their cells and no one allowed to leave there.

He expected no difficulty when the time came to resume regular prison duties.

With the return of Merlin G. Batley to a position on the advertising staff of the Daily Times, the lure of the newspaper "game" has once more been demonstrated by Batley, and university man and well known local Elk, erstwhile lieutenant in Uncle Sam's army and more recently executive secretary of the Elk Round Up, has returned to the job he held before the war.

Graduating from the University of Oregon, Mr. Batley came to Twin Falls in 1916 and associated with the Times, first as reporter and later an advertising manager until May 1918, when he entered the army, winning a lieutenant's commission in the ordnance department. He was stationed at Camp Hancock, Georgia. On his discharge from service at the first of this year, Mr. Batley entered the employ of the Johnson Auto Sales company where he remained until assuming the position of secretary of the Elk Round Up in the engineering of his big event he naturally took a "responsible part."

STRIKERS ARE ON THIN DIET

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., July 25.—No food was taken by the 1000 or so militiamen prisoners of the United States disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth today to work and they are still in their cells today, the only food being served them consisting of bread and water.

Colonel Hies, commandant, said no effort would be made to make the men go to work, but that the men would be kept in their cells and no one allowed to leave there.

DRY PERIODS MEAN CAREFUL CROP CHOICE

Farm Bureau Advises Acreage That Will Not Need Water Late in the Season

"This season has been a very dry year all over the water shed affecting the irrigation waters of the states of Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, and the western slope of Colorado," says a farm bureau statement.

"It is generally true," the statement continues, "that practically all of the acreage in the northern part of the state are showing a higher runoff. This is due to a light snow fall and lighter rains in the high mountainous areas. The result is that it has been true in the years past but a dry period extends over a period of two to three years or more. It seems to be true that when the winter water sheds are dried out so that the springs do not furnish the usual amount of water that it takes more time in the season of heavy rains and snow fall to bring these springs back to full flow. Would it not be well, at this time, to look into the future and lay our plans for the coming year to play safe on any possible water shortage? This can be done in several ways.

"One thing in my mind we feel that most good farmers will use the opportunity they have to get water in the fall and early spring and fill up their wells and have a good reservoir of water in the subsoil to draw from during the summer season. By filling up the soil it takes much less moisture during the hot summer season to irrigate the crops. Another feature that is overlooked is the proper cultivation of land to hold a good moisture. This can be done in several ways. In our examination of land in the valley of the Snake river and crops this year we find many places where crops are suffering at this time and not growing properly. One of the reasons for this is the lack of good plowing and deep cultivation earlier in the year. The best farmers are realizing that water alone will not grow a crop. We will call attention to the fact that there is plenty of humus in the soil as well as a good supply of lumps or humus better adapted to hold moisture than when the humus and fertility become exhausted we find it more difficult to hold the water on the land and produce good crops.

"Throughout the country on our best lands where they have been properly and wisely farmed there is a splendid showing of all kinds of crops and a general rule the poorer crops, along with the poorer farming, there is some exception to this rule, among a few farmers who could not realize the importance of this matter. They overreached themselves in putting too large a piece of land in cultivated crops that require moisture in the later part of the season. This is unfortunately for them. We feel that this season will be a valuable lesson to farmers in this country in this respect. We feel sure they will guard against an excessive acreage of crops that require a large amount of water during the latter part of the season."

WAGE WAR ON THE CANADA THISTLE

Farmers Ordered to Keep Lines Clear of Noxious Weed

A war is being waged on Canada thistles in this country by all owners who are alive to the dangers of this noxious weed. The commissioners have published notices in the newspapers ordering all who have Canada thistles bordering on the highways next to their farms to destroy same and keep from seeding. Not only should these thistles be cut down but they should be raked and burned as there is danger that many heads have already formed seeds that will remain and germinate the following year. This is the one of the most dangerous weeds we have, and it should be eradicated from every acre of cultivated land. We would be glad to have a report at this office of any who are not taking care of the Canada thistles on their farms especially where they are along a lateral or along the highway where the weeds would spread to other farms.
