PROFITTEERING AT HOME AND ABROAD

There is insistent demand all over the country, which culminated yesterday in an address by the president of the United States to the congress that something shall be done to relieve the consuming public of the unreasonable burden of profits carried by the consuming world, by which the takers of the profits are permitted to live in luxury, while the producers of the wealth are permitted to live as best they may.

The evil will not be corrected by words. It requires action. It is quite useless to point out the railroads, or the purveyors, or some indefinite thing away back east. Doubtless there is more or less profit deriving all along the line from the time the goods leave the producer until they land in the hands of the consumers. What is needed is to make fewer handlers between the two extremes. And when there are fewer handlers, let their profits be limited to a certain percentage, so there will not develop again three or four times as many distributors as are needed to supply the needs of the public.

At the same time, the wants of the public have grown outrageously. Perhaps there is no greater abuse tending to make high costs than that suffered by the retailers who are called upon by the public to do things out of reason. For instance, the purchase of postage stamps at a retail store, charged and delivered, or the sending out on approval of goods. The retailer is as much at the mercy of the consumer as the consumer is at the mercy of the retailer. Besides the fight which the retailer must make to hold his trade by doing unreasonable things, the retailer must also fight, especially the increases in prices and the constant deteriorating quality of goods turned out by manufacturers.

The retailer has no financial path to tread, but he ought to be hequent enough to say that he has been getting "chick" or a part of "his" and not try to pin the blame on somebody else. Further than this, if one can judge from the activities of the federal inspectors and the reports of men who have been following the example of the "get rich quick" schemers, it might be well for him to let his profits dwindle to a living loss, and not try to get that new automobile out of the profits of this month's sales.

THE PRICE OF SHOES

A retail shoe publication takes sharp issue with the charge that undue profits are being made by dealers. It presents a set of statistics, most of which have to do with the supply of hides and leather, from which it appears clear enough that the cost of materials has increased enormously in the last few years.

There are fewer cattle slaughtered, and at the same time there is an increased demand for leather at home and an abnormal export demand. The price is, it seems, quite out of step with new demand by raising the selling price of hides. The cost of manufacturing leather has gone up. Naturally, then, leather of many kinds costs twice what it did a year ago, and the variety has risen.

Unfortunately the proposition is not complete. It is not explained to what extent shoe making machinery and labor have risen, nor what profits the manufacturers are making. Neither is it shown how much is made by the jobbers and wholesalers. There is this no means of telling how much of the profit of any particular shoe to the retail dealer is legitimate.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE ADMINISTRATION

At a recent meeting of the city council a resolution was passed designating an evening newspaper as the "official organ" of the city administration. The functions of an official organ are to put a favorable light on whatever the organ sells. In this case, the public, or that portion of the public which can be misled by the inspired utterances of the organ. With the privilege of mislead the public goes the further privilege of collecting money for advertising that is required by the statutes to be published.

The number of flies has been established as being. But there is such a thing as overworking a man.
Some fellows never get through in their garages on Sunday morning in time to get ready for church.
Automobile license fees are not the only part of an auto that constitutes a jump at this time of the year.

In some parts of Europe war is regarded as good; in others it is apparently regarded as only starting.
Fungal Chlamydia is averring his belief in punctuated rest. At that, it is the most expensive in the world.
The lexicon of medicine has not provided a scientific name for a dip-matic disease "diplostatic" might do.

England has escaped hobnobbing, but in order to do something revolutionary it has taken up American jazz music.
The song of William Holstenfeld did not have to pass a conscientious objection in order to escape the perils of war.
The shortage of jobs also may be attributed to the fact that some fellows are holding three or four good ones at once.

The corker-maker manufacturers will be naturally busy as ever, since their work is appreciated for its next convention.
All new trucks in January have been converted into gardens for raising vegetables, so there will be more to go around.

REFLECTIONS BY THE WAY

Love your enemies-and you'll be content.
If you can't understand it, it may be out or poetry.
Of course, the boys who read over are entitled to a rum-buck.
It has the recognition; the man who has to make in his soul is equally indifferent to a flat wheel.

It has always been introduced into the system of a man's health to them by means of caprice.
Astronomically or geographically speaking, the purpose of the great dipper must be to skim the milky way.
There is still "hard" warfare. It is in the selection of sex partner with paper when there are no grown girls in the gratuity.

The gratitude should go forth to the young doctor who keeps the head of the most characteristic ornament of manhood-alive among the sons of men.
One objection to a man of our parts is that they are not the necessity of doing a day's work for their living before they can sit down in idleness.

Caprices in Summer Dress Accessories

In dress accessories fashion can change her mood for caprice with greater frequency of success. Modistes who turn out the beautiful hats of tomorrow, take advantage of this and occasionally take a fancy to the hat they have used for millinery to make lines. They help to furnish variety in these indispensable belongings and suggest new ideas for hats and bags to match may be. Even the happy owner of a hat bag might be surprised to find that she might not have the much-needed hat bag to match her dress.

GROWERS ASKED TO PREVENT SPREAD OF NEW MALADY THAT MENACES POTATO CROP

Potatoes in Different Stages of Wart Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The potato industry is seriously menaced by a newly discovered disease—the potato wart disease. This it can be eliminated before it spreads to commercial plantations, specialists of the United States department of agriculture say. It will cost potato growers millions annually. It is easily recognized and when discovered it should be promptly reported to federal or state agricultural officials.

Like many other plant diseases and insect pests, the potato wart disease was imported from Europe. It is without doubt the most serious potato disease yet discovered in the United States. Unless promptly suppressed it may prove disastrous to the entire American potato industry, which involves nearly half a billion dollars annually.

What to Look For.

Two bright spots reduce the menace of this disease.

Recent in its early stages, it is easily recognized; and it spreads slowly. However, it cannot be detected until the potatoes are dug, as it does not seriously affect the growth or vigor of the vines.

It usually appears in the eyes of the tubers, spreading from this point of infection, it may gradually envelop the whole potato and render it a spiny, water mass. It is characterized by the prominent wartlike outgrowths on the tubers.

The warts at first are whitish or light brown. Eventually they turn to a darker shade. After decay starts they turn black. Young warts, when exposed to the light turn green.

The warty tumors vary from the size of a pea to a walnut; or they may even exceed the size of the potato on which they grow. In the latter case, the warty mass loses all resemblance to a potato. In some instances, some of the potatoes may appear perfectly healthy, but the eyes are likely to be infected.

PIKE PESTS QUITE HARMFUL.

Makes Use of Tunnels Made by Moles.—Destroys the Vegetable and Root Crops.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Let the mole do the work and get the blame," says the fine name as the earth beneath a mole-made tunnel to a hill of juicy potatoes, where he eats a self-sufficient meal. And at that time, the mole is industriously busy. These pests of the garden, orchard and farmer are crafty. They burrow tunnels in their search after grub, insects and worms, and cultivate as plant-disease men in riding the soil of freshly turned. This riding is done after the mole has dug up the vegetables and root crops which the moles free of insects.

SINGLE-PITCH ROOF IS BEST

Gives Highest Vertical Front Exposure to Sun's Rays and Throws Rain Water to Rear.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are many advantages to a single-pitch roof on the poultry house. It gives the highest vertical front exposure to the sun's rays and throws all the rain water to the rear.

TIMELY POULTRY HINTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Keep the hen confined to your own flock.

Don't keep a male-hen. Hens by just as well without a male-hen's overcast your flock.

Purchase well-bred pullets rather than hens.

Don't expect great success in hatching and raising chicks unless you have a great pit separate from the yard for the hens.

Build a clean house or shelter.

Make your house dry and free from drafts, but allow for ventilation.

Fowls stand cold better than dampness.

Keep house and yard clean.

Prevent roosting and drooping breasts.

Provide a nest for each four or five hens.

Grow some green crop in the yard.

Spade up the yard frequently.

Feed table scraps and kitchen refuse.

Also feed grain once a day. Feed a dry hen.

Always have fresh from lice and the house free from vermin.

Kill and eat the hens in the fall when they begin to molt and refuse to lay.

Preserve the surplus eggs produced during the spring and summer for use during the fall and winter when eggs are scarce and high in price.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

The wheel hoe makes garden cultivation easy.

Alfalfa is relatively free from diseases and enemies.

Don't quit cultivating now. Plants need the soil stirred now as much as ever.

Keep the potatoes well cultivated. Much depends on the way the crop is cultivated. The sifting of weeds is not the only purpose of cultivation.

BUSH VELVET BEAN IS NONVINGING VARIETY

Grows to Average Height of About Three Feet.

Does Not Twine on Corn and Hence Does Not Put Down Stalks—Like Cowpeas Crop, May Be Harvested at Hay.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The bush velvet bean, a selection from the Alabama variety now being produced on a commercial scale in Georgia, is being distributed in trials by the United States department of agriculture. This differs from all other velvet beans in cultivation, as it is a bush bean instead of a vining variety. It grows to an average height of about 3 feet. It makes rather less growth than either the Alabama or Georgia varieties, while its character of growth increases the difficulty of harvesting seed. The amount of herbage is somewhat less than the average production of the velvet bean family.

The special advantage of the bush velvet bean is that it does not twine on corn and hence does not tend to pull down the stalks, while it is also suitable for planting in orange and other fruit-tree groves where a non-vining bean is desired. Like cowpeas, this bush may also be harvested as hay, as the absence of trailing stems eliminates the common difficulty which occurs in plowing the ordinary twining varieties of velvet beans. Bush beans are planted the same way as cotton, when the soil is thoroughly warm, the seeds being dropped 2 or 3 feet apart in rows 3 1/2 feet in width and covered the same as corn. It is customary to plant the beans either alone or in alternate rows with the corn. One bushel of seed will plant 2 to 3 acres. After planting, the crop should be cultivated about like cowpeas.

Keep Down Expenses.

Keeping up a garden is one way of keeping down expenses.

Making Good Gardens.

Thorough and regular cultivation goes a long way in making a good garden.

HQS CHOLERA DONTS

- (Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
- If cholera exists in your herd or flock, observe the following:
1. Don't visit your neighbor.
  2. Don't let your dog run at large.
  3. Don't keep pigeons about.
  4. Don't let your sick hog get out of the farm.
  5. Don't let your neighbor's hogs hang around your pens.
  6. Don't let your hog run to streams nor on highways.
  7. Don't let your sick hog get out of the farm.
  8. Don't allow any carcass to remain unburied.
  9. Don't borrow or loan farm implements.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Improve your care and neglect will cause even the purest bred hog to succumb to the swine fever.

It never is not available for pasture for young pigs provides an excellent substitute which will be suitable for pasture within 50 or 60 days after planting.

Ordinary grass pasture, crown pines, sorghum, rug, clover, alfalfa, peas or beans can take the place of slim milk after the pigs get a start.

A good brood sow in worth much these days of high prices for bacon and pork. Show enough care and work to supply your farm with meat.

Early fall is the best time to start a flock of sheep. Good grade ewes and a pure-bred ram are best for beginners.

Sheep raising does not require expensive equipment or heavy labor, but does require steady and continuous attention.

The best sheep is the type that combines the largest amount of both wool and mutton.

MANY COMMUNITIES FIND NEW METHOD OF SELLING SURPLUS PRODUCTS OF BENEFIT

Where the Producer in His Own Middleman.

Community markets have helped to solve the problem of better utilizing locally grown food products in many parts of the country, particularly in the New England States. In almost every community there are usually a number of farmers or small gardeners who produce a surplus of food products, an amount often too small for the individual to sell to commercial agents. If any consideration from the wholesale dealers or even retail grocers. This small surplus represents in the aggregate a very considerable addition to the community's food supply and raises the bureau of markets, department of agriculture, if such supplies can be economically placed in the homes they are well worth utilizing, especially in this day of high living costs and need of conservation of both supplies and transportation.

To ensure this source of food and to help the farmer and gardener to a number of other last year's surplus portions of streets, public squares or vacant pieces of property in which the farmers and gardeners could offer their products for sale. In such community or public markets the produce is sold directly with the producer and gets fresh fruit and vegetables often at a lower price than could be possible at retail stores.

Community Market Success.

One such market in Massachusetts town last year reports that 20 farmers and 1200 customers were in attendance on a single day, and the business done during the four months through which the market was conducted totaled about $2000. Another open market in the same state reports that within two and one-half hours farmers sold ten tons of produce for $1200. This lot of foodstuffs was carried away by the purchasers.

The community market idea does not appeal to all producers. The concern of the trader or dealer of the farmer who grows and markets a considerable amount of produce usually prefers to sell his surplus quantities to the consumer. But the difference between wholesale and retail prices is not sufficient to offset the value of an equal amount of the food to the recipient of the farm. The small producer, however, whose time is not so fully occupied with the business operations often finds it impossible to devote a part of certain days in disposing of his products at a changing market, taking the difference between wholesale and retail prices for his acre as a loss.

Making Markets Pay.

Community markets have not been successful in all instances, but where there are no other means of disposing of their surplus who are interested in attending a market which is convenient, it is best for the purchasing public. In many cases, however, the market should be more successful if there should be supported by some other method of organization, such as the chamber of commerce or a woman's club, and the city government should be interested in the movement. Experience shows that there always develops a need for a market master who will have direct supervision over the conduct of the market and see that all rules are enforced. Every market should have regulations as to method of selling space, uniformity of weights and measures, and the proper disposal of refuse.

Local conditions of supply and demand will determine whether the market should be held daily or less frequently. In most places two or three days a week will be all that is required. The market for short hours on two days a week is a satisfactory one on three or more days. Simple knowledge counts for nothing for the display of vegetables and other products may be provided, or sales may be made direct from the wagons. Each producer should be required to pay a nominal price for his stand or privilege of selling, this money to go for the upkeep of the market.

Prices at the community market to attract farmers must be higher than wholesale quantities, while if they are not lower than at retail stores the consumers will not be attracted to the market. Such markets have found it desirable to have booths located in a convenient place upon which are given the wholesale and retail prices to be used as a guide in establishing prices of products on the market. Growers are then either encouraged or compelled to sell about midway between the two.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—With the mystery of the bombing of the lawler home in Los Angeles, which occurred on the night of Charles H. Lawler, assistant chief engineer for the Los Angeles board of public utilities, the police were endeavoring to determine today whether any one was implicated in the destruction of the lawler home except McGuire.

GETS A VICTORY BUTTON

A pretty girl works at the military service bureau in New York pinning a victory button on a wounded doughboy. These buttons are being distributed all over the country to veterans of the great war upon presentation of the discharge papers. Sliver buttons are awarded to wounded men, while the others are of bronze.

VAST STOCKS OF FOOD ARE IN STORAGE

Speculators Hope Hunger Will Drive Men to Strikes to Get More Money to Buy Them

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Speculators are without rest as they speculate from the market in the hope that hunger-fueled strikes, may bring higher wages with which to purchase these stocks.

This is the belief of the federal trade commission, expressed today in a statement accompanying figures which were submitted for feeding the government surplus stocks, the supply of foodstuffs held in cold and dry storage on June 1 was 19 per cent greater than on the same date last year.

"The law of supply and demand is immutable and to be blamed for high prices does not seem to burn out by these figures," the commission comments.

On June 1, 1915, the United States stocks were in demand for feeding the families of the allies as well as the civilian population. The fact that stocks of many important foods were much larger in June 1915, while prices were as high or higher, means that they are being withheld artificially for a world demand which is not now here but which is expected when hunger-induced strikes secure higher wages with which higher food prices can be paid.
