A FOOD ADMINISTRATOR

There is one man who knows more about the production, distribution and value of food than anybody else in the world. That man is Herbert Hoover.

He proved his ability as head of the Belgian relief commission, as food administrator for the United States and later as food administrator for the allied powers. He has had unequalled experience.

Recently he resigned his international job because he believed he was not needed any longer, and wanted to attend to his private affairs, which had been neglected for several years.

It is likely that Mr. Hoover would head another organization if he had previous calls, if it were made plain that the nation needed him.

Certainly the nation needs somebody with the native ability, acquired knowledge and delegated authority to handle the present food situation. All sorts of public authorities, from president and congress down to the mayors and councils of small towns, are trying to do something to move stocks more smoothly and economically from producer to consumer, to eliminate extortion and waste and reduce the cost of living. Most of those concerned are running around in circles and getting into each other's way.

The present situation is as critical as that which existed during the war.

Why should not congress, or the president with the consent of congress, appoint some big man to coordinate and centralize the work of investigation and administration, and suggest what new legislation is needed?

If there is any other man available who can do it better than Mr. Hoover, let that man be put in charge. If not, why not stop fooling around and get Hoover on the job again?

The public knows him and has confidence in him. Confidence is accustomed to taking his advice and accepting his word for things. Dealers have a wholesome respect for him. If he were to say that cheaper living is possible, and propose means of attaining it, his word would carry weight. The mere announcement of his appointment to the job would help to quiet the dangerous unrest among industrial workers.

THE UNLEARNED LESSON

German statisticians have been completing their estimates of the human cost of the war. They find that during the war there was a net decrease of 2,000,000 in the population of the German Empire instead of a normal increase of more than twice that much.

According to Dr. Erich Burgdoerfer, the chief of the empire's population was 80,000,000 marriages and 1,000,000 babies unknown. 1,000,000 soldiers killed and 700,000 civilians dead as a result of legal marriage. This reckoning ignores the hundreds of thousands of soldiers destined to die later from their wounds, the millions more wasted or partially incapacitated injuries and the millions of civilian personnel who were lost by war privations and the disease bred by them.

There is nothing in the history of a civilization bearing witness to the rallying cry is, "No more children."

In the face of these facts, German statesmen and writers are calmly discussing and planning for "the next war."

A RIFT IN THE HIGH-COST CLOUDS

The other day announcement came from Chicago that while many articles of foodstuffs had gone up, with the exception of items already mentioned, one nationally advertised biscuit had dropped its price a package.

Last week the Idaho department store had a sort of indomitable sale, in which forty-four items for men, gents, suits, ties, were sold at $1.75 apiece.

So while Chicagoans may eat biscuit and make a saving, forty men in Twin Falls will be permitted to make a handsome appearance, or keep warm, or wear the clothes for whatever purpose they choose, and still not be set back so far financially as to compel them to longer pay for Sunday dinner.

The world needs more biscuits at one cent less, and more suits of clothes at $1.75.

Two more British generals have been promoted to the rank of field marshal. And the United States Congress is still undecided whether or not it can afford to raise any American to the permanent rank of general or admiral.

Many when there are a few more million automobiles in the United States, there will be some agreement about the pronunciation of "garage."

Control of the wires has been returned to private ownership, but the users will need to exercise self control as usual.

Better bring Hoover back home and put him on the road job.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Miss Ruth Law, the American aviatrix, is now in Japan, where she is teaching progressive Japanese women the science of flying.

Treated nurses for rural school districts under supervision of the Red Cross, now one of the subjects concerning this organization.

Club women are now agreeing themselves with the amendment of our laws to soldiers killed in the war, open favoring community buildings.

Miss Josephine Heron, an American girl who took motion pictures at the front for the Y.M.C.A., frequently worked under German shell fire for weeks at a time.

Miss Louis Cullen, Industrial secretary of the incorporation Board of the Y.W.C.A., is to tour New York in the interests of protecting legislation for women.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Every man is worth just as much as the man who is worth most about which he is concerned.

"The one thing we have no power to buy, nor for which we can give a fair value in exchange, must create it or destroy it.

Shame is to speak of our sins, to do as we ought, and practice, to perform and make good what we provide; and surely we would seem and appear to be.

IN SPARE MOMENTS

A celebrated physician in London translated Lucifer while riding in his carriage upon literary rounds.

Degrasse, one of the chessmen of France, wrote an able and bulky work in the successive intervals of waiting for dinner.

Elijah Burritt, while earning his living as a blacksmith, learned eighteen languages and twenty-two dialects by simply improving "old moments."

During his campaign nearly all his meals in the same way, writing down his thoughts in a memorandum book which he carried for the purpose.

Modiano de Gerlej composed several of her charming volumes while waiting in the schoolroom for the tardy pupils to whom she gave daily le-sons.

SAGE REFLECTIONS

All true love is founded on esteem, Buckingham.

None preaches better than the ant, and she says nothing, Franklin.

Or all commodities, upon the Scripture, good examples are the best and the highest, Bunyan.

Kings and their subjects, masters and slaves, find a common level in two places, at the foot of the cross and in the grave, Voltaire.

In order to have an enemy, one must be somebody. One must be a force before he can be resisted by another force. A malignant enemy is a better friend than a stupid friend, Macaulay.

To ye not long, oh listening friends, that I am here to tell you what values they discovered, and what living? It takes much trouble to bind the sepius. How little of both and plow who have repaid the garnet? Butler.

It may, like anger, did not burn itself in our fire, and consume and destroy these persons it possesses before it can destroy those it wishes, worse to it would set the whole world afire, and leave the last, the last excellent persons the most miserable.

Before undertaking any decision weigh the glory of the action with the danger of the attempt. If it is certain to succeed, it is safe to proceed; if it is doubtful, it is foolish to attempt it; if the balance stands poised, let them own gettin' east them—Quinton.

More or less wise

Person will not see when the heart wishes them to be kind. Devereux, one erratic, as difficult does the earth.—Seneca.

The following is a criticism of the great name the man of leisure, or master of relaxation, of the author of "The Last Days of the Earthquake Emperor."

All my experience of the world teaches me that in 50 years out of 100 the safe and just share of wealth to the generous and upright soul—Mrs. Jameson.

Many have been ruined by their fortune, but few by their poverty, but the want of fortune. To obtain the greatest have become little, and the little great—Zimmermann.

Whatever you may disagree we have incurred, it is almost always in our power to establish our reputation—Hocheimel.

Bags without stagnation is the state most favorable to happiness. "The great felicity of life," says Seneca, "is to be without perturbation."

Control of the wires has been returned to private ownership, but the users will need to exercise self control as usual.

NOGGLE FINDS OIL PROPERTY WORTHY OF O.K.

Group of Local Investors Will Drill in Oklahoma with Glowing Prospects

Reckoned a lost man to be pleased having found deep oil after an other of several oil properties which he inspected while representing a group of local investors, J. O. Noggle has finally found one that suits him. The western oil man returned Saturday evening (Aug. 10) through the Oregon and Texas from his investigation which had been far out of his natural conservatism. He has leased a block of acreage for the local men and announces that drilling operations will be started very soon.

"When I quit the oil game and located here I decided I'd stay on my farm because the country looks so good and I've got to get back," he said. "I'm looking for somebody to look after the farm as I will take charge of the drilling. I am personally investing in the enterprise."

Mr. Noggle, who is well known as an oil man, has greatly interested those who know him, by his enthusiastic reports of the Oklahoma property. He has made one trip to California and two to Wyoming for the purpose of investigating, each time refusing to reveal the secret of his success. On this trip he closely inspected the fields at Wichita Falls and Burkburnett, Texas, where oil fields are in full swing; also the Tulsa and other fields in the Oklahoma belt. The field in question is located in eastern Oklahoma, within a well settled oil belt and is regarded as the most likely appearing spot in that country.

The local men associated with Mr. Noggle are preparing to push operations rapidly and, as stated, drilling will be started very shortly.

and for the west is confident at will be given me, affirmative answer. It was Secretary Daniels who argued long when he declared that the bill was not yet fit for its present beginning. More arguments followed, more and bigger houses, larger dry docks and repair stations and better ports must follow, he said.

It pointed good to the west. It meant that no longer must commerce be driven from the west to the middle of the country, notably into the harbors. He meant the rail which had held the Pacific trade in check for half a century is about to be cut.

and for the west is confident at will be given me, affirmative answer. It was Secretary Daniels who argued long when he declared that the bill was not yet fit for its present beginning. More arguments followed, more and bigger houses, larger dry docks and repair stations and better ports must follow, he said.
