TENNIS STARS WILL COMPETE

Rain Stops Opening of Thirty-eighth Annual Tournament of Racket Wielders

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 25.—Rain descending in torrents over the courts of the West Side Tennis club today has delayed the opening of the thirty-eighth annual tournament of racket wielders which opens tomorrow at 11 p. m. at the western tennis.

Tarpaulins were thrown over the courts today, but despite the rain the tournament will go on as planned. Officials decided upon the postponement after getting no encouragement from the weather bureau that the weather would clear.

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 25.—The thirty-eighth annual tournament for the tennis championship of the United States was scheduled to open here today with a match of stars representing the world's best talent ready to compete.

Overcast skies early in the day, with occasional drizzles, soon threatened to mar the opening, however, and the courts were still drying as a result of heavy showers during the night.

Officials of the United States national tennis commission said that play would be started if possible as the schedule of matches is unusually heavy this year.

Sixty-four matches were scheduled in the opening round of the singles here today, starting at 1 o'clock.

Three former city holders—Maurice McLaughlin of Los Angeles, B. Norris Williams II, and William M. Johnston, are among the many players who will contend for the crown now held by Robert Lindley Murray of Niagara Falls.

Other contestants for the championship include Charles J. Griffin, Willis E. Davis and Charles S. Patterson, who represented the United States in the recent matches at Wimbledon.

Other former city holders—Harold Carlton's wild pitch in the tenth game with Pittsburgh, but he was enough to win as Fred Fisher of Hay Caldwell made his debut with the Cleveland Indians and won his game, though felled by a ball hitting which struck him on the knee during the game with the Athletics.

Sherry Smith kept the Cardinals hits well scattered, winning for Brooklyn. Trummy Griffith shamed out a homer in the eighth with bases on the path.

The mighty Babe Ruth added two home runs in his string of twenty Christian and came home on third base for the reason he figured largely in Boston's victory over the Tigers.

pool of water. They were sick. We sprang and at once walking until we could not walk any longer. We were able to swim down the river. We swam until we were about 20 miles. Peterson was so hungry he ate several bunches of water. We were so thirsty, so decided to continue our search for water. At 2 a. m. we arrived at a small Mexican ranch. We were given plenty of water. The Mexicans sold us tortillas and coffee for 25 cents. He then dragged us to Polaris, which we believed was the Polaris on the Rio Grande but which later proved to be Polaris on the Conchos river.

"We attempted to swim down this river but were unable to make it because of the current and rapids. We walked along the bank of the river until 9:30 Monday night. It was the roughest kind of going. Often we had to pull ourselves over cliffs by our hands.

"At 5:30 Monday I saw a light in the distance. We did our best to attract attention but could not. About 6:30 a. m. we reached a small village. There we purchased some tortillas and managed to sleep on Monday night. We were up at 5:30 Tuesday morning. Two heavily armed Mexicans approached us, but did not bother us. We were not far from the town, however, when we were surprised by six Mexicans, all heavily armed. The leader, who turned out to be Renata, told us to get on our hands and knees. He consulted with the others. "A quarter of a mile further, however, we were again overtaken, this time by three of the Mexicans, who sent our guide back and ordered us to follow them up an old river bed. We were being taken to some secluded spot and shot us. But they treated us very well. We traveled until 8 p. m. stopping three times, once at a Mexican distillery, again at a ranch where we had the evening meal, and once at a ranch where Renata traded the two horses we were riding for an old horse and a tame mule.

"We camped overnight on the mountain side and were on the way again at 5:30 a. m. We rested during the heat of the day and during the afternoon came to a rather prosperous looking ranch where Renata obtained a goat which we cooked for supper. They were pitched camp for the night. Renata traded pieces of handkerchiefs and torn up bank checks as we went, to mark the trail. We rode until 2 a. m. Friday when Renata had a lot of amusement proceeding my mule with a sharp stick to make him buck. Peterson knew a lot about Kansas, where Renata had worked on the railroad once, and talked Renata into a new 'friendship.' Renata began calling him 'Peterson' and let him ride a guard. When I tried to argue with Renata he always said, 'Do you want to die now?' and we said no. 'He would say 'All right, then go ahead.'

"Peterson howled and out for arguing with Renata, and Renata would then say to Peterson, 'you and me need friends.' We rode Friday, resting during the heat of the day, as usual. At 7 p. m. we reached a part of a ravine in the mountains. Here Renata announced to us that he was holding us for $10,000 ransom which must be paid by midnight of August 10 or for would kill us both. Renata announced to us that he was holding us for every night and came back in the morning to sleep during the day. We were treated very considerably and had as much to eat, and as good as all the bandits themselves. In view of our lack of knowledge of the mountains, we decided that we would make an attempt to escape, as we would only be captured within a few hours. But when two Mexicans hid down their pistols and pointed them at us, I signaled Peterson and he made a dash for the fifteen while I endeavored to overpower the guards. But they bested me and the other one covered Peterson with his rifle.

"Sunday morning Renata told us that the telegram for the ransom had been sent. He told Peterson that if the ransom were not paid he would be killed. He said he would be killed, but he would not kill him. He would kill me and some hours later he left and came back on Monday morning, bringing the telegrams from our parents, and food which was sent by Captain Matlack. He was in fine spirits and told us the money would be raised by ranchers by 3 p. m. At 2 p. m. our guards told us to get ready and to follow two miles over the mountains to a deep canyon where the guards intended Renata would come for us at 4 o'clock. About 8:15 we heard Renata's whistle and the guards went forward to challenge him. We were guided on the journey by Renata, who told us that he would send Lieutenant Peterson out first and if the money had everything went right he would then send me out.

"The pat. Peterson was hidden in a house and rode out through a cañada, where he met Captain Matlack.

"Renata told Peterson he was the good friend and his life depended on it, so he said, he could come to visit him. He expressed the desire to ride with him in his aeroplane some time and hoped he would soon see his parents. This was when Peterson brought back to him the $7,500 which Captain Matlack had given him for his ransom. Peterson had left with Captain Matlack. He was started off foot with two mounted bandits behind him. He was so nervous that I sympathized with a man being led to the gallows, for I was convinced that some treachery had been planned and that he would be hanged.

"When we were going to the cañada they were going to put an end to things, as I knew Renata had no money. However, in an hour they had the bandits back and Peterson had his money. He said that if he ever saw me again he would kill me on a Mexican agent, then he rode to Captain Matlack. I wish to mention here of the very brave deed of Captain Matlack, who, after the ransom had been paid, was refused to go into Mexico with me. He had only a fifty-fifty chance for his life.

"When I met Captain Matlack in the Mexican agent, he said any noise he would shoot him. I mounted behind the captain and we started out. Matlack offered Peterson $10,000 if he would shoot the agent and told him that he would shoot him if he made any noise. The

Negotiations for Wage Increase for Railroaders Are Continued at White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Negotiations between the railway shopmen and the railroad administration will be continued at the White House this afternoon, when President Wilson will receive Railway Director Hines and representatives of the men.

The negotiations for a wage increase which were opened when the strikers came in an end, have been carried on for four days in executive session. The president canceled several afternoon engagements in order that he might receive the conference and hear a report of their progress to date.

"I haven't told you a story about the fairies for ever and ever so long," said Dobby one evening.

"What's so?" and Nancy "you haven't."

"And I am sure Nick was in a mind hearing about the fairies. I have been for an evening, eh?" asked Dobby.

"You're easily satisfied," said Nick. "I like all stories, even if I don't believe in them."

"Daddy, I do love the most delicate of all things, just what you're talking about."

"You've been grinning at me. I don't know just what they did when I was a little Dobby."

"This story tonight then is to be about fairies and the ball they give."

Read the Advertisements

You read your newspaper, you get the latest news. In all the news you should read the advertising columns as thoroughly as you do items of local, national or world wide interest.

For every advertisement is a news item. Each advertisement tells a story of its own—a story of commercial interest to you and your family.

Advertisements tell you what, where and when you can buy to best advantage.

Advertisements keep you posted on the latest improvements in every article of human use, whether food, clothing, articles of household utility, news articles and luxuries.

Advertisements have established standards of quality for nearly everything. You insist on that quality when you buy—perhaps unconsciously of the fact that only those who have implanted that standard of quality in your mind.

Your local merchants deserve your support and patronage.
