Somebody besides the school children are wearing bright and shining faces today. The Twin Falls club in its last game, our lovely club which has been traveling so long in its straight line struck a slight blow yesterday, knocking the Huld "team" to 2 in a fast game.

It was the same old story of good pitching making a different looking club. Dick Davis, the club's pitcher, lived up to his rep in every way. He toyed with the visitors and although they gathered round him he apparently was using only about half of his reserve. He had affairs entirely in hand at all stages.

The effect of Davis on the rest of the club was startling. A couple of infield shifts had been made and the inner defense was the best that has been shown this season, handling an error and pulling off a double play for good measure. The exhibit yesterday made the fans begin to talk about what the combination might do to the league leading Paul team which wins up the season here next Sunday.

With Davis in the box there is prospect of a fast and furious battle with the trailers.

The catching of Ray, Hanks yesterday was another brilliant feature of the home club's work. The young star shows every earmark of a star. Manufacture-by-the-fan and avoid the manager to get down an outfielder on account of this sure arm ball.

Jumping from the flying boat at the berth on his life with the pair of three taggers and a single. Feet was not far behind Davis in the brand of ball he served off the long automobile and sped away to Huld's usual. Latheway was the only man to reach his delivery effectively and with ardent support he would have been going for a long time, however, was slung to throw out the wild for the best results and the proved easily. On the other hand there were several brilliant hits of fielding behind him, Beck putting a clean catch in the first frame, and Johnny Lindstrom coming in at the end for a beautiful catch.

The Gem Theater takes pleasure in announcing that it has secured "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" for showing on Monday and in urging everyone who wants to see something absolutely unique in the field of motion pictures to come and see Duh's second rare case in the city.

CLAIMS RECORD FOR HEIGHT

CLAIMS RECORD FOR HEIGHT

Challenging not only for the distinction of being the tallest man in the United States, Ralph E. Modern, owner of Bangor, Tex., has obtained for the service in the army his own set of his excessive height. His war department height limitation is 78 inches, while Mr. Modern is 7 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 250 pounds. For 12 years he has followed the varying fortunes of a cowboy and has captured many prizes for his shooting feats. This photograph shows the actual subtraction between the cowboy and Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas.

HOT AFTER PETTY GAMBLERS

New York American League Club Making Usual Drive Against Betting at Polo Grounds.

Officials of the New York American league club are making their usual drive against the petty gamblers who infest the main grandstand back of the third base and the first of gamblers who find it impossible to get into the Polo grounds when the Yankees are playing here. "Cops" have been sent to New York Evening Sun office. Since the newly against those bettors was started by Yankee officials many gamblers have been led to the gate, given a refund on their admission and told to keep out. Some have attempted to get into the Polo grounds, but they must do their snuff fry wincing over the ticker tape. If at all, when the Yankees are home.

Bettors' hold on the American public is due in the most part to the incapacity of the players and the fact that the floor of suspicion cannot be removed at the result of the games. For this reason it always has been the aim of those identified with the sport to bring out the gambling element. The game is better off without persons of this ilk, and the owners of the Yankees are no exception in this regard. These gamblers make themselves obnoxious and objectionable not only to the club management but to the other fans who will thus enjoy a more paltry club or two.

Experts or Theorists— Which?

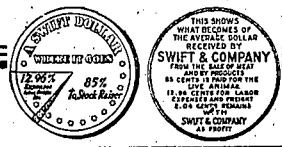

The packing industry is intricate, complex—far more so than the railroads or the telegraph. Every day multiplying needs of society increase its problems and multiplying responsibilities demand more of it. Highly trained experts, specialists of years' experience, thinkers and creative men, devote their lives, their energies, their activities, to solving the problems of the packing industry and meeting its widening duties.

Swift & Company is not a few dozen packing plants, a few hundred branch houses, a few thousand refrigerator cars, and a few million dollars of capital, but an organization of such men. It is the experience, intelligence, initiative and activity which operates this physical equipment.

Can this intelligence, this experience, this initiative and creative effort which handles this business at a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources, be fostered through the intervention of political theorists; however pure their purposes? Or be replaced by legislation? Does Congress really think that it can?

New York Wild In Enthusiasm For Commander

At ten minutes of eight the Levonian sweep by Battery park, turning eastward into North river on the right bank of her long and historic journey from Broadway. General Pershing, standing on the deck, promptly erect at the salute and his eyes, showed their emotion. "I am happy to be home," said he, "to greet the people who have so kindly greeted me at the various points of my journey. I am glad to be back in the city which has so kindly greeted me at the various points of my journey. I am glad to be back in the city which has so kindly greeted me at the various points of my journey."

"The bands of all churches joined in the greeting. Everywhere the knicks were in evidence. They yelled and cheered and showed generally by the way that they were glad to see the general back home again. The general returned to his quarters and was met by a large committee of prominent men appointed by Secretary of War Baker. The committee included Henry P. Davidson, Cleveland H. Dodge, William G. M. Adams, Bernard M. Harosh, J. E. Bingham, Nicholas F. Brady, John H. Ryan, Harry Payne Whitney and Ferdinand Schell.

It was 8:45 before the Levonian was made fast to her Hudson pier. She did not stop at quantifying the "hooked" until the quarantine officers, who had boarded her went ashore at 9:15. General Pershing followed five minutes later to be greeted by Secretary of War Baker with a hearty handshake and a hearty slap upon the back.

In the first rank of the crowd upon the pier were the general's two sisters. With long, eager strides he rushed to their side, took them tenderly in his arms and kissed them. Then, escorted by Secretary Baker and other officials, General Pershing was taken to an appropriate meeting on the upper floor of the dock. So touched was the veteran by the warmth and heartiness of the welcome that he found it hard to respond to the request of the newspaper correspondents for an expression.

"What can one say under such circumstances as these," said General Pershing. "This reception is overwhelming. It is simply overpowering. I could be grateful for much to hold anything, but I accept this demonstration in the name of the brave fellows who went over to France and sacrificed so much and made this wonderful success possible."

The noise inside the pier died down as Secretary Baker mounted the platform to deliver a brief address. It was a welcome but not a noisy one. The general in the street the noise of cheering and bell ringing came in deep, full surges. After Secretary Baker, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who personally represented President Wilson, Senator Wadsworth of the senate military affairs committee, and Congressman Mondell had welcomed Pershing, the commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces in France, returned amid thunderous applause.

He was plainly embarrassed as he started to speak and halted frequently to wipe his forehead. He expressed his feelings. "Fellow soldiers and friends," he said, "if this is to be continued long, I trust that before many days have passed I shall have wished that the war continued. To say how happy I am to be back on American soil is like saying that the sun is shining. My reception is overwhelming; and I am overcome with emotion when I understand what it means to all of us."

"I can only say that the victory which is ours was won by the united efforts of the American people. The army fell at all times perfect confidence in the people back here. You supplied the morals that every armed force must have. The American people never wavered. "Unmeasurable credit is due to those brave fellows who, themselves virtually untrained faced a well trained enemy with a courage that is almost impossible to describe. "To those we left over there," said Pershing, "we owe a solemn tribute. I trust that those we left behind will always be remembered by a grateful people and that their graves will be fittingly decorated so that we Americans in years to come may have a place to go and worship our heroic dead."

General Pershing left Hoboken at 10 o'clock, reaching Battery park at 10:20 to receive the greatest ovation New York City has ever seen. The hero of all this demonstration was, however, dumbfounded at the magnitude and the whole-heartedness of it. Four minutes after stepping from the boat the procession started up Broadway for city hall—a procession that will linger for many years in the memory of all who saw and heard it. Even the ovation given to Marshall Joffre was nothing like the scenes that followed. The general was buoyant and in the mood of cheering. He saluted and saluted to the right and left and then looked upward and waved his hand gladly to the men and women who filled the windows of the towering office buildings.

"Oh, you Black Jack," and "Attorney Pershing," and "very, very, very, very," were some of the good natured and intimate salutations shouted at the smiling general as he moved slowly toward the detention of all officers at the station. The wall of great emotion like a great wind and whirled it back in a column until the general reached the top of the stairs. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women.

The general reached City Hall park at 11:30, where another burst of cheering greeted him with a cheer that was as loud as the one he had heard at the docks. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women. He was surrounded by a mass of cheering men and women.

"BUYING MAD"

The time is ripe for purchasing the winter wardrobe, and now is the time for the buying public to prove the truth or untruth of those statements which declare that extravagant buying is the chief reason for high prices.

The National Association of Retail Credit Men, to whom all accounts are open, all buyers know, says that the American public is "buying mad." Never since the beginnings of the organization have so many accounts been overworked and underpaid.

"It is not for lack of money that people suffer, but for lack of sense in spending it," says the Shermans of the ledger. "Men who a year ago went overboard and the women who wore cotton dresses, now want silk skirts and satin gowns."

Likewise the man whose father would not have thought of getting a horse now drives an automobile, and, night and Sunday, no matter what it costs for car, airplane or gasoline. It is true, he may be making twice as much money, but he forgets that the money has only about 50 per cent as much buying power, and that in truth, he is no better off than his father.

Why not think these things over, face them honestly, and in providing for the winter joy in accordance with an honest estimate of family finances? Then, in the eyes of the credit man and of the consumer's own self-respect, he may stand free of the stigma of extravagant buying and unpaid bills.

ONE "ERROR" LEADS TO MANY MISTAKES

The fundamental thing upon which the Twin Falls highway commission based most of the work it has done up to date is contained in the first statement of Mr. Channel in the report he submitted to the committee of farmers who waited upon him and "approved" a statement from the commission regarding matters that have been subject of criticism, especially by farmers of the county. "That first statement is as follows:

"To complete the road construction program as outlined when the bond election was held will require about 300,000 cubic yards of crushed rock, according to our engineer's estimate."

Upon this premise are predicated these activities of the commission:

- Decision to build a large crusher plant;
- Sending Mr. Johnson to Utah, California and Oregon to get information about rock quarrying and crushing and road building;
- Purchase of a quarry site, involving the expense of a board of arbitration to settle the differences between the commission and the lessee of the property;
- Calling for bids for the construction of the crusher;
- Letting the contract to the Lynch-Cannon Engineering company of Salt Lake City for the construction of the plant, involving an expense of $125,000;

If in the accuracy of the premises depends absolutely the correctness of the conclusions. Start with false premises and false conclusions are inevitable.

The importance, then, of accuracy need hardly be pointed out. It would seem that the engineer and the commission would use the utmost extremity of care to insure accuracy in the premises upon which are based so many and so important decisions. The success of the whole project of road building would seem to rest upon not making any serious mistake in a matter so vital as the quantity of rock necessary to complete the program.

It seems to have been a matter of so great importance that Mr. Channel did not wish to stand sponsor for its accuracy, for he deftly shifts responsibility upon the shoulders of the engineer, in the following phrase of the sentence, "according to our engineer's estimate."

But the committee on public utilities of the Twin Falls County Farmers' association which waited upon Mr. Channel informs us that "Mr. Channel is an engineer of experience." That being true, Mr. Channel should realize the importance of accuracy in this basic thing of the quantity of rock necessary for the completion of the road program, and should be unwilling to shift the entire responsibility upon the shoulders of another engineer, though that engineer be employed for the purpose of auditing and advising the commission. It is not customary among men, in the exercise of ordinary prudence, to go ahead with the expenditure of sums of money amounting to at least $125,000, and which may amount to $500,000 more than that, without looking thoroughly into the necessity for such expenditure. Mr. Channel, being an engineer of experience, could have figured out in five minutes that 300,000 cubic yards of crushed rock would cover the surface of 27 miles of 18-foot state highway and 38 miles of 16-foot district highways to a depth of nine inches.

Inquiry among road builders has failed to disclose a single instance where nine-inch roads are being built or have been built. The popular thickness of all present-day macadam highways, as disclosed by more or less superficial inquiry, is five inches. That is the thickness of road that Jim McMillan's cousin is building down in California, as disclosed by Jim's letter to "Dear T. B."

Now, if it is the intention and purpose of the highway commission, when it gets to building hard-surface roads, to put down nine inches of crushed rock, all the decisions predicated upon the estimate of 800,000 cubic yards needed, are justifiable. But if it is the intention to build roadways of only five inches thickness, it is clear that only five-twentieths of 300,000 cubic yards of rock will be necessary for the completion of the program, or 160,000 cubic yards. Decisions of the commission, based upon the requirement of 300,000 cubic yards certainly contemplate a plant and equipment far in excess of that needed for the production of only 160,000 cubic yards.

The Times has shown heretofore that this quantity of crushed rock can be produced in small portable crusher at $3 a yard, the cost which the commission estimates for the production of crushed rock in a small plant, and delivered to the roadway, for about $75,000 less than the same amount can be produced in a large up-to-date crusher at $1.50 a yard, the cost which the commission "fully justified in assuming." If the production in a large plant, and delivered to the roadway, if the estimated requirement by the engineer of 300,000 cubic yards be an error, and in reality only 160,000 cubic yards are required, it is manifest that every decision of the commission based upon the error is erroneous, or lacks sound promise. If the estimated requirement of 300,000 cubic yards of crushed rock is based on error, then:

- The decision to build a large crusher plant is error;
- Sending Mr. Johnson to Utah, California and Oregon to study methods in large crusher plants is error;
- The purchase of a quarry site is error;
- Calling for bids on a crusher plant is error;
- Letting the contract to the Lynch-Cannon Engineering company of Salt Lake City is error;

And being it would be utterly impossible for the commission not to commit gross errors if it based its course of action upon false premises. If in fact only 160,000 cubic yards of crushed rock is necessary, and the commission worked out on the basis of 300,000 cubic yards requirement, it marks a work with the prospect of more and better food than has been the case.

For a long time, the government has been struggling with the problem of high food costs. To some extent, it has been able to increase the amount of food available, because of the arrivals of American pork, bacon and so on. It has had difficulty in regulating prices and distribution, inasmuch as the illicit trade in foodstuffs has reached overwhelming proportions, even beyond the power of the authorities to completely root out and punish.

Germany's principal need in the food line is meat and fat. It is not particularly badly situated as to grain, and its barons promise fairly well. But one scarcely needs a head of cattle in journeying about the country, and, except for the American fat, there is no American export for hams, sausages, and the sort of things.

The food problem was outlined in the recent report of the navying made by large purchasers of food outside the country. However, it was his only attempt.

How the experiment in reduced cost of living will turn out remains to be seen. With increased taxes combined with the people charged for the government output for added food, it is doubtful if the experiment proves to be the much of a saving device to the extent that widespread conspiracy among natural effects is saving. In the whole, however, Germany's economic condition is such that it people can undoubtedly look forward to higher and higher costs, instead of lowered ones, even through artificial attempts to make money expenses.

TRIED NEW PLAN TO LOWER FLOOR PRICES

(By CARL D. GROAT)

BERLIN, (By Mail.) The German government, says the Times, is having a "try out" with the big cost of living. It hopes that, if it can bring down prices, it can save credit for the government. It is not clear what the government is trying to do, but it is a way that mothers have, you know.

Nick and Nancy laughed for Daddy gave a knowing wink.

"I can't really understand it myself," he said.

But both the children knew that he could for he was a very good boy. He had heard them and thought they were perfect, and besides he was never, never too tired to tell them the truth.

"The zebu child," said Daddy, "was a great joy to his mother. She was very proud of him, and no matter if he was only a pig, she would have behaved child she thought he was lovely."

"Well, I heard the lawyer talking to a zebu child, this special zebu child

"Don't Feel Dandy, Mother"

I want to tell you about and this was what the lawyer said:

"You're six months old today," he told the zebu child, "and now you must be the mother man. You must be to look after yourself a little more."

"You've had your mother, all your life, for quite a long time, but now you must learn how to be a baby and have to be a grown-up zebu."

"Oh, but six months old today," the zebu child said proudly. "Think, mother, in six months old!"

"Yes, my child is a grown-up man now," she said, "he is a real zebu!"

"The zebu, you know, are the sacred cattle of India. They look like great grass cows, only they have horns. Their faces are like cows and they belong to that family."

"There is no reason for their horns, and no special reason why they should be made the sacred cattle of India. That still they have horns, and they have always been considered the sacred cattle of India. Just the same."

"You've had your mother and she's all pretty old for the most part."

"But I'm a grown-up zebu now," said Mother Zebu sadly, for though she was proud that her child was really a zebu now and not a baby, still she could not think that his baby days were over.

"The zebu baby, or zebu child was delighted that he was considered really a zebu now and not that he was actually six months old."

"Don't feel badly, mother," he said, "but in six months you'll be a grown-up zebu for you won't get old for a long time and strong."

"And the mother zebu looked at him and he was a grown-up zebu now and not a baby, still she could not think that his baby days were over."

"Don't feel badly, mother," he said, "but in six months you'll be a grown-up zebu for you won't get old for a long time and strong."

Six-Year-Old Souvenir Hunter is Found With Much Booty

A new type of souvenir hunter was discovered on the streets Sunday evening when a six-year-old boy was found going from one parked automobile to another, appropriating keys as he went. He was finally stopped by a car owner who happened to see the youngster taking the key from his machine. A bunch of the keys, neatly strung on a paper clip was taken from the lad who apparently was collecting a bunch "like dad's." Nine different makes of keys were recognized in his collection which might have enticed the Helix assortment had he been allowed to operate as long as he pleased.

Perhaps Snakes Couldn't Get There? Why are there no snakes in Ireland? The answer is: Because snakes lack their credit elsewhere and couldn't cross the Irish sea. They spread easily over Europe, and got across in considerable numbers into Great Britain, by aid of a now submerged "land bridge," but the Irish sea was too deep for this kind of bridge, and no snakes and larks have reached the Emerald Isle, and few reptiles of any kind succeeded in getting there. It is an old saying that "God is good to the Irish."—Chicago American.

Some Early American History. The Automobile Club takes up some early American history. Manakto, Minn., in pioneer days was the domain of the Sioux Indians. "It took this tribe, according to the tour bible, became disaffected with the slow pace of the government in paying their annuities. Taking advantage of the fact that the Civil war had taken so many men from the country, the Sioux inaugurated one of the bloodiest wars against the United States. The Indians were ultimately overthrown by troops and imprisoned in Mankato. However, President Lincoln commuted the sentence of all but 38. One of these died and the other 37 were released from the stocks in the levee in Mankato. The spot is now marked by a monument.

MILLIONS Suffer from Acid-Stomach

Millions of people suffer every year from ailments affecting practically every organ of the body. The most common of these ailments is acid-stomach. It is the cause of indigestion, heartburn, flatulence, and many other ailments. It is the result of an over-acid stomach, which is caused by an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. This acid is secreted by the stomach glands, and is necessary for the digestion of food. However, if there is an excess of this acid, it will irritate the stomach lining, and cause the various ailments mentioned above. The only way to cure acid-stomach is to reduce the amount of acid in the stomach. This can be done by taking a course of EATONIC.

Profits are Small Says Combine

When confronted with criticism for "boosting" price they rush into print with a nice little alibi. This clipping is from a recent issue of the Twin Falls News:

"If we were actually making such large profits in our business as some people seem to think we are, what they think about us and our business might not concern us so much," said a local coal dealer today, discounting popular acceptance of the announcement of a raise of 20 cents a ton in the price of coal of the first of this month with the prospect for further increases in the cost of it hereafter.

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "I will venture the assertion that there is no commodity sold in Twin Falls today on a smaller margin of profit than coal."

Cost Is High

He quoted figures showing that the cost of coal to the dealer here five years ago was $2.50 a ton. It was sold then for $3.00 a ton, leaving a dealer's margin of $1.50. The cost of coal to the local consumer is $10.25 a ton. Although the dealer's margin has increased from $1.50 to $2.75, the dealer points out, the cost of handling has more than doubled, and the net profit is considerably less than it was five years ago.

Draymen Want Raise

"The draymen tell us that after the first of next month they will not haul a pound of coal for less than $1.50 a ton," he stated. The present charge for delivery is $1 a ton. "If that purpose is carried out," the coal man added, "it is safe to say that the drayman will be making more out of the hauling of a ton of coal than will the local coal dealer."—From Twin Falls News.

NOW LET US SEE

Last winter the United States Fuel Administration allowed the dealer a profit of $1.25, and none of them went out of business. There are just as many yards in Twin Falls today, as there were a year or two ago.

They Say Cost of Handling Has More Than Doubled

But what do they mean by handling? Surely it means the delivery. For there is an extra charge for this service, and, by the way, this has been increased from $1.00 to $1.50. They must mean, then, unloading. This costs from 30c to 40c per ton, and none of them got it done for nothing before the war they carried blame for unloading cost for all of the extra 50c profit they are making over last year, when the government set the price.

It Is a Clear Case of Profitting

The desire for profits, and more profits was the sole reason back of the high prices. A plain case of hold-up. With competition eliminated, with prices fixed, it was easy matter to charge what they cared to, and the public paid the bill.

"We Have Our Meetings"

"They said to the manager of this yard, 'and we'll call you up when we have our next one. Since we've had our meetings and all charge the same price they are all making more money than ever before. You want to get in. You'll make a lot more money by it."

With Such a Combination in Existence What Price Would You Have Been Forced to Pay for Coal Next Winter?

Although the coal combine had been in existence for only a short time, the price of coal rose several times, and it was on the road for a good many more when the City Coal company "showed them up."

The Big "Killing"

It was to be pulled off next winter, when coal would be scarce. It was then they were going to see what they could do. The City Coal company stepped in, and now, with your help the combination can be broken. If you want to help in this fight, against the combination, Phone 509, and give your order for immediate or future delivery to the City Coal company, 414 Avenue South, corner 2nd Street South.

Demands People Help to Secure Ratification

that the United States has carried out all of its international obligations under article ten.

"They say they don't like the way the Monroe doctrine was interpreted. Well, let me tell you the Monroe doctrine was interpreted by other promises. It was swallowed hook, line and sinker, and we cannot now have it interpreted specifically. This document is the work of human men."

"The new deal then presented a declaration that the treaty was not subject to question so far as its language was concerned. Its declaration by the senate before the ratification of Paris is done. Then he called a moment and brought a great amount of simple evidence and laughter by saying 'I cannot now say that so confidently. No, I cannot in the secrets of Providence say that I will long have a healthy United States to be anything. However, I imagine that in the normal course of human affairs the senate will have voted with the conference still in the job."

"Every reservation made by the senate must be taken back to all of the signatories in this treaty. This includes Germany. We had Germany there was the treaty, sign here, with my patriotic American say that this work must be understood and we must ask Germany to do this. It is there any one who would have this done?"

A series of cries of "no, no, no" came from every part of the hall. President Wilson then made his declaration regarding Shantung; and in his previous speech here. Here Senator Norris' home state. His plan was intended to win the support of the president's statement that the League of Nations will protect China was warmly applauded. "The world cannot weather through atmosphere of negotiation," said the president repeating his demand that the League be approved to the treaty "put up a new one or shut up." He then debated the question of Pan-Americanism and demanded "are we going to substitute for protectionism a smaller Pan-Americanism? No man dare suggest that to patriotic Americans. The spirit of the American people is not in America. It is in the battle for human rights. The world knows it. The eyes of the world are on us. We have promised to all that we can for the world and we will resist that promise. If I thought I stood in the way of carrying out this promise I would be glad to do so. I cannot do it. I believe we will put a stain on American fame now."

The president closed by paying high tribute to Senator Hiram Bland. "I would be glad to stand by Senator Norris if he would let me," he declared amid applause.

"What are they afraid of?" he demanded.

The president then called attention to the fact that the largest minority that could be done to American would be to unshelve the bill.

"This covenant," he said, "sets the land, times of Europe to give the people of all nations of Europe titles to their own lands. It puts these people responsible for their own government. It gives to the small nations of Europe title to their own countries. We give Poland back her independence on a rolling that she would not accept."

The president then repeated his statements made in previous address explaining how the referendum principle has been applied to all the central districts of Europe.

"Our referendum settles the land titles," he said amid applause. "If I refer to the recent speech of former President Taft in Omaha was loudly cheered. When the president began talking he was cheered for ten minutes forty-seven seconds. He gave his address by declaring that he appeared not as a party representative but as a representative of all the people of America."

"This treaty represents the views of the people of the United States," he said. "I brought a copy of the treaty with me. Here it is," he said, holding the big bulky white bound copy. "You can see that it is more than three or four clauses in it. It is the magna charta of liberty."

He then explained the operations of the "big four" in Paris explaining that its deliberations represented "the great fighting nations of Europe."

"The intention," he said, "was to establish the doctrine of force and prepared a charter of liberty for the people and the working men of the world." The president then reviewed the language of his De La Salle speech following closely the outline he had made during his address in Omaha.

His declaration that "when Germany has demonstrated that she can be trusted she will be welcomed into the League of Nations" was greeted with applause.

Speaking of the severity of the terms imposed upon Germany the president said: "When a person commits a crime he is severely punished. Germany committed international crimes. She must be punished. But when she punishes the severe terms imposed upon her she will come into the League of Nations, and America will sit on the bench, either as one of its founders or as a direct of world liberty, or as a companion to Germany, which has exploited for crime."

elaboration of his utterances of the last four days. He will continue to elaborate the following points, he said today:

First: That the whole world wants America to take up the burden of peace leadership.

Second: That the opposition in the treaty is based on a great part of the performance of its provisions. The provisions of the treaty are not understood. He pointed out that the provisions interpreted specifically.

Third: That the treaty actually is a plan for the future. It will become effective if the world and this one it will be reflected here in America, especially among the labor element.

Fourth: That the house of nations is an American plan and that instead of making for war it actually will prevent war because it will cause a great division of interest among the nations affected at least for a period of six months. The president has made it plain that he will keep this first before the people at every session, arguing that it must be accepted.

He then accepted the Bryan treaty in the mysterious manner in which so-called Bolshevik doctrine are being spread throughout Europe and even being brought to America.

The president it is known has much information regarding the men behind the spreading of revolutionary doctrine in the United States. It is likely that he will make some at least of this information public before he returns to Washington.

BIBLE WITH BULLET HOLE

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 8.—A pocket Bible with a bullet hole neatly drilled through it is the souvenir now in the possession of Mrs. Claudia Dalbey, of Waycross, who is visiting relatives in Atlanta, and there a mystery connected with it.

Bergant Madison M. Baker, Seventh infantry, Third Division, received the Bible from Mrs. Dalbey, his sister, for a Christmas gift while he was serving in France. Some time afterward he lost it.

A short time ago Mrs. Dalbey received the Bible with a bullet hole through it, with a letter from a man who wrote that he had found it on a battlefield. From the letter was the inscription: "From William to Mattie and Mrs. Dalbey's next address, and the Bible had come through it, safely addressed to it."

ATLANTA, Ga., U. S. A. Whether came other soldier was carrying the Bible when the bullet went through it, whether he was killed or his life saved by the book is a story that probably will never be told. Sergeant Bruce said he certainly didn't have it when the bullet struck it.
