NEWLY APPOINTED MANAGER IS OLDEST MAN ON TEAM. Doing Better Work for Phillies This Season Than for Several Years—Batting Pacemaker of National League.

THE ONE outstanding platoon player of the Phillies is the oldest player on the team's pay roll, namely, the well-known and dangerous Clifford Carlton Cravath.

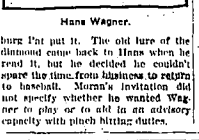

Clifford Carlton Cravath. Today finds him batting pacemaker of one of the major leagues. His playing better still this year than he has done in the last three or four seasons.

A common estimate of Cravath is that he is a slow-thinking, slow-moving, slow-fielding, slow-matured slug who pounces out base hits by sheer might. If it is the common analysis it is the wrong one. Cravath is probably the bestest ball player on his team. He is hitting better after more players pass into retirement, because of brains.

SAYS BOYS WANT NO MORE OF WAR

H. P. Samuels, Visiting Here, Is Strong Advocate for the League of Nations

"I saw thousands of the boys in France, and I never met one that has seen real service who ever wanted any more of it. The American soldiers went into this war not only to defend the central powers, but also to war against any more war."

Mr. Samuels was the candidate last fall for governor of Idaho on the Nonpartisan League ticket. He recently returned from Europe, where he saw much of the fighting on the battlefields and the hardships which have all but destroyed hope in the hearts of the people of those distracted nations. He says the people of Europe have had enough—more than enough—of the demon war, and they are looking to America for guidance in the great step forward which will prevent a recurrence of anything like the war which has been the example of the league of nations. He said this morning that an "early ratification of the treaty by the United States senate would be a step in the right direction."

"Today for the first time in the history of the world, the victorious nations are trying to create a new order based on justice rather than on greed. The idea of peace arising from the will of America, the nation conceived in liberty."

"Not only do the soldiers want peace overlying, but the civilians desire it also. I talked with the women of the warring countries. They said they were praying for America, so they would stand by her side in the coming war for us. No more war for us, they say. Fully 80 per cent of both America and European peoples want this

Mr. Samuels paid a visit to Twin Falls, yesterday following a meeting at Bluff, where he spoke at a farmers picnic. He is making a speaking tour of Idaho accompanied by Mrs. McKee.

EXPLAINING COLOR OF SNOW

Red and Green Snows Are Produced, by the Presence of Organisms, of Snowed Family.

Snow has both a face and a form. The form includes the tiny organisms of the snowed family, which commonly produce the phenomenon of "red snow." Each of these "plants" is a spherical cell, about a thousandth of an inch in diameter. These cells multiply rapidly by the simple process of splitting up to form new cells. The red snow is not uncommon in the polar regions and on high mountains. Large tracts of "green snow," produced by another minute plant, were found by the United States geologists. There are also albino forms of animal life that give snow a red color. Fiches of snow, red with a microscopic rotifer, or wheel-shaped creature, have been found in the Alps and the Andes. M. Gatin of the Church expedition found snow red with mites or tiny spiders.

In Germany the term "snow worm" is applied to the larva of a beetle often found in the snow, says a writer to the Scientific American. Many species of insects are commonly found in snow. The most abundant of these are the springtails, which hop like miniature fleas, or wriggle, detritus, etc. P. B. Mathews of the United States geological survey has recently described some curious worms that dwell on the lower side of the Mount Rainier glacier. They are dark brown, slender and about an inch in length. On favorable days in July and August millions and millions of them may be found writhing on the surface of the ice, evidently breeding, their small bodies on organic matter, living upon the algae in the form of dust. "So essential to their existence," says Mr. Mathews, "is the cult of the ice that their color several inches, and sometimes many feet, below the surface on days when the sun is particularly hot, respecting falling the air-snow."

OBTAIN VARNISH FROM TREE

China Has Source of Valuable Supply, But Its Poisonous Quality Limits Its Use.

Varnish is produced in China from a tree commonly spoken of as the varnish tree, but known botanically as the varnish tree, which is found in abundance in the mountains of Hupoh, Kwichow and Szechwan.

The varnish is taken from the tree after it is about six inches in diameter by tapping at intervals of from five to seven years, until the tree is fifty or sixty years of age. A good-sized tree will yield from five to seven pounds of varnish.

The natural color of the crude varnish as applied is black. It is considered the most poisonous varnish known. One peculiarity is that it hardens only in a moist atmosphere. In China, it is erroneously known among the foreign communities as "Nippoo varnish," probably because it first came into contact with foreign trade there, writes Commodore Atchafie Julian Arnold from Peking.

Many persons are poisoned when they come into even atmospheric contact with this varnish, which, unfortunately, reduces its trade possibilities enormously. As yet no substitute has been discovered, although this poisonous quality can be counteracted.

Message for Lumbago. Lumbago according to Dr. Fometta, head of the medical department of the United States Marine Hospital, may be purely rheumatic, or result from a strain to a muscle, or be produced by a "chip" which penetrates the nerve fibers in the most treacherous and that recovery should take place in from six to eight days at the outside.

HAD LOTS OF FUN

Mr. Gosington's Experience That of Many Others.

Who Wouldn't Feel Pleasure at Having to Return Larger Safe-Deposit Boxes, Liberty Bonds and Other Valuables?

"I never would have thought it," said Mr. Gosington, "but I've had to get a bigger safe-deposit box. Before the great war I had a modest check account, and a little fund of money, but a savings bank for emergencies, but no safe-deposit box, large or small. I had no use for one. I had no stocks or bonds to keep in. I had often read the advertisements of the safe-deposit companies, telling of how little you could get a box for, and how they had an excellent reading lounge, suggestive of wealth, and coupon cutting, and that sort of thing, and now the time had come when I needed a box. It was a very pleasant surprise you know the size. I thought that I couldn't buy a box for so many bonds to put in, I stand, but do you know, I got the box. I found that it had insurance policies and papers and documents of value to me for financial purposes; and so while the time to take the safe-deposit box, I found that my little box to get it close.

"As I had to admit I had no deposit experience was to me. It was a real surprise to me. I had to get it for me from its deposit box. The safe-deposit vault, I mean, pleasure to be shown. I had with a letter that I had where I found a deposit box and paper and other things that really were my insurance policies and papers and documents of value to me for financial purposes; and so while the time to take the safe-deposit box, I found that my little box to get it close.

"Then, the time came, who bought more bonds, and what other stuff in it, the box was that they had hard work to put in the pigeon hole and put it in it, and then I had to buy a bigger box, and that too.

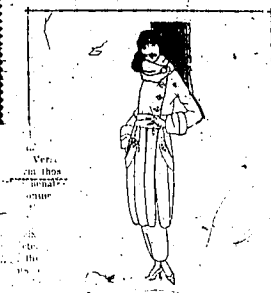

"Of course, you know I did, but I had a real surprise. I had to get it for me from its deposit box. The safe-deposit vault, I mean, pleasure to be shown. I had with a letter that I had where I found a deposit box and paper and other things that really were my insurance policies and papers and documents of value to me for financial purposes; and so while the time to take the safe-deposit box, I found that my little box to get it close.

Those of us who have gathered that our "last" originated in Uganda or among the gorillas are, according to the latest news, quite wrong. Le Maître of Paris maintains that the ape band, now originated in Paris 120 years ago. In those days as well as now, it says, "people did not know what to do to amuse themselves, so they made a noise. Those who had a great taste for their work," he says, "were the first to strike the keys, and a device which pulled the cat's tail, causing a caterwauling noise." Le Maître feels would leave an American little unaccountably to desire. Is this an attempt to discredit it at the peace conference?—The

The battery was halted after seven innings to let the visitors catch a breather and the home team which in the meantime had been checked things badly during the afternoon.

The Twin Falls players, who were busy retrieving balls that went over the outfield and through them, that the Paul little time to think of catching runs for themselves. The Paul players, Alexander, Yastol, Goff, and when scored in a couple of times, retired in favor of Piller. Bill Larsen brought out the home team in the eighth and Piller out of the park in a post season series. Piller can certainly handle the ball. In the majors he is called the man who made Walt Johnson a legend of the speed. The fact that he had the last strike striking the ball was not in his way back to the pitcher's mound. That the majors have him scored out with fair accuracy. In the three innings he worked the only hit which looked like the third loss in a row. It takes more than a major league to fool Jolly, who has batted .606 with the local club, making 19 hits in 15 times up.

A detailed account of the results is next to impossible and besides we have to take that cold, cold journey again. Therefore common wit will compromise with the gruesome one in brief form:

Clifford Carlton Cravath.

Today finds him the batting percentage of one of the major leagues. He is playing better ball this year than he has done in the last three or four seasons. A common estimate of Cravath is that he is a shrewd-thinking, slow-moving, slow-delivering, good-natured slug who bounds out base hits by sheer might. If it is the common analysis it is the wrong one. Cravath is probably the headiest ball player on his team. He is lasting years after most players pass into retirement, because of his style.

PRICES AT THE FARM

An automobile party driving out from town into the country passed a farm yard displaying the sign, "Fresh Eggs for Sale." The man stopped his machine, went in, ordered a dozen eggs, asked the price, and was told, "one dollar." This at a time when the most expensive retail store in the town where the tourists did their marketing charged seventy-five cents for eggs guaranteed strictly fresh, delivered at the customer's door, for a great deal of money.

The farmer comes in for a reproach of contempt in these days. The public is used to get in touch with him and buy his produce direct. After a few experiences such as the above, a city consumer begins to feel that "in touch" is just the right expression for the transaction.

It is undoubtedly true that the wholesaler buying in the country gives an unfairly low price to the farmer, and the latter probably gets far even in the price he charges the retail customer. But he should remember that the city merchant's price as stated above, includes delivery, certain guarantees and the replacement of unsaleable factory goods.

If the farmer will charge the customer who comes to his door a fair retail price, but enough lower than the market retail price to pay in some part for the purchaser's time, gasoline and wear on the automobile, or to cover partial cost delivery of orders, there will be more fairness in the deal to both parties. The farmer would receive a better price than the wholesaler would give him, and the customer would pay enough less than the article would cost him in town to encourage him to go after it.

SMALL PROFITS—GOOD BUSINESS

One important fact that the profiteers are prone to overlook is brought out in the report of a special grand jury that has been inquiring into the cost of living. It is this:

"Lowering prices always enlarges the market and the number of purchasers, and consequently the possible volume of profits."

From this same business point of view, it is evident that many of the profiteering dealers are extremely unbusinesslike. This is said to be particularly true of wholesale dealers in foodstuffs, but applies to be true also of wholesale and retailers in many lines of trade.

There is a constant tendency, the investigators find, on the part of such merchants to hold back the supply in order to make a few large profits instead of aiming at a large number of small profits.

"By holding back the supply they restrain the volume of sales, and consequently they have restrained the number, the volume, the aggregate of their profits."

The principle involved is expressed in this convenient formula: "The higher the price, the smaller the market; the lower the price, the larger the market."

It is a matter of American business history that nearly all the big fortunes made in mercantile pursuits have been made out of a big volume of business on a small margin—out of a multitude of petty profits. The great Woodworth of New York City is a monument to this type of trade. All the great retail stores of this country are an illustration. The lesson is that the dealer who will sell at a low price is unmoved by moral considerations, nor will he ponder.

THE CONQUERING RABBIT

Poultry shows and dog shows and horse shows and automobile shows are common, but a "national rabbit show" is something new. Such a show was held in Cleveland recently, and is said to have attracted much interest. It is expected to become a permanent institution. Next year the exhibition will be held in Rochester, N. Y.

It is clear that the rabbit propaganda of the last two or three years is having its effect. Experience will no doubt discount some what the glowing promises of the rabbit-lovers, but there certainly does seem to be a good field for this new industry.

Rabbits are easy to raise. It is said that one pair will produce 40 offspring in a year. They take up little space, and can be fed cheaply. Some of the larger varieties, especially the Polish and New Zealand kind, weigh as much as 16 pounds. Though some people dislike the flavor, their flesh is generally considered as good as that of chicken, and may command as high a price on the market. Their pelts, too, are valuable, and steadily growing in demand. They are commonly used now instead of muskrat, and are substituted for various other kinds of fur. One firm in New York is said to use 3,000,000 rabbit pelts a year.

As a result, many a man whose thoughts formerly turned toward a poultry farm is now planning a rabbit farm.

LE DO WORLD'S WORK

CRITICISM WM. H. TAFT.

When the League of Nations was first proposed, it was generally thought that it would provide means for doing much of the world's work more economically and effectively than can be done now when each nation is working only for itself. The people who know best and like best are those who work with you on the same job, and it will be the same way with the League of Nations in the future. The more they get out of the League, the more they will get out of it, and the more they will get out of it, the more they will get out of it.

For example, the League will do the best kind of world's work. It will do the best kind of world's work. It will do the best kind of world's work. It will do the best kind of world's work.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

AFRICAN PORCUPINE.

"When I lived in Canada," said the Canadian porcupine, "I was perfectly happy. Of course I am helping the zoo along and being of great interest. I do not mind that I do not care for zoo life as I do for a life of freedom. Ah, what wanderings through the woods I used to have! The Canadian porcupine continued, "I used to go miles and miles along through dark soft fir tree forests. I used to live so happily in the woods where people so seldom came."

"And in the springtime when budding saplings would creep in the woods, if a big lumbered tree I would soon punish him."

"It is not true that I throw my quills but if a dog barked at me and tried to fight me—well, he got punished and you know how!"

"I don't like these untrue stories get around that I throw my quills as the wind throws leaves around. I don't do that, but I can give away some of my quills, and I am frightened or annoyed. That is perfectly true."

"In Canada, where there is beautiful country and where the forests are very wonderful, I think a porcupine leads a very happy life. Such a free, wild life, no bothersome society around me all the time."

"Here in the zoo folks come and talk and the animals chatter and make such a fuss. I like a life which isn't so very wonderful. I am not going to pretend I like what I don't."

Now the Canadian porcupine said all this in a tone in particular that every one of the boys and girls and a good many of the animals, some of the visitors, boys and girls and by the keeper.

"That is perfectly true," said the keeper, and he told those who hadn't been able to understand just what it was the porcupine had said.

"But I think the African porcupine is going to say something, too," said the keeper.

Such a Free, Wild Life.

GOMPERTS CONDEMNNS STAFF OF GERMAN UNION CHIEFS

German representatives at the convention of the International Federation of Trades Unions at Amsterdam were accused by Gomperts with attempting to use the organization exclusively for their own benefit.

In an interview granted in Paris, the president of the American Federation of Labor said: "The Germans do not want to serve the International organization. They only want to use it."

AS TO VOICE IN MANAGEMENT

Some Difference of Opinion About What the Idea Means.

Of special significance is the experience, "voice in management." According to the present-day view of both employers and employees in Great Britain, this phrase signifies that workers at their representative should be heard in consultation with the management of the works. It means that the workers, such as the hour of beginning the day's work, a matter on which the shop committee want to be consulted for a number of hours, which is the question for collective bargaining between the unions and the associations of employers, sanitary conditions, safety matters, etc.

In the mind of the average British workman, the phrase "voice in management" does not, therefore, as is generally understood in America, extend to matters purely commercial or administrative, nor to such questions of business policy as expanding to new markets, production of new goods, selling prices, general business policy, etc.

It is not, therefore, to what we call "shop conditions." It does not extend to what are sometimes termed matters of organization and administration—United States Government Report.

Wage Increases in England.

The Labor Gazette issued by the industry of labor, contains a comprehensive resume of the increases which have been made from July, 1918, to April, 1919, in rates of wages in the most important trades, says the Manchester, (England) Guardian. The business and industry show a great diversity among different groups of work people as regards both the actual monetary gains and the percentage increases over former rates which they receive. Some groups are getting as much as 150 per cent, but there were a number of groups which have not received the percentage equivalent is much higher for laborers than for skilled men.

"Yes, I have the right sort of a name. I have, and I'm not in the least fuzzy. I don't mind it here in the zoo; in fact I like it, and I don't mind Africa in the least, not in the least."

But the Canadian porcupine who heard this said: "Africa isn't Canada, though, and I don't mind Canada and its woods."

...from the deck, broke in with a sharp question.

"What is that, Corcoran? Did the ship ever get on? Were not going back to St. Louis?"

"That's just what he said. We've got to make our way up Rock river, with all of these fellows coming after us. Here you, Mapes, stop that unloading and get down—we've got to get on in a night. The fellows are not going to let us get down here, are they?"

"I'm not going to let them get down here," Mapes said. "I've got to get on in a night. The fellows are not going to let us get down here, are they?"

"The men below knuckled off work without any saying, and the advantage of the confusion on board, I endeavored to creep up the stairs and see a view of the upper deck. Both Mapes and the second mate made this attempt impossible, forcing me into the ranks of the others and compelling me to retreat to the cargo. So far as I could observe, no attempt to delay was made by anyone, excepting a big fellow with a red moustache, who was sitting at the anchor, through the door, dragging a huge valve.

"The situation puzzled and confused me. What choice would Kirby and the deputy make? If once up Rock river the Adventure might very likely and very easily be captured by the Indians. It was not possible that the impatient gambler would consent to such a delay. Kirby might, however, be able to hold it with it a new danger of exposure. These were Illinois troops to be transported—not regulars, but they were not to be taken to open enemies of slavery. Let each man as these, rough with the platoon sergeant, and the captain and the men of those two women, especially if the rumor got abroad among them that they were white men, the hunter would have a hard row to hoe. And I made up my mind such a rumor should be soon broadcast; eyes were turned to the second mate, and I threw off my own disguise and front him openly with the charge.

"It was only an accident which gave me a clue to the real program. Mapes went me back into the vacant space behind the men, and I did not seem to have a lot of time, and as I turned about to return, the missing tool in my hand, I paused a moment to glance at Kirby, who was sitting at the anchor, through the door, dragging a huge valve. I was facing the shore and a body of men, but they were not to be taken to open enemies of slavery.
