THEIR GLORY GONE

Heligoland to John Louisbourg as a Memory

Famous French Fortress in Canada Has Long Been Demolished and Soon the German Stronghold is to Be razed.

Announcement that the German forts on the island Heligoland were to be demolished recalls the similar fate of a glorious landmark on the coast of the British Isles.

Louisbourg was the remnant of French power on the Atlantic coast when the treaty of Utrecht was signed in 1713, reducing the fortunes of Louis XIV to a low ebb.

The days of the great fortress were numbered when the British took the whole of empires, the den of thieving scoundrels received its death sentence.

And there it remains. Memorials to its history were erected on the site, but the stones and mortar.

Married by Order. A document suggesting that the holders of certain lands in Scotland are bound under heavy penalties to marry at the royal pleasure.

Historic Tree Now Only a Memory. The tree in the market place in a little town in Hartford, Mich. has been cut down.

Shoots Army Doctor and Commits Suicide

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—(41st) Nat. News E. Watson, one of the best surgeons at the United States Marine hospital here, today seriously wounded after having been shot by Gustave Fontana, a sailor patient, who then committed suicide.

The shooting took place in a crowded ward of the hospital and patients, becoming terrified, leaped from their beds and rushed out.

Attaches of the hospital declared that Fontana was a malingerer and had intentionally planned the shooting because Captain Watson had told him that he was cured and would have to leave the hospital.

Patch Up Living With Organs of Dead Men

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The grafting of organs from the bodies of dead persons to the bodies of invalids who have been wasted by disease is today advocated by Dr. Sergius Voronoff, famous physician who recently announced the discovery of rejuvenating of old men. Writing in the Journal, Dr. Voronoff says: "After death the robust parts of the body retain their vitality for hours. If transplanted to a living body they would continue to function. It is also possible to conserve organs alive for several months by keeping them in a refrigerator."

Dr. Voronoff suggests that hospitals in big cities keep blocks of vital organs on hand for the needs of patients. He pointed out the ease with which the organs could be removed from the body of a person who had met with accidental death.

Dr. Wylie has moved to 211 Main Ave. E., two blocks E. of First office. Phone 255.

Plumbing Fixtures Stolen From House

Local officers are seeking a night prowler, probably armed with a truck, whose fancy turned to shift and fiddle hardware recently, resulting in the robbery of the Mrs. Henry Myer residence on Ninth avenue east beyond Blue Lakes boulevard.

The house, which is under course of construction, was strip-ped of all plumbing fixtures, the loss of which was discovered yesterday. The house is the last on the block on the avenue, making it comparatively easy to approach unnoticed. A bath tub, basin, kitchen sink, 20 gallon radiator and toilet equipment were removed.

Babcock Reversed by Supreme Court

BOISE, Oct. 13.—The supreme court today reversed the findings of Judge Babcock of the fourth judicial district court for Twin Falls county in the case of the Holan-Payette Lumber company versus H. A. McCormick. The lumber company sought to recover a balance on promissory note issued by John J. Pilgrimage, and was victorious in the latter's planning mill was machinery.

JOSEPHINE

By MILDRED WHITE.

"I would have asked you long ago, David," David Craythorne said, "that it had not been for Josephine. Jude is a difficult child. He is slight, her mother's darling sister was obliged to live her up in despair. How, then, dare I impose this burden upon you because of your patient love for her father? A stepmother's position is usually problematic and no one is more aware of Josephine's faults than I, who bring her here; for the child with all her bewitching influence has against my will, I myself, an often very trying; are you sure that you are willing to sacrifice your peace to our great need?"

Millicent smiled.

"I don't expect to sacrifice my peace," she said, "but to bring peace into both your lives, and manage you beautifully."

David Craythorne smiled also, but his eyes were troubled.

"I have been tried to manage Josephine," he warned her.

"Perhaps," Millicent suggested, "there were none who could find the way to her heart."

"I do not if she has one," the father whimsically replied, "beyond her own fatherhood."

He sat looking at the dainty woman with the tired lines of his face softened into tenderness.

"If you could know, dear, I had, how long I have loved you, and have never lost my determination to keep my secret."

"While all the time," laughed Millicent, "your love was to secret all this, and not even look to be read. Almost in self-defense I decided to propose myself."

"I had," he began, "the man; his love was intensely eager; when will you come to his wife?"

"When I have found my way into Josephine's heart and confidence," she answered him gently.

"The hopeful girl left David Craythorne's face."

"You must change that letter, Millicent," he said seriously. "It has been in waiting for Josephine's unreasonable jealousy of you to subside, that I have drawn and signed."

Millicent stooped to pluck a rose.

"Since before then, David," she answered, "I have been as I might be in finding my way to Josephine's heart, I am going to her now. We will have a visit at least, and a sort of look-into-the-house."

She laughed back at him as she passed through the opening of the hedge from her garden into his.

Josephine possessed a weakness for purchasing for herself any new and necessary article which might take her fancy. The purchase of a new dress further offense would be a term bearing the following fall of her boarding school days.

Millicent, smiling, decided the course of the boarding school. Her father, noting her silence, had been surprised that she had not been obliged, entangling upon himself the pain of carrying out his desire.

There would be a violent scene, he knew, when he returned to find her alone in her punishment. As he watched the figure of the little woman he loved, he would not suffer from sleep upon the difference between the two.

Josephine, stormy, self-willed, confident always in prevailing good, and bearing out her own confidence, which remained in the possession of that lonely home of his. Which would be conquered?

Millicent returned, discouragement written upon her sweet face, and most he wait again long, through the succeeding years.

When the gate opened, and the two women—for Josephine was entering woman's estate—came into the garden together.

Josephine came up suddenly and gasped. The unconceivable had come so quickly recognized, Josephine's eyes rested on the girl in the garden with a friendly understanding of the other.

"His daughter's handsome black eyes and his daughter's."

"Daddy," she said, "I did not know Miss Millicent before; I never knew that any woman could be so generally and kind. And I've wanted to know it, I think, all my life. We are going to be happy, Daddy, we three together."

Millicent smiled into David Craythorne's happy, perplexed eyes.

"I was a young Josephine, with the same prejudice, the same impetuosity, though not always expressed. And she was as good as my own daughter with the girl at her side the stepmother-to-be threw an arm about Josephine's shoulders."

"So you thought the forbidden had to Josephine?" she asked. "It can be easily transferred from your father to me here to mine. And because it would give him to learn of your disobedience, Josephine, because you were so good to me, I will not mention this disagreeable fact again."

"I don't want the hat," replied the girl, "it was just a sort of come-back at Daddy; but you've been so dear about everything, and you've been so good to me, and I will not mention this disagreeable fact again."

WOMEN DEMAND MOTHER AWARDS

Will Labor for International Standard for Employment of Women in Industry

LONDON, Oct. 17.—British work-women will recommend to the International Labor Conference in Washington the adoption of a measure granting eight weeks' leave of absence to women workers before child birth and twelve weeks' leave afterwards with maternity awards for every woman employed in industry. The announcement was made today by Miss Mary MacArthur, chairwoman of the standing committee of the industrial women's organization and secretary of Great Britain's largest trade union of women with a membership of 200,000. She will sail for the United States tomorrow on the Mauretania to attend the Washington conference. Miss MacArthur will be accompanied in an advisory capacity by Miss Mary Duffield, another trade union official.

"This is only preliminary," explained Miss MacArthur. "Ultimately we hope all women with large families will be freed of the necessity of entering industry at all."

Asked if she proposed that women should be paid for motherhood, Miss MacArthur replied:

"That is a horrible way of putting it. It is not the father of the children who is unable to support his family; the mother should not be forced to go into the factory. State benefits for women families should help to maintain them. Of course, that is a long way off; the immediate aim of Washington is to level up the standard of women workers in all industries; then make further advances later on. When one country lags behind it puts a drag on women in other nations."

"We also hope to establish an international minimum to prevent the employment of children under 14 years of age and later make it up with vocational training up to 18. We also seek to prevent night employment and unhealthy employment for such young children. Steps will be proposed to solve the unemployment problem."

Miss MacArthur said that she found on a visit to the United States that the women of that country engaged in industry are less untainted than those of England.

"The best leaders are very capable," she added. "I was astonished at the wages paid to American work-women. The thing that impressed me most was the excellent American school system."

You Can Make Millions in Oil

Of all the Investments you have here-to-fore made you never had a chance to get in on one like this.

A CHANCE WHERE YOU OWN YOUR OWN OIL FUTURES and where the speed of the development lays in the hands of a Local Syndicate.

No matter how bad you might wish to be in the oil game; no matter how much money you have to spend; HOW ARE YOU GOING TO SPEND THE SAME 80 AS TO HAVE 100 PER CENT CHANCE ON YOUR MONEY?

THERE IS ONLY ONE SURE WAY—That way, it is to buy the lease on lands near to where they are drilling for oil.

The investors are now buying average. The value of average depends on the distance from where oil wells are actually being drilled. Oil leases at Park Burnet were worth, before the first well was drilled, nothing. During the time the first well was going down average sold rapidly at $200 to $300 per acre. After the well was completed, average sold from $500 to $10,000 per acre. When a person buys average there is no chance of losing it—it belongs to you, and no matter how valuable it becomes, you are the one who says when to sell. A local syndicate is now drilling for oil in Oklahoma, where over 50 per cent of the wells are money-makers, in a country where checks are actually written in millions.

This local syndicate is made up of well-known business men at the head of which is J. A. Noggle of Elber. This syndicate sent Mr. Noggle to California once and to Wyoming twice to pass on oil propositions. Each time he returned they have secured thousands of dollars for themselves. They then sent him to Oklahoma, where oil fields are being defined each year. The proposition looked so good to him that with a number of local business men he has begun the drilling for oil and gas on a 400-acre tract. His judgment is of great value to men who know him and he is in the oil game to win. There are a few acres within one mile of where they have actually begun the drilling of the well which still can be leased. These averages have an oil lease on them and the lease carries with it seven-eighths of the oil prospect. The land carries only one-eighth royalty. The leases run for a term of five years.

Do you want some average within one mile of where a well is actually being drilled? Do you understand the difference in owning average and oil stock? Thousands of men have got rich on average. No one can take it away from you. Within 60 days the story will be told, the well will be drilled, the chance of buying average will be past. Are you interested? If so, how much? Do you want ten acres, or would you rather pool with other friends and take a forty?

These leases sell for $125,000 per acre. What will be the worth of these leases after oil has been struck within one mile of your lease? There will be a ready market at from $10 to $15. These Thousand dollars per acre.

THINK OF THE MONEY YOU CAN MAKE ON A LEASE AT THIS PRICE!

Get your neighbors together and pool your interests and purchase some average. Mail your checks today because there are a limited number of acres left in while the price is low and where you have the privilege of getting near where your local syndicate is drilling. This privilege is not often to be had.

MONEY MADE EASY IN OIL FIELDS

Says a Drug Store Clerk, If a Person Has Some Money, a Little Nerve and a Chance to Buy a Lease Near a Well Actually Drilling.

"Only one way of investing in the development of oil, that will insure a chance," says the Oklahoma investor, in an interview with Oscar Tokol, a man who has stepped from a poor clerk in a drug store to a multimillionaire, asking him how he did it. He said:

"It did not take me long to find out that Oklahoma had the oil, but how could I get a part of it was the problem I wished to solve. I had a very limited amount of money, and a fair job. I knew if I bought some land that was supposed to have oil under it, I could not drill a well as it took several thousand dollars to drill. In fact, many thousand to buy even the casing after the well had been drilled, so I decided that my life was passing on and I must not lose. Feeling that if I did not attempt to better my condition it would not be better, so I decided to buy 40 acres of oil lease near to where some responsible fellows were going to drill, so I purchased 40 acres at $200 per acre. The lease was a five-year lease. The well was drilled to the depth of 2380 feet and my life was found. My lease was worth $3000 per acre. I sold half of it and retained the other part. Then I bought some more leases where wells were being drilled, and it was not long until I was very independent."

When asked if he bought stock in any of the oil companies, he said yes, he did until experience taught him that the sure way to win was to own what you own, and play the game as safe as possible. "You will find people in the oil fields buy leases and they must reasonably close to the well-act is drilling."

"What do you mean by 'reasonably close'?"

"I mean within two miles."

"Then the main thing is to know that the owners that you are near will drill."

"Yes, that is it, exactly. You will notice in Oklahoma, show shiners, barbers and bankers alike make millions when they play the game consistently, by buying leases. Oklahoma is as much of an oil state as Ohio is a farming state and farming is not a serious gamble in Ohio is it?"

The reason is that the farmer in Ohio takes the lease amount of chance possible in farming, and the men who win in Oklahoma do the same on oil, so they lose.

"Why is it that many people in Oklahoma have lost money by playing the oil game?" was asked.

"Well, tell me this, why has Oklahoma passed a blue sky law," was the answer.

"Because so many companies were operating that had no capital, I suppose," was the answer.

"Yes, you guessed about right, and if the company did not have the money what became of the stock holder?"

"He just had the pleasure of believing that he had something for a short time, that's all, and if the investor had owned a lease he yet would have had something, because the well will be completed by some other people. Oil investments are the best if you win, and the best chance to win is by buying oil leases, in all countries, and Oklahoma is sure an oil country."

SHANTUNG VOTE PLEASES WILSON

Administration Leaders Say Remaining Amendments Will Not Cause Concern

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—News of the vote at the Shanghai convention by the senate was carried to the president by Secretary Wilson and he understood that Mr. Wilson was greatly pleased thereby. The president is still evincing interest in all the stirring questions of the day and is with great interest that Dr. Dargatzis returned to the senate.

The defeat of the Shantung amendment brought relief because it had been feared that a close vote on that matter would worry the president. Administration leaders declared that they had never hoped for more than 44 votes against the Shantung amendment and they were glad to see the vote that the treaty will not give the president much concern.

What is a good tea for me?

The kind you like, unless you like communism which is full of caffeine, you know, caffeine is bad for the inside.

Fine tea has very little tannin, and you don't get even that little unless you steep it too long.

Chilling Tea is the fine tea with real tea flavor.

There are four flavors of Bohling: Tea-Japan, Ceylon-India, Oolong, Earl Grey and All-weather. Each is a pure blend of natural products in its own way.
