Wilson's Demand for Recall of Strike Order Severely Criticised by Miners

Hold that Removal of Price Restrictions by Government and Abrogation of Contracts by Operators Leaves Miners Free Under Agreement to Work During Continuance of War.

Draw Comparisons of Government's Methods of Dealing With Great Aggregations of Capital and Organization of Labor.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—President Wilson's demand that the miners recall their strike order was severely criticized today by Walter J. Jones and Edgar Wallace, representatives of the United Mine Workers of America.

"It seems remarkable to the miners that the government should neglect to call upon its own extraordinary powers when dealing with the workers, while the same government claims to find itself powerless in any way to control aggregations of capital as represented by Mr. Gary," declared the statement issued by Jones and Wallace.

"If the war is not over, surely the government would be hampered by the fact that the steel industry is paralyzed by the obduracy and obstinacy of individuals and corporation directors," said the Wallace-Jones statement.

"Instead of publicly rebuking Mr. Gary for refusing to confer with the men in his employ, the government honored him by placing him on the public committee in the United States conference. If it had not been for his autocratic attitude, the threat that the president complained of in his letter to the miners might have not occurred."

"If the war is still on, the operators and the government claim, containing the strikers under the contract which the miners are accused of violating was first violated by the operators and the government only after the violation of the contract by the operators, but made provision for it when the late administration removed the price restriction."

Daily Express Appeals to Masters of Ireland

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A powerful anti-Slavin campaign has been opened by the Daily Express. Under the heading "Masters of Ireland" the Daily Express has declared today that help may be needed to stimulate British interest in Ireland.

"This shock may come any day," declared the paper, "and may be infinitely more startling than anything experienced before, because the organization behind the agitation is being undertaken by the British police constitute the last work of British power in Ireland. The Sinn Pin is out to destroy. Every Irishman who wears the king's uniform is a marked man and a possible victim. The policemen are abused or hunted as pariahs."

Thrown Overboard by 38 to 40 Vote

SAYS TESTIMONY MISREPRESENTS

Strikers' Council Says Army Man Tries to Prejudice Public Mind Against Strike

CALY, Ind., Oct. 27.—Paul Glavin, chief of the Gary council of allied steel and iron workers, today sent a telegram to Senator Johnson, chairman of the senate committee investigating the strike, branding the testimony of Lieutenant VanBuren, in Chicago, offered as "a gross travesty of fact" and an "untrue and untrue" "propaganda for the mind of the public against the strikers." After charging that VanBuren went to Washington to "spy" for the purpose of his organization, Glavin in his telegram, offered to appear before the committee and "fill the bare bones" of his testimony.

Witness of taking steel workers' pick-up on the day of picketing, the steel mills, both today, when the husbands, tonight their work out of the city.

The Johnson was active at the organization of the United Steel Corporation, this morning, pleading with non-union workers to join their ranks.

The wife of the strikers are said to have organized and from now on will do the majority of the picketing at the steel plants in the "carmet district."

The steel mill, the largest rail mill in the world and the most important one of the Gary steel plant, which has been closed down since the start of the steel strike, reopened today.

Officials of the company say the mill was damaged several weeks ago and has been "undergoing repairs."

BORAH REFUSES CARTE BLANCHE

Wants to Know What Government Is Going to Do Before Giving His Approval

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Opposition developed in the senate this afternoon to congress giving blanket approval to President Wilson in any manner of the steel strike, regarding the threatened coal strike.

Senator Borah, proponent of Idaho, voiced objections to a resolution which would give the president the administration with assurance of senate support in any action which he might take to avert the strike or to deal with it if it takes place.

Senator Thomas withdrew his resolution in the face of this opposition, but gave notice that he would call it up tomorrow for adoption. Borah criticized Judge Terry, head of the United States steel corporation, for his attitude toward the steel strikers.

"I am not in sympathy with capital when it refuses to treat with organized labor, as Judge Gary did," said Borah.

"I am not going to favor this resolution until I know what policy the government intend to pursue," Borah said. If it is to include the call to the militia and intimidate the people with whom we have a controversy I will not take it to a vote."

The late afternoon was taken up with a visit to the home of John D. Rockefeller at Tarrytown.

HARBOR STRIKE DEVELOPS FIGHT

Factions in Longshoremen's Union Stir Up Lots of Trouble in South Brooklyn

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The first serious fighting in the longshoremen's strike broke out on the south Brooklyn waterfront today when one man was reported shot and several others injured. The clash occurred between strikers supporting the "insurgent" union and the "regular" union and men who were trying to return to work on docks. Fifty policemen were rushed to the scene.

Between 50 and 100 shots were fired and several other men were used freely as weapons. More than 2,000 persons, most of them Italian, were taken to a hospital ward of a score were more or less seriously hurt. The fighting began when the Italian strikers attacked several hundred men who were going back to work. "An attempt was made to force the strikers to return to work on the docks. Fifty policemen were rushed to the scene."

The strikers took refuge behind piles of freight and other barricades behind each other. The strikers were armed with clubs, iron pipes and other weapons. One militia struck Police man Patrick McCarthy, whose skull is believed to have been fractured.

Close Result Because Great Deliberative Body Was Unprepared for Vote Notwithstanding Many Weeks of "Debate," When Hitchcock Unexpectedly Forced Matter to Issue.

Las. Republican Amendment Reported by Foreign Relations Committee Expected to Meet In Glorious Defeat.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—By a vote of 38 to 40 the Johnson amendment passed in the senate today. The Johnson amendment provides for the distribution of votes between the United States and Great Britain in the future of nations.

The vote was forced unexpectedly by Senator Hitchcock, the administration leader. It asked unanimous consent that the amendment be voted on at 12 noon. A call for a unanimous consent was made by Senator Lodge, whose motion failed.

"There is no reason why we should not vote now," said the vote taker.

The vote then passed. Senator Johnson stated his intention of offering a substitute for the Johnson amendment. He said that he had received 15 copies of some Republican senators who opposed the defeated amendment.

INGENIOUS CONTRIVANCE ON AUTOMOBILE IS HANDY FOR "CRANKING UP" AIRPLANES

Attachment on Automobile for Cranking Airplane.

Gradually the motor is getting away from the old-fashioned method of starting by cranking. The usual way was to have a revolving crank, the propeller, and give it a yank, occasionally, causing the engine to start. This is a very hazardous method, as the rapidly starting propeller has caused many serious accidents, especially if the airplane was not held in jumping out of range of the whirling blades.

Our photo, taken at the Hendon Flying field, London, shows an interesting mechanical device for "cranking up" the planes, without any danger to the mechanic, or pilot, or on a man, the device can be quickly carried to any part of the field, and the plane started.

THE NEW POSTMAN
By EDITH W. GOODWIN.

"Sister's crosser'n a bear; manna has a headache and I can't make any noise all the other boys have gone offing, and I can't go!"

Thelma Barkbank roused herself about the house in search of something to pass away time. A slight cold was the reason he wasn't allowed to go along with his chums.

He failed to find anything among his playthings that appealed to him, so he struck a few notes on the piano, but was promptly told by sister Adele to stop that noise.

The little fellow wondered what made Adele so cross. She was usually a good gal with her young brother, but today she had only cross words for him.

"What's this?" he queried aloud. "Sister must have forgot to mail her letters; I'll go mail 'em, then maybe she won't be so cross at me."

He had caught sight of a pile of letters, but failed to notice that each one had been opened, and that they were all but one addressed to his sister. He counted them; there were twenty-four in all.

He quickly put on his coat, cap, rubbers and mittens and, taking the letters under his arm, proceeded down the street.

David walked on a little further, then quite suddenly he retraced his steps. He had no idea. Why not play he was the postman, and leave the letters at different houses?

With him, to think was to act, so he didn't stop to consider the fact that he might not have seen at those local designations, but quickly assembled the steps of the nearest house and dropped the letter at the top of the pile, and he was off. Then he rang the bell and hurried on.

He repeated this at four or five houses, then decided to try a few streets. How long he came to the home of William Downes. William has a little brother, Adele, he is not all that though the little brother didn't understand the situation, he had heard Adele's promised hand, but only a few days previous they had parted with bitter words.

"Guess I'll leave two letters for William," was the little's most inspiration. He carefully selected two fat letters from the bunch and dropped them in the box one at a time.

At last he had finished his odd-job post task, and turned his steps homeward. The family were at supper. Mother's headache was better; Adele looked pale and was very quiet.

When questioned as to where he had been, David replied that he had gone to walk, he couldn't think of anything else to do. His mother feared he might have taken more odd and put him to bed soon after the meal was over.

He suddenly awoke in the night, what seemed to him hours, and found the doorbell was peeping loudly. Praying son he heard Adele's calm reply curtly:

"William Downes! I thought you were done coming to see me."

"I thought so, too, David, but I have ask you to explain something; then I'll know just what course to take."

"My letter came in, then; it's too cold to start now."

David was very anxious to hear the founder of the conversation, so he hastily got out of bed and went into the spare chamber on the upper floor. There was a register in the door right over the parlor stove, and he had on several occasions noticed how quiet William was calling on Adele. He heard the following:

"I found these two letters in the mail box at home, and I can't make out who they got there. Perhaps you can tell me."

"Let me see them!" and Adele snatched them away from him. One was addressed to her in William's handwriting; the other was addressed to him in her own unmistakable hand.

Her cheeks flamed, and she got up and walked the floor. After a few moments she faced William and asked perceptively:

"Did you read the one addressed to you?"

"Of course I did, Adele; what else could I do?"

"Well, I surely didn't want you to see it, not yet, anyway. Don't you have got those letters, but what they are, just say I can't figure 'em."

"Well, Adele, if you really must know what was in 'em, I shall have to tell you the whole story. It's a long one, but I'll do my best to tell you, dear old you."

The listener upstairs was getting excited. First he believed Adele would nearly take his head off the next morning; then it appeared that William was glad he had got the letters.

All was quiet for a moment or two; then David was sure he heard his sister sobbing. William was speaking in very low tones and the lad couldn't hear what he said.

When morning came David could hardly speak aloud, and his mother kept him in bed all day. He never dreamed to have Adele ever by his side when she did, instead of the scolding he expected she called him "dear little brother," and even kissed him, and didn't seem a bit cross, either.

The first time he saw William he was tossed to his shoulder and told that he was the best postman in the world, and that he was proud to think that some day he was to be his own little brother; for Sister Adele had promised to marry him.

"RECOGNITION AS MEN"

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in his notable speech before the lamented industrial round table in favor of union labor, told of a man who had been studying industrial problems in this country and who had come in contact with thousands of workers in all sorts of industries. The investigator wanted especially to find out what it was that the workmen wanted. At first it seemed to him that the chief thing they yearned for was higher wages. But after a while he changed his mind.

"As his touch with them extended, he came to the conclusion that not higher wages but recognition as men was what they really sought."

And why have they considered "recognition" vital enough to justify so much effort on their part? Mr. Rockefeller explained, very much as others have explained before him:

"What joy can there be in life, what interest can a man take in his work, what enthusiasm can he be expected to develop on behalf of his employer, when he is regarded as a number on a pay-roll, or even in a wheel, a mere 'hand'?"

"The personal relation, familiar in former times between employer and employee, has almost vanished from industry. The employer is generally a large corporation; the owners are many, and the employed are numbered by thousands. That intimate, human, mutually respecting relationship can never be fully restored. But in so far as anything can be done in that direction to make a more human, less mechanical connection between capital and labor, it is to be done, says Mr. Rockefeller, through organization and collective dealing.

The employees cannot all know their employers personally, but they can choose representatives who will come into touch with the representatives of the employers, and thus enable each group better to understand the other's problems, ideas and desires. Mr. Rockefeller adds:

"The recognition of such personal relations, through frequent conferences and frequent meetings, held for the consideration of matters of common interest, such as terms of employment and working and living conditions, is essential in order to restore a spirit of mutual confidence, good will and co-operation. Personal relations can be revived under modern conditions only through the adequate representation of the employees."

Explained in this way, by a man who is said to be the biggest employer of labor in America, the demand of the steel men for recognition becomes more comprehensible to many who have been inclined to regard this particular claim as unimportant or frivolous.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE

Money must be plentiful for some folks, else the advertising columns of an eastern newspaper are bought wastefully. If a woman knows where tomorrow's meals are coming from, and the coal cellar has a supply to last over the first of the month, when the coal miners promise to quit work, she may find it rather tedious to study advertising concerning coats of "vulgarian in smartest brown shade, the model simply styled, with convertible collar and large pockets; and suede cloth suits in brown with deep maroon collars or in drage, only blue with Australian opesium collar" $125.

It seems pleasant to live in a world where such desirable garments exist. She may even view with optimism the description of "suede cloth suits in loose model, all around belted, the collars huge and of fine mole" $165.

These of course are simple affairs for ordinary folk. There are also "luxurious coats for afternoon or evening service made of fine, vividly colored, free enveloping lines, of exquisite texture fabrics, with huge collars of mink loosely in lamp pattern or mode, some with fur accentuations repeated on the cuffs" $250.

All this is rather on the fancy tail order, and reminds one in some vague, far-off way of the "Castle of the Chinking Ginnous" pursued on youthful afternoons.

But when there just has to be a new winter coat in the family, for father and mother and Sister Sue, all in one winter, because they skipped their regular years in favor of Victory cloths, then these visions of more-than-oriental splendor are more than appealing. Just how they are to be paid for is a sadly puzzling question.

There is only one ray of comfort. The American dollar may have depreciated to 49 cents, but the Austrian currency has tared worse. An ordinary suit of clothes in Vienna, no "huge collar of unique beauty in lamp pattern or mode" is not it, either, costs about $1100.

It would cost about as much to give the churches and colleges what they want as it did to fight the war. Still, it might pay, at that. If religious opinion had had all the money they wanted, how fore might there worldly have been any war.

Secretary Burleson says that the efficiency of the postoffice department "is the main reason" why he is right. It seems like a miracle whenever a letter gets delivered.

"Many persons seem to have solved the housing problem by buying automobiles and living in them when not working to pay for their upkeep."

Among the Europeans who find America's political and economic system rather confusing are the English stockholders in American breweries.

No investigation is needed to reproduce the fact that trousers are permitted to fall into the hands of irresponsible people with startling ease.

It looks as though presently the "standing room only" sign would have to be hung out in Switzerland, as foreigners are crowding in and so rapid a rate.

The war was worth fighting after all if it has had anything to do with the suppression of the fellow who used to say, "It's not the heat, it's the humidity."

Pompeii's suggestion in congress for "mild" striding was serious, but not as heavy as the punishment that used to be meted out for mere horse stealing.

The most punishment that might be meted out to some automobile thief would be to charge them, to ride in the stolen vehicles for a year and pay the upkeep.

There may have been no good reason for putting spots on Uncle Sam's aviation officers in the name, but you could hardly blame anyone who was in that service for feeling his oats.

In promoting tips the business people are "hooking" us in the American practice, and the public will cheerfully see the amount of the average tip incorporated in the regular price for service.

NOT SOARING.

"I never heard of you as having the slightest chance for a presidential nomination."

"No," replied Senator Sherman. "I know my limitations, and I am not disappointed. Most anybody can get here for a nomination to high office, but it takes a pretty good deal of ability and luck to hold on to moderate distinction term after term."

Sentiment.

The Mistress—Mary, what is that old point-pot doing on the corner shelf?

The Cook—It belongs to the man who worked here last spring.

The Mistress—You may throw it away.

The Cook—I'll do nothing of the sort, ma'am. It's all I have to remember him by—Fack.

Its Result.

"How do you like the play?"

"Not at all. It sets me to thinking."

"Why then isn't a serious thought in it. It was written to keep people from thinking."

"I know. But just the same it sets me to thinking how poor it is."

Lost Friendship.

"I thought they were the best of friends."

"They used to be."

"What happened?"

"This fellow told the same story of sharing the same summer cottage for a month and now they're deadly enemies."

Safety First.

"I'll make a grass by now who had the right of way."

Sign of Wealth.

"They must be very wealthy."

"What makes you think so?"

"They own a phonograph."

"Stupid. Lots of people own phonographs."

A Person at Last.

"You ought to see the efforts some very ambitious fellows have made to get our old friend back to notice them."

"How do you become a surely leader?"

"No. Waiter in a restaurant."

Out Witted.

"Michigan. You shouldn't allow that donkey to do just as he pleases. Where is your willpower?"

"Michigan. My willpower is fairly strong but not so strong as this donkey's won't-power."

Taking a Suggestion.

"What each says she is afraid of ghosts."

"Thanks," exclaimed Mr. Crossland, "but isn't afraid of anything human being can see or do. I'll tip my wife off to try."

Good Waiter.

"Mind," the waitress to disturb your sleep, ma'am, but here is your breakfast."

"Delicious." "You don't disturb me. I have been lying here waiting for it for three hours."

Practical Work.

"Tom is certainly a man of action."

"Why has he done?"

"Well, the very day after the fire he was arrested for giving up his job at the bank and joined the U.S.A. Work shop."

Uncomplimentary.

"Bill. The fact is always so heart-breaking, and it's most deplorable a great deal of attention to it."

"No. Yes, I must confess my heart is in my shirt-sleeves."

THE LAST WORD.

A woman always says the last word.

"No. All ways."

Stupid.

"The confederate to a man wrote it as the signature to a check."

Great Luck.

"My little and the smile in hand, who you like to be better."

"The wife went through his pockets, and she returned a dollar."

Self-Evident.

"My girl's crying, and she's a pretty, a good cook and is very quiet."

"That you wouldn't tell me she's a digger if she's not that?"

Cruel Durnie.

"Why has Jinks that string that around his finger?"

"From all I hear, I guess it is his wife's spin string."

No Great Discovery.

"The trouble with Jones is that he hasn't found himself yet."

"And it isn't going to be much of a day when he does."

Who ever heard of a woman say who wasn't "going and beautiful"?

Thoroughbred jockeys ought to require her/hot standing to popularity.

Farmer and Labor Get Together Meeting

In this epochal crisis in industrial history, when the common people of this and every other country upon the face of earth are crying out for relief from the most deplorable and indefensible economic conditions ever known in the history of mankind, it behooves us, one and all, to THINK deeply—to get together, exchange ideas, present our side of the question and hear the other fellow's side, with the view in mind that a peaceful and permanent settlement may be determined and put in operation.

The "wise" statesmen (?) of these days, days fraught with gravest concern and alarm, have signally and miserably failed in their mission as representatives of the popular will of the people, but there MUST be some way out of the dilemma—a peaceful and practical solution of the vexing problems so vitally concerning every man, woman and child of our country. The issue is square cut. There is no middle ground or neutral position. You stand either for progress or decadence.

Therefore, with a view of presenting labor's side, there will be a rousing meeting of farmers and laborers in the LAVERING THEATRE Sunday, November 2 At 2 O'Clock P. M.

Let's make this the most memorable mass meeting ever held in southern Idaho—a living, breathing PROTEST against the foolish, frivolous and futile efforts of the "wise" statesmen (?) to make a hungry man "well fed, well clothed and well housed" by enacting a silly law that he is in that happy condition.

Hon. Ray McKaig

of the Nonpartisan League of Idaho, will address the meeting along constructive lines and it will be well worth your time to hear him. Women specially invited

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

BLUE MOUNTAIN SHEEP.

"Dear Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep, you are a handsome fellow," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep.

"And you're a handsome creature, too," said her mate.

"I wouldn't like to be ugly," she said.

"You need never worry about that," he answered, for, "You are certainly good never be called ugly."

"Well, I hope not," she said, "for it would not be nice to be ugly when I have such a handsome mate."

"One of the reasons I want to be so handsome is to look well beside you," he said.

"That's a noble reason," she answered, "and it shows that you have not been spoiled by your beauty."

"Neither have you," Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep answered. "I have heard of creatures who think they are so beautiful that they can be holed and sold like sheep. They may be beautiful but they seem to think that is all they need be. Now you are not that way."

"Neither are you," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep. "We certainly are out of bed on the right side this morning."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" said Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep, "whatever do you mean?"

"Have you a bit of a headache, or a fever? What is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, nothing," laughed Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep.

"What do you mean then?" asked her mate.

"When a creature says she gets out of bed on the right side it means that she got up feeling happy and pleasant and all of that."

"Then it doesn't mean that you think you got out of a real bed, does it?"

"No, no, don't be worried; I'm not feeling any," laughed Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep. "It's a saying, that's all."

"Ah, I see," he said. "I see it means people and creatures begin the day right. It means that the day is supposed to begin for creatures when they get out of bed so they start the saying at that point."

"Right," agreed Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep. "Do you know I heard Mrs. Aweil Mountain Sheep talking last night the other day and I had to laugh."

"Did you laugh?" asked Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep. "I suppose you do as you said you had to."

"Yes, I had to and I did," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep.

"And they tell me what was the cause of your mirth?" asked Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep.

"I beg your pardon," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep, "but did I hear you correctly?"

"I asked you what was the cause of your mirth," said Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep.

"Yes, I heard, correctly enough," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep. "But the truth is, I don't understand."

"I asked you what was the cause of your mirth, which means that I would like to know what was the reason for your laughing. Mirth means fun and laughter and such like things."

"Oh, I see," said Mrs. Blue Mountain Sheep. "Well, I had to laugh when I heard Mrs. Aweil Mountain Sheep say that she was so handsome that she could be holed and sold like sheep. She said she was so handsome that she could be holed and sold like sheep. She said she was so handsome that she could be holed and sold like sheep."

"I had to laugh, because goodness, old Aweil is nothing compared to you. You have such an exquisitely sweet expression. Your horns, which are so large and which point in such an interesting way, are really lovely."

"And your beauty is especially fine because you're small. It is true you are as strong as old Aweil, but you're more dainty and delicate and far more stylish. Oh, for more stylish, I did have to laugh when I heard Mrs. Aweil bragging like this."

"I thought it was funny when he bragged here," said Mr. Blue Mountain Sheep. "But he's a creature of his kind and he's got to be as you are, Lady, Blue Mountain."
