Great Mass Meeting Here Brings Forth Movement to Co-operate in Fight For Relief From Economic Pressure and Political Wrongs

Presaging the sweep of a powerful movement for political and economic reforms, organized labor and organized farmers of the Twin Falls country joined hands yesterday at a tremendous mass meeting which jammed the Lavinger theater until even standing room was exhausted. Unanimous endorsement by the farmers of collective bargaining and the machinist strike now in progress here was matched by the birth of the Idaho Labor League, to affiliate politically with the Nonpartisan League of Idaho, these two moves being indicative of the co-operative sentiment which crystallized at this meeting.

No stronger proof of the determination of the farmers and labor to stand together could have been presented than was offered at yesterday's gathering. That their combined organization will be the most powerful force in the life of this community could not be disputed after observing the unanimity of sentiment and action expressed by both allies.

LITTLE CHANGE IN COAL STRIKE

Dispatches From Principal Producing Sections Condensed for Quick Perusal

The full effect of the national coal strike was felt today. Officials of the United Mine Workers of America claimed that less than 1000 miners who obeyed the strike order Saturday morning had gone back to work.

Optimism was reported in official circles in Washington in telegrams to Attorney General Palmer, indicating that some of the strikers would return to work.

There was no change in the situation in the great Pennsylvania bituminous fields, according to Pittsburgh advices, but production was not cut off entirely as 14,000 non-union miners were reported at work in the Somerset region.

Union officials at Columbus declared that the 40,000 organized miners who obeyed the strike order in this coal field "would remain out."

Calvin and non-union miners were said to be working a number of small fields in the West Virginia coal fields around Sullivan, Ind. The Michigan fields were still tied up.

"No a strike working" was the word from Pittsburgh.

Troops were distributed in the Wyoming coal basin where it was reported that 4000 miners who struck Saturday night return to work.

Plans are under way for a great legal battle when the federal injunction against effecting the United Mine Workers comes up for argument in the United States court at Indianapolis Saturday.

Miners working out of Chicago will not be materially affected by the shortage, and no curtailment of train service there is expected.

None of the 2000 miners in Missouri who quit Saturday returned to work today.

There are about 15,000 men out in southern Illinois fields, with "no change" reported.

A train returned in Indiana fields. Miners at Wheeling admit they do not expect to win 60 per cent increase in wages, but they expect a substantial increase. They admit they will not press the six-hour demand.

"One man" officials in Dral are the only ones operating.

Miners' officials say none of the strikers returned in Washington. No effort to operate by employing non-union miners is contemplated by operators, according to Seattle advices.

Troops mobilized in Colorado apparently to check production to satisfy the desire to work to be moved to the entrance of many mines in the southern fields. No disturbance reported. About 5000 men in the Utah fields are out in the state.

A number of non-union miners are working in the West Virginia fields. Operators of mines in Appalachian camps promise increased production while strike lasts.

Continuation of federal troops is reported at Camp Frazier, Fort Lewis and Fort Riley.

Five hundred armed states troops in the West Virginia fields. It is believed that the striking miners will be able to hold the production of soldiers.

TELLS STORY OF BESSEMER STEEL

Geographic Society Gives Interesting Chronicle of Industry's Origin.

CHANGED MAKING OF STEEL

Two Men Working in Different Countries, Without Knowledge of Each Other, Arrive at Same Conclusion About Same Time.

Washington.—In view of the nationwide attention directed toward the strike of steel workers, the National Geographic society has issued a bulletin based on a communication from William Joseph Shewalter, concerning the making of steel, which he terms "industry's greatest secret."

The story of Bessemer steel is one of the fascinating chronicles of the industrial world. The bulletin says: "It seems to have been one of those cases where two men working in different countries, each without knowledge of what the other was doing, reached the same conclusion about the same time. Both were granted American patents; but upon application for renewal, the patent held Kelly to the inventor. The world, however, gives the credit to Bessemer, and the process is known as the Bessemer process."

Made By Olden Cook Pots. Kelly was a maker of old-fashioned cooking pots and kettles. It is related that one day he was sitting in front of his furnace and observed a point of incandescence where there was no charcoal—only the metal and the air. This led him to contend that air alone would soon take the impurities from molten iron.

"When he developed his tilting converter his engineer blew such a tremendous blast through the first charge that iron and all went up as sparks, in his discomfiture and the crowd's amazement, he hastily succeeded in getting the amount of air regulated, and poured out of his converter the first Bessemer steel. People said Kelly would soon be burned to death, because his invention was first made. Since his old converter was first used, billions of dollars' worth of steel has flowed out of the world's converters."

Both Kelly and Bessemer were baffled by the problem of receiving the supply of air so that it would not burn out all the carbon, a little of which is essential to steel. Furthermore, their product frequently proved to be brittle, owing to the fact that the molten metal absorbed oxygen from the air blast. The first difficulty was solved eventually by the expedient of burning out practically all the carbon, then adding exactly the amount required for the specific quality of steel desired.

"The second difficulty was overcome through the addition of the first trace of care of the harmful oxygen. The latter suggestion was the contribution of Robert F. Mushet, a Swedish ironmaker. Graneman, a Swedish ironmaker, had previously achieved the same results by using a pig iron initially rich in manganese. The latter is ferrous and oxidizes steel disappeared.

More Fire Than in Dante's Inferno. To go into a great building where there is a battery of Bessemer converters is to see more heat than Dante ever pictured. A converter is a huge egg swung 'upside-down' on trunnions. The great egg of steel lined with fire brick has the top off. Twenty tons of molten iron are poured into it, and then through some 200 little holes in the bottom pumping creates pump in a great coil of water. The water laden air sweeps up through the molten iron, it touches the molten carbon and iron, which causes the impurities to be carried away.

"Millions of red and white sparks fill the air, as if some demon within the liquid would vent his volcanic performance. A thousand engines, with safety valves blowing under tremendous pressure, are the voice of a sepher in comparison. First the flame that pours forth its violet, then the blue into orange, becomes a faint blue, which is a sign that all the impurities are gone.

"Then the blast of gases, the carbon that is necessary to replace the needed portions burnt out, is added, the great egg of steel swings back to its position, the carbon is mixed with the ferrous fluid, and then the egg tips over on its side, and out of the top pours the liquid into the ladle. The whole operation takes about 20 minutes—a ton of steel in a Bessemer converter. Bessemer's structural material, railroad rails, wire and pipe.

"The Bessemer process was twice as much steel produced in the United States by the Bessemer as by the open-hearth process. But with the rapid exhaustion of open-hearth the proper amount of phosphorus for converter practice. The open-hearth furnace, which can use with equal success either iron or steel, often takes a large or a small amount of phosphorus, largely replaced the Bessemer converter?"

Kept Her Promise. New York.—Little Adelle Igenlath made good the promise she made her mother when she went in search of her stolen doll and didn't return. "I won't come back till I find dolls," she said.

TO CELEBRATE ARMISTICE DAY

Most Momentous Date in History to Be Commemorated in Gem State Nov. 11

'Armistice Day, November 11,' will be celebrated in Idaho and great preparations will be made for the holiday. Governor Davis has issued a proclamation to that effect. It has been proposed by the American Legion to make November 11, holiday and the governor did not hesitate in designating Tuesday, Armistice Day, the proclamation reads, in substance that a holiday should be observed throughout the day to celebrate the signing of the armistice at the termination of the world conflict approximately a year ago. The governor also made it known that the day was to be observed in a spirit of divine thankfulness and prayer so that Divine Providence might lead our country to righteous victories. Arrangements are being made to have Tuesday, November 11, the most memorable celebration ever held in the Gem state. The day it commemorates will never be forgotten for there is none greater in world history. Looking down the annals of time one finds no more momentous date than that of the 11th of November, 1918, when all warring nations suspended the struggle pending the signing of the peace treaty. The day will be celebrated in near every city and town down in the smallest hamlet. The programs will consist of speaking, music and parades of service men together with a number of features that will be introduced for the first time. The day

AN "UNHUMAN" JOB

"The presidency has become an almost unhuman job," says William Allen White, that is, a job for a super-man. "Leading more than 100,000,000 active, intelligent people, according to the present day demands of the presidential office, is perhaps too great a task for any man."

Any one at all familiar with the more routine work of the chief executive knows that if alone entails a strain beyond the endurance of most men in public or private life. When it is added such abnormal and yet to be expected burden as those of conducting war, making peace and handling critical industrial situations, it is no wonder that even a man of strong constitution and natural poise breaks down.

The president may have not only grown in form with the growth of the nation but it has taken on tasks that formerly did not belong to it. Recent presidents have played a constantly growing role in legislation. Congress resents this development as an encroachment, yet in the main it seems to have come about naturally and perhaps inevitably.

The trouble is that the American president fulfills a double function. He is both national executive and leader of his party; and because his party is generally the dominant one, he is thus looked to as the formulator and director of legislative programs. In France there is a president and a premier for these two purposes, just as in constitutional monarchies like England and Italy there is a king and a premier. It is the premier's work that breaks the backs of one president.

Added to this is the work arising from the fact that the states are always unloading on the federal government burdens which they ought to bear themselves, and thus the president has a great deal to do which properly should be done by the governors. Even city executives have a way of appealing to him in emergencies.

What is to be done about it? Political evolution will take care of the problem, no doubt. Meanwhile, any man equating to the presidency must expect to wear himself out in a task beyond the capacity of any but a supreme genius.

LABOR'S BILL OF RIGHTS

The labor and public groups of the industrial conference agreed on this proposition, as embodying fundamental rights of American workmen:

"The right of wage-earners to organize without discrimination, to bargain collectively, to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations and adjustments with employers in respect to wages, hours of labor and relations and conditions of employment is recognized."

This will probably be regarded by most citizens as a moderate statement of principles and practices which, as the New York World remarks, "are almost universal," which "is the foundation of a civilized industry," which "has been accepted everywhere by employers who value justice and security in their enterprises," and which in most cases have given "results satisfactory to all concerned."

The statement as it stands represents a compromise. The union leaders wanted a stronger declaration in favor of unionization and collective bargaining, but they accepted this for the sake of coming to an agreement. The public representatives agreed. The representatives of the capital group, by acquiescing vote of one, refused.

The labor delegation is to be commended, not for giving provocation. It is possible that the latter group was really representative of American employers.

ALIEN SLACKERS

Alien slackers will remain aliens, if a measure recommended by the immigration committee of the house of representatives is enacted. It deals with foreign born residents of the United States, who had applied for citizenship before this country declared war, and who withdrew their application in order to avoid military service under the selective draft law. The bill proposes to deport them to their native lands.

This may seem pretty severe treatment. It is logical, however, and in most cases deserved. It seems self-evident that any man who changed his mind about wanting to be an American citizen because he feared he would have to fight for America had little real knowledge of America, and little sympathy with American ideals. He will now lose little but temporal advantages. From the standpoint of such aliens, citizenship that is not worth fighting for is not worth having, and from the standpoint of real Americans, the man who will not fight for it is not worth having.

Let such slackers, therefore, go back home. Our citizenship is long been conferred too lightly. Their fate will raise the standard of citizenship in American eyes and in the eyes of the whole world.

Radicals are getting so numerous that when the revolution that the reddest of 'em are hounding finally gets here, the radicals will have to fight each other to see which one has the most followers.

It's unfortunate that the peace treaty can't be made a national issue this election. That would be the most effective way to settle it.

Your Last Chance to Make Millions in Oil Leases is Here

The subscriptions for oil leases near where J. A. Noggle is drilling for oil, have been coming in so fast that we will soon have to withdraw our lease propositions from the market. We have been flooded for leases and at the rate that they have been coming in we will soon have everything taken up around where oil is being drilled.

Do Not Delay but Sign This Application Today and Join the Ranks of the Independently Rich

Remember the conditions of this leasing are:—

- That your lease will be within one mile of the well that J. A. Noggle is now drilling.
- That you get your money back should you not get the lease before November 20th, 1919.
- That the lease carries with it an abstract showing the title to be good in the grantor.

For those of you who may not know about Mr. J. O. Noggle this information is given: Mr. Noggle has had years of active experience in oil fields and knows good oil land better than most farmers know good stock. He was sent by this syndicate to California and Wyoming to pass on propositions and each time turned them down because he thought they were no good. His judgment saved these men many thousands of dollars and proved his honesty. Today they are drilling in a field in Oklahoma that eventually will be the richest oil field in the world. So you see that by buying one of these leases you are bound to jump right into the millionaire class and can retire.

Money Made Easy in Oil Fields

Says a Drug Store Clerk, If a Person Has Some Money, a Little Nerve and a Chance to Buy a Lease Near a Well Actually Drilling.

"Only one way of investing in the development of oil, that will insure a 'climax,'" says the Oklahoma Investor, in an interview with Oseola Howard, a man who has stepped from a poor clerk on a drug store to a multimillionaire, asking him how he did it. He said: "I did not take me long to find out that Oklahoma had the oil, but how could I get a part of it was the problem I wished to solve. I had a very limited amount of money, and a fair job. I know if I bought some land that was supposed to have oil under it, I would not drill a well as it took several thousand dollars to drill. In fact many thousands to have even the casing off the well had been drilled, so I decided that my life was passing on and I must act or lose. Feeling that if I did not attempt to better my condition it would not be bettered, so I decided to buy 40 acres of oil lease near to where some responsible fellows were going to drill, so I purchased 40 acres at $200 per acre. The lease was a five-year lease. The well was drilled to the depth of 2,000 feet and oil was found. My lease was worth $3000 per acre. I could half of it and retained the other part. Then I bought some more leases where wells were being drilled, and my was not long until I was very independent." "When asked if he bought stock in the oil companies, he said yes, he did until experience taught him that the sure way to win was to own what you own, and play the game as safe as possible. You will find people in the oil fields buy leases and they must be reasonably close to the well that is drilling." "What do you mean by 'reasonably close'?" "I mean within two miles." "Then the main thing is to know that the concern that you are near will drill." "Yes, that is it, exactly. You will notice in Oklahoma, also shiners, farmers and bankers alike make millions when they play the game consistently, by buying leases. Oklahoma is as much of an oil state as Ohio is a farming state and farming is not a serious gamble in Ohio, is it?" "The reason is that the farmer in Ohio takes the lease amount of chance possible in farming, and the man who wins in Oklahoma the same on oil, so buy leases." "Why is it that many people in Oklahoma have lost money by playing the oil game?" was asked. "Well, tell me this, why has Oklahoma passed a blue sky law?" was the answer. "Because so many companies were operating that had no capital, I suppose," was the answer. "Yes, you guessed about right, and if the company did not have the money to become of the stock holder? He just had the pleasure of believing that he had something for a short time, that's all, and if the investor had owned a lease he yet would have had something, because the well will be completed by some other people. Oil investments are the best if you win, and the best chance to win is by buying oil leases, in an oil country, and Oklahoma is sure an oil country."

BOYS ARE BACK FROM POCATELLO

Older Boys Conference Is Well Attended Delegates Say Upon Their Return

The six boys who went to Pocatello Friday morning to attend the Y. M. C. A. conference returned today on the noon train. Those going were Willie Stearns, James Brown, Carl Edwards, Nell Cole, Duane Hertz and Harold Porterfield.

The boys reported a fine time and a good meeting. Matters of interest to older boys were taken up and discussed. The boys will thereupon give a group of pop manifest at the conference and that group was the main character of the meeting.

Principal M. C. Mitchell of the local high school started this morning that a meeting of all the boys of the high school would be held either this Sunday afternoon or the following day, at which the boys would return to Pocatello to give a report on the conference. This has been confirmed by the high school in the past and it is felt that good results through such a meeting.

Big Four-Act Drama Coming to Lavering

Not in many years has a play made such a profound impression upon theatre-goers as did "John Ferguson" the four act drama by St. John G. Ervine, the young Irish novelist and playwright, when it was presented in New York City last May by the Theatre Guild, Inc. Answered for one week only, its popularity kept it there until it had recorded the longest metropolitan dramatic run and won itself the title of the most dramatic sensation of the season. This engagement, in more notable view of the fact that "John Ferguson" is the opposite of what New York has always accepted as a successful summer entertainment. It is a play of great power and intense feeling, and gripping to the hilt, goes throughout New York's "silly season" it has broken all traditions by packing the theatre to the doors.

The entire action of the play is in a little farm house of North Ireland where we are introduced to John Ferguson, a devout old follower of the Bible, industrious, hard working, and for ever "misfortunes and finally tragically fall to stir his profound belief that man has no right to judge his neighbor—until a family disaster in an event causes him for a time to waver in his belief. The author, with marvellous skill, shows the contrast between the old man's religious orthodoxy and his children's modern philosophy, a conflict that is illuminated by some of the subtlest and most brilliant dramatic delineation ever enjoyed on the stage. It is said, "This play comes to the Lavering theatre on Friday and Saturday, November 7 and 8, with a distinguished New York cast."

CLUB WORK NOT YET COMPLETED

University Specialist to Pass Judgment on Club Leaders Work Today

The task of selecting the winners for Junior club work was not completed Saturday as expected because William Kerr, wine specialist from the University of Idaho did not arrive yesterday, writing that he would come by automobile from Gooding today.

Reading the reports is proving an exceedingly difficult task according to A. J. O'Reilly of the local farm bureau and the prizes will not be awarded until Mrs. Kerr returns to the work of the club leaders. Mr. O'Reilly was attempting to get the work in shape for the specialist this morning.

Specialist in many agricultural areas are frequently coming to Twin Falls to cooperate with the farm bureau. Each specialist from the state works in his line. Nothing is done without the advice and sanction of their men unless word is received from them of their inability to be at a certain place at a definite time.

A number of the club leaders did not attend the meeting last Saturday for the purpose of selecting the winners. For this reason the work could not be completed.

One hope to be able tomorrow morning to announce the names of those who will take the trip to Durabo either during the Christmas vacation or next summer," said Mr. O'Reilly this morning. "There will be stiff competition among the contestants as the grades are quite even among many of them."

A meeting will be held tonight at Maroa at which a permanent president and secretary will be elected. Mr. Walker was elected temporary chairman at the meeting last week and Mr. Williams was chosen secretary pro tem. It is quite likely that these men will be retained as permanent officers.

CAMPAIGN FOR R. C. MEMBERS STARTS TODAY

Local Headquarters Is Swamped With Work as Big Drive Gets Under Way

The Red Cross campaign started with a bang this morning. The local headquarters of the organization in the morning lobby was a place teeming with people and in a very short time there were various matters of importance to be attended to.

Miss Beatrice Ostrander, county chairman, and Mrs. H. E. Lewis, branch chairman, were working like Trojans to see that everything went off as well as possible. Nearly every Red Cross captain had called in for supplies and everything indicated an early start toward raising the quota for the county.

A large number of high school girls will assist in the city efforts to secure members and everyone in the city will be asked to join this worthy organization, the amount being $1 as it has always been. This is a small amount for the money raised by this method aggregates a large amount, the Red Cross officials say, in nearly every case in order to pay the necessary dollar to the cause. While the amount received from each individual is small, in many months it has been willing to donate $1 than those are who will give large amounts that an enormous sum is raised.

The money received from the people by the Red Cross in many towns goes to the fund for the aid of strikers' committees. The Red Cross has collected material aid at several districts and has many other things that the man cannot find out alone. This service takes much money, Red Cross officials state and for purposes such as this the county should promptly raise its quota and then go over the top as far as possible.

Miss Beatrice Ostrander declared the county allotments will soon be raised and also that the captains of the various blocks will pass the money and the receipts total much more than the quota.

Everyone in the city and county will be asked to join within the next few days. Captains will go in every residence and business house as much as possible. Twin Falls is expected to live up to its reputation relative to raising funds for worthy causes.

LIGES BOARD TO SETTLE COAL AND STEEL STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Creation of a board of three prominent men to settle the coal and steel strikes and other industrial disturbances was advocated by Senator Keaton, Republican of Iowa, chairman of the senate committee on education and labor, this afternoon. A subcommittee of the Keaton committee has now engaged in drawing up a report on the present investigation of the steel strike. The report probably will embody recommendations for cooperative legislation to prevent strikes and bring about amicable adjustment of disputes between capital and labor, Senator Keaton said.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIK ARMY ADVANCES

Now Less Than Thirty Miles From Petrograd—British Continue Warship Bombardment

MOSCOW, Nov. 2. (By-ways). The anti-Bolshevik army on the Petrograd front is advancing all along the line and is now less than thirty miles from Petrograd, according to an official report from General Yudenich's headquarters. The Bulgarian leader declares they will not continue this support unless showing independence to recognize the Russian officials in Petrograd.

General Yudenich's army was reported to be only 15 miles from Petrograd before the reds launched the counter-offensive last week.

The fall of the bolshevik fortress of Krainsky-Boris, one of the defenses of Petrograd on the southwestern side, has not yet been confirmed.

General Denikin's Don army is reported to have surrounded the town of Izmail red division on the south flank of the front. British warships in the Gulf of Finland are again hostile. Letters between Krainsky-Boris and Krainski.

General Yudenich is reported to have nominated General von Glines as his successor general of Petrograd in the event the city is taken.

Dr. Bennett Declares Wilson Inconsistent

President Wilson slumped the moral sense and the high regard of millions of Americans, when, propped up in bed, in illness for the recovery from which invulnerable prayers have been offered, he dictated the veto of the prohibition enforcement act of congress, the Marshal Dr. A. G. Bennett, in the dethroned patient yesterday.

"This astounding veto would open the way to an orgy of drunkenness, debauchery, idleness, waste, and criminality at a time when sober thinking, strict economy and universal industry are of highest importance to the welfare of America and the world. The veto hampers the earnest effort to win the battle for prohibition now on in England and other countries. It reveals the president's own inconsistency—one day declaring that war emergency is off the emergency that necessitated prohibition; but the next day he demands upon the coal miners against striking, because the war emergency is yet emphatically and urgently on."

"It is well to note that Senator Borah voted to uphold the president. But Senator Nugent voted to overrule the veto. These votes will not be forgotten by Idahoans who care for moral progress," he said.

In the evening Dr. Bennett declared the home was the foundation of civilization and the Christian faith was the foundation of the home and urged the safeguarding of the home by striving for a stronger, more progressive Christianity. The Temple quartet sang several numbers, and the orchestra under Dr. Parrott's direction played a number of selections.
