ASK CHANGES IN WAR RISK ACT

Important Amendments in Bill Are Asked of National Lawmakers.

REVISE SCHEDULE UPWARD

Increased Compensation for Disabled Ex-Service Men Is Urged—Bureau Asks to Give Full Force to New Service to Those Affected.

Washington.—Our work in conducting the affairs of the bureau must be guided by the counsel of the soldiers, sailors and marines themselves. Our aim must be to be of the greatest service to those affected by the act.

Thus Colonel J. O. Chalmers Jones, director of the bureau of war risk insurance, the covering of a talk to wounded soldiers at Walter Reed hospital, Washington, D. C., epitomized the motives behind the revision of the government insurance," adds the director.

"A recent treasury decision has authorized the reimbursement of government contracts by the payment of only reasonable premiums on the amount of loss to be reimbursed, one covering the amount of the loss and the other the amount of the loss in the month in which the loss occurred. This is a very desirable provision which will make it possible for all ex-service men to retain their government insurance in their own civil life. I look for a very lively adjustment and conversion to the new act and it is made known to all those who are affected.

"The act appreciates tremendously by the operation it has had from the insurance officials and the men of the insurance industry, and it is to be regretted that there are some few who disregard their moral obligation to assist the ex-service men by encouraging the men to drop their government insurance and take out insurance in private companies. It is my personal opinion that all ex-service men in such instances should continue in their disapproval of such action, and should in some forcible way express their utter disgust for those who are found guilty of such practices. Indeed, in the years to come, I feel confident that in such cases where ex-service men have been advised in such way as to allow them to base their government insurance, that there will be at least one man in the world whom the ex-service men will utterly despise, and that man will be the insurance agent who in a time of test was found wanting."

Bull Dog Tries to Alter Court Decision
New York.—The testimony of a witness in the trial of the McQuinn in court when the dog, Rip, intended to continue his trial was that he was a dog.

Mrs. Charlotte Slincker appeared against Mrs. Charles Slincker, Mrs. Linnares, with her dog, Rip, Slincker declared, that she raised Rip from a pup and that he wandered away from her home last November. Magistrate McQuinn ruled that Mrs. Slincker's dog, Mrs. Linnares handed over the dog and started to leave the courtroom. He gave one furtive look at his departing mistress and set up a howl. He pulled Mrs. Slincker off her feet and he quiet reinforcements to hold him.

RICH RADIUM FIND REPORTED
High Content in Pitchblende Discovered in Nipissing District.

Toronto.—Pitchblende, the ore of radium, has been found in the township of Bruce, district of Nipissing, it was announced. An assay, made by New York experts, showed the pitchblende to be unusually rich in uranium, the parent of radium. The uranium content was 22.50 per cent, equal to 74.58 per cent of radium oxide.

English Government Helps London.—Under the housing act money is being lent to the owners of buildings who are willing to convert them into flats for workers. The loan must not exceed half the value of the property.

Invented Pneumatic Calsson, William Swan Smith, builder of the first all-steel bridge in the world and inventor of the pneumatic calsson, was born in 1816, July 22, 1822, graduated at West Point in 1837, resigned from the army, but served during the Civil war, and later was employed as a civil engineer and bridge builder. His invention of the pneumatic calsson revolutionized deep river bridge building and he was the first one to ever come quickdraws in making foundations.

He was also a pioneer in moving big buildings and in the construction of skyscrapers. He was killed from the army with rank of brigadier general on the first January 17, 1912—Chicago Tribune.

LARGE FINANCIAL INTERESTS ENTER GOLDWYN CORPORATION

Negotiations have just been completed which mark the entry of large financial interests into the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, one of the largest motion picture distributing corporations.

The new interests which will be identified by the Goldwyn Company are represented by E. E. Hugonet, Executive E. Hugonet, and R. M. Carpenter, vice presidents of the United Power company, W. W. Laird, of Laird and company of Wilmington, Delaware, C. Kratz, vice president of the Wilmington Trust company, V. Thayer, vice president of the Chase National bank of New York, Duncan A. Holmes, vice president of the Chase Security corporation of New York, William Tompkins, George P. Board, G. W. Davidson, vice president of the Central Union Trust company of New York, and Abbott M. McWhorter, a member of House Committee on finance.

This group will be actively identified with the business of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and will sit on the board of directors. The addition of these resources will make this company probably one of the strongest organizations in the United States. The new development in the Goldwyn company will mean an increase in the capital stock to authorized amount of one million shares, of which there is intended to be generally outstanding approximately 400,000 shares.

The Goldwyn company announced last week that Lee and J. J. Shubert and A. H. Woods theatrical interests who control more than half of the share production made in the United States have become officers of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and would represent for Goldwyn pictures production all the plays which they have produced and intend to produce in the future.

ESKIMOS KEPT "FLU" OUT WITH GUN, EXPLODER SAYS

PILGRIMAGE, DEC. 13—WILLIAM B. VAN VLIET, leader of the John W. Anderson expedition to the Eskimos of the Arctic coast of Alaska, has returned after an absence of two years. More than 5000 specimens collected during the expedition are now on their way to the University of Pennsylvania, Museum.

Many thousands of Eskimos died during an influenza epidemic, and at some points whole populations were destroyed. The northern Eskimos sent down each trail a man with a gun, who turned back every person, white or Eskimo, who tried to enter the country. In that way the disease was prevented from invading the north coast.

NASHVILLE, Ind., Dec. 13.—Either the pupae of the public school here will have to give up skunk hunting, or they will have to change clothes before they return to school after a profitable skunk hunt.
It all started when girls attending the school complained to the teacher when compelled to sit close to the skunk hunters.
The skunk hunters are standing firm, declaring they will not forsake the profits of the chase.
The girls are also standing firm, declaring they will not attend school unless something is done with the hunters.
The school board has taken the matter under advisement and a decision is expected within the next day or so.

BRITAIN GETS READY FOR BIG HOCKEY GAMES
LONDON, Dec. 13.—Following custom that has been in vogue since the institution of the international hockey series, matches between Great Britain and the United States have now been formally arranged between England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, The English international and trial dates are already known. Ireland has now agreed to meet Wales in Belfast on February 21; Scotland in Edinburgh on March 17, and England in Dublin on March 27.

All the leading matches are thus compressed in practically one month, and coupled with the fact that the Inter-Service championship between the Royal Navy, the Army and the R. A. F. is to be decided also in March, there is bound to be a rushing finish to the season. The Royal Navy play the Army on March 27, while the Royal Navy meet the R. A. F. at Portsmouth on March 29, and the Army meet the "knights of the air" at Aldershot on March 31.
Prior to these matches various trial games will be played by the triple service, so that the best men may be selected for the final championship. The system adopted by the Navy for this season is arranging international competitions, each sport having its own club, premises to work satisfactorily.

DISCOVER BALANCING ROCK ON WACHUSSETT MOUNTAIN
PITCHBULO, Mass., Dec. 13.—On the western slope of Wachusset Mountain, a balancing rock has been discovered. The rock, which is made of white blue granite, is six feet high and has three points of contact with the rock beneath it. It can be rocked precariously in one direction without being dislodged from its position on the natural platform.

THE NATION OF MANY TALENTS

It is estimated that 10,000,000 people perished, in Europe, as a direct effect of the war. Other millions have died since the armistice was signed, from its indirect effects. Now former Ambassador Morgenthau, after a tour of investigation, announces that "nothing on earth except a miracle from heaven can prevent the death by freezing and starvation of from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 people in Europe and the Near East this winter."

He wants to know whether America is going to stand aside while Europe founders in agony into dissolution.

There is imminent peril, right now, of a financial collapse in Europe which if it comes will be the most disastrous in history. Such a collapse would add unnumbered millions to the war victims, and leave a blight on European life for generations. It would add incalculable to the tides of discontent and radicalism sweeping through the world. It would prostrate business and delay reconstruction and sound prosperity in every country, including our own.

The world is one today, more than ever before, in thought, feeling and work. Europe cannot be ignored. Physical disease, mental disease, political disease, economic disease may come from Europe to America, just as the disease of war came—and will, unless America does something about it.

America saved civilization from Prussiaism, but the job did not end there. America must now save civilization from Bolshevism, from apathy, from forced illness and starvation. This country has done much, but it must do more. The United States is not only the Good Samaritan among nations. It is also the man with many talents, from whom much is expected. And looking out a helpful hand to Europe is not mere charity.

Like the man in the parable, if America does not use its talents to advance, they will be taken away. The whole world is bound up together, and our fortunes, despite our great independence, resources and isolated position, are linked with those of central Europe. If Europe goes down, America goes down, top—not to the same depth, but immeasurably lower than she would with the Old World still standing fast in its civilization and prosperity.

What, then, is the United States to do? First of all, ratify the peace treaty so that the victory can be clinched, and Prussiaism can be kept down, and there can be a sound basis for peace and reconstruction. Then Europe must have such help, in credit, goods and moral support, as the United States can render, until that prostrated continent gets on its feet again.

NATIONAL TAILORING

There has been much talk of standardizing women's clothes, for the sake of simplicity and economy, but it has never come to much. There were standardized "Liberty Aprons" or some such thing that American women wore loyally during the war; but since that, there is more variety than ever.

"That's just like a woman," of course. With men, it may be different. Men's clothing is already pretty well standardized. All it needs apparently, is an official fixing of style and material. This matter is said now to have actually been attended to in France.

There is a "national suit," made to combat the increasing cost of clothing. It is made along rather ordinary lines, and of fair quality and appearance—a suit that would attract no particular attention, but which fulfills the usual requirements well enough for the average man. It bears inside a tag marked "National Garment." It can be made cheaply because it is turned out in large quantities, and not only the style and material are standardized, but also the processes of manufacture. It is a sort of flannel suit. Well dressed Parisians, however, are said not to wear it. And it has one incredible merit. It sells for 110 francs, which at present amount to about $40 in American money.

French clothes, even of a flannel type, would hardly suit male Americans. Though women take their fashions from Paris, men seem how shy at home. But why not borrow that "national" suit of our own? Unimaginative males, like to be dressed all alike, and wouldn't millions jump at the chance of getting a possible suit for $10!

Several million people are now trying to figure out some way to reduce their income tax. If the old strike had continued, however, the matter would have taken care of itself.

Add to ultimate facilities the "wet" victories in 20 Massachusetts cities last week: Wetter, wetter everywhere, nor any (bop to get it.

CHRISTIANIZING THE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

(By George T. Simons.)

Every community has a spirit and a life. There is one group with this interest, another with that and so on, each manifesting its own spirit. It is the community, most of the inhabitants have come to it for a reason. It is to make money, or build themselves a home, etc., and are just as much concerned with their interests. They will pile up their own fortunes in spite of the fact that others about them may be in want. They will build their homes, though others may live in a hovel. They have little interest in the community as a whole until their business or other home demand that interest for their protection. He will then combine with others to protect himself or further his interest. In business it may be a coal company, or a contractor or a hotelier, etc. His children grow and demand an education. Others are in the same fix, so he gets them to agree with him for schools. In the same way churches and social organizations and economic units spring up, until we have a well organized community. We view each from their own point of view with more or less tolerance for the others. This is normal and right and it is an excuse to say that there are many spirits represented in a new community life.

Sound or false, however, there comes out of them a new spirit, which is the salvation of the community. Some call it "Americanism," others, "Progress," "Democracy," and "Christianity," etc. It is the harbinger of the many, the blending of factions into one. This saves the community from competitive participation, the terms of every divided loyalties. Herein the Christian principle of concern for others, unselfish service for all others and a consciousness for community life are set side by side. After a community is large enough to separate itself into little groups, until they get to "bubbling," one way there is little group, another, although some development is made. When the single purpose of community well obtains, it becomes, as I see it, Twin Falls to illustrate through this transitory period at this time, from the small town to the city; from the group consciousness to the community. When the various opportunities before it in the opening of new projects and the situation it already occupies, much depends upon the attitude and actions taken by the groups in the next few years. The churches have a splendid opportunity and should a heavy responsibility, in making the best use of the time. Also have the social and economic organizations the opportunity they prefer. Let each do its best local work and also cooperate in putting on a program which will reach those not included in their numbers. Teaching the social principles of life to the young, through group and classes, lectures, motion pictures and stereopticons, display programs, plays, pageants, etc., on a program of life. The observance of national and international holidays, with their religious interpretation, will help. A program including such things as the "small groups" and direct the spirit of the groups and the whole into an interesting and an institution of community welfare, Christianizing the community life, the present task before Twin Falls.

"Ladies' Aid" Is a Fifth Wheel in the Machinery of a Political Party

By MARY GARRETT HAY, Eastern Political Leader

The Ladies' Aid is a fifth wheel in the machinery of a political party. Men and women should work together. There is no place for the Ladies' Aid in politics. Men and women should serve side by side on the committees, should labor together in the assembly districts, should together evolve plans, platforms and policies; should, in short, be political partners.

Together both sexes can do better work than either acting alone. Men have had the experience, the long practical training in political procedure. They have the understanding of the intricacies of things. Association with them will be beneficial to women. On the other hand women have the strong humanitarian instincts, the high moral standards and a passion for improving and reforming. Women can check men's predatory business tendencies; men can check women's visionary schemes. If the two sexes cooperate in a cordial, earnest fashion we may expect splendid results.

Evance I so thoroughly believe in the cooperation of the sexes in politics. I am continually urging women to enroll in the parties and to work for them. Let women enter the parties and work from within to reform them if they think there is need of reform. Women, like men, who do not stand aside and idly criticize, but who roll up their sleeves and work, are today the most useful citizens and the best patriots.

PERSHING'S MANY NARROW ESCAPES UNDER FIRE TODAY BY SERGEANT

General's Personal Chauffeur Declares He Spent More Time Under Fire Than Any Officer or Enlisted Man of the American Expeditionary Forces—Always in Advanced Post Directing Major Operations.

New York.—Gen. John J. Pershing was the hardest working man of the American expeditionary force and the most advanced post which had been during the war than any officer or enlisted man under his command, according to Sergeant Cesar Santini, who was the general's personal chauffeur throughout the entire length of America's participation in the war. The general's life and was always in the advanced post commanding directing the movements of troops during major operations.

Sergeant Santini, who reveals these hitherto unpublicized facts of the doings of General Pershing in France, is a Frenchman by birth and enlisted in the United States army as an automobile chauffeur and engineer at Camp Sherman's island on April 23, 1917. His knowledge of the French language and his ability as a chauffeur led to his selection as the commander in chief of personal chauffeurs. Sergeant Santini sailed from the United States with General Pershing, he drove the general over forty thousand miles of French roads during the more than two years he was in France, and he has had more about the transport of the general than any other man in the army.

Wounded Citations for Bravery.
The general has given Sergeant Santini a gold cigarette case as a token of his appreciation of the chauffeur's service to him. The case would hold a citation personally awarded him by the commander in chief for bravery under fire. The chauffeur has also received several "hazardous situations" General Pershing found himself in at times, as Sergeant Santini has witnessed the general in close touch with his commander, and both naturally suffered the same "hazards from shell fire."

General Pershing recently mentioned out of service and has taken it upon himself to tell of his association overseas with General Pershing.

On the morning of the attack on the front General Pershing went through the rigors and strains of the day. In the morning he was in the front line and he was the guest of the French commanders and witnessed the attack on Chemain de Dames. On this occasion he was in the front line and he was the guest of the French commanders and witnessed the attack on Chemain de Dames.

Shell Nuts Misses Car.
Of the numerous narrow escapes General Pershing had in his time on the front the narrowest was, according to the best recollection of Sergeant Santini, the day before the battle of Cantigny. The general was riding along a road toward the advanced headquarters, which at that particular time was being heavily shelled by the Germans.

Shrapnel shells were continually bursting directly over the automobile, and fragments on several occasions landing on the roof of the machine. General Pershing and his aide-de-camp, who were seated in the tonneau of the car, seemed to be little affected by the "raining" they were undergoing, and so matter how near the shells landed their conversation, which probably had to do with the major operation of the morning, was not interrupted.

"One shell—it was one of Jerry's largest"—Sergeant Santini declares, "hit the road directly in front of us and only about a hundred feet from the machine. Had there not been a heavy raincoat the day before, which turned the road into a mire of mud, we probably would not be alive to tell the tale. Our automobile was splashed with mud, but beyond that we suffered no ill effects from the explosion. It undoubtedly was the narrowest escape the general had during his many visits to the line."

Reaching the advanced headquarters near the town of Meuzel St. Firmin, that evening, General Pershing, who had been active since the early hours of the morning, turned in for a few hours of rest. He lay down on a cot in an officers' dugout and slept peacefully during four hours of an unusually heavy bombardment.

All Sizes Coming Over.
"Jerry knew something was going to happen," the sergeant says, "because he was sending them over in all sizes and shapes. Our men were camped under some trees and I tried my best to take a little snooze on the cot. More than once the shells fell too close to the machine to make me feel comfortable. One big fellow bit and carried away the chimney of the dugout in which the general was sleeping."

Next morning General Pershing was in the headquarters telegraph office, where he received minute reports from the advanced posts which had been established in the town of Cantigny. The general personally directed the movements of the various units of the First American Army, which was engaged in the operation. At about nine o'clock in the morning the doubtless began to come back with prisoners, several of whom were captured before and returned to length by General Pershing. The general was very much pleased with the results of the operation. In this engagement, the sergeant says, and showed his appreciation for personally commanding and leading his men with the dash and as they drifted back in small groups from the front line.

When the Germans crossed the Marne river for the second time General Pershing was north of Chateauilly, his general headquarters. Upon receiving word of the crossing, he had his automobile and Sergeant Santini was informed the general was "in a hurry," but that he must take time to change his clothes.

On the way down toward Paris the route took the general past where the second division had been in a rest camp. The division was about to move to a certain point on the line. General Pershing commended the orders on the road, directing the division to move past haste to a point on the outskirts of Chateauilly.

Omitted the Marines.
The general reached Chateauilly some after the routine of the Germans by the marines, the sergeant continued. "He crossed the engineers' bridge and entered the town and went directly to several of the main positions, where he commented the crews and told them how proud he was of them."

During the fight in the Argonne forest General Pershing spent nearly two months in his recesses directing movements of troops. His mobile headquarters was pulled into the heart of the forest where it was camouflaged by brushbery. Every night the general made a visit to the advanced post command, which was situated in a well-entrenched position, to see that his orders were being carried out.

"The general never took any rest," the sergeant says, "but he always went up to the front to be sure things were done exactly as he ordered."

One of the peculiar things Sergeant Santini noted was that every line he took, General Pershing to Paris the general would make a long run of 100 miles or more, and he would be sent over a truck of bombing airplanes. It did not seem to matter what hour of the night or day he traveled, the city the general would be heard directly after their arrival and invariably continue for hours. Sergeant Santini is not so sure that the general is directly in communication as to when the general was going to the city, although every effort was made to keep the general in communication in the chief in the greatest secrecy.

Sergeant Santini probably drove the general to Paris in the time he was in France than any other chauffeur in the world can boast of to day. He drove President and Mrs. Will Wood on several occasions. President Voltaire, Premier Clemenceau, General Foch, Haig, Petain and Bliss and King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. King Albert awarded Sergeant Santini the gold Medal of Merit of the First class.

Foots Newspaper Men.
On two occasions that Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, visited the battle front in France he rode in General Pershing's automobile. Sergeant Santini tells the many amusing incidents and tricks General Pershing resorted to in an effort to evade newspaper men. One of these incidents occurred during Secretary Baker's first visit.

Secretary Baker and General Pershing were on their way up to the front line, the secretary in the automobile and the general in his. There was a score of other automobiles loaded with newspaper men following them. The general Pershing came up to a turn in the road he leaped out of his automobile and into that of Secretary Baker, neither the secretary nor the general. The two machines then separated and the newspaper men took up the trail of the general's car.

The automobile General Pershing used was equipped with special tanks that held forty-two gallons of gasoline. Gas masks and helmets for the occupants of the machine were tied to bags on the roof in a position where they could be reached easily by the driver or orderly. Inside the machine there were always several extra blankets in the event of an emergency. General Pershing never had occasion to use a gas mask.

During the time the general was in France he had in all nine different kinds of machines. An automobile was discarded not because it had been worn out or failed to function properly, but because a better model had been found. The orderly and driver carried aids arms and a rifle was strapped to the back of the general. Sergeant Santini was asked if General Pershing was in the habit of riding very fast, and he replied that "the general was sometimes in a hurry. He admitted, however, that at times he had exceeded seventy-five miles an hour. His orders were to "go as fast

NEW PIPE LINE FROM WELL TO CONSOLIDATED IRON

NEWCASTLE, Wyo., Dec. 15.—Two hundred prisoners in the Western country had been altogether too despondent and quiet. Street Southmen thought. For several days after their flight and confinement they were always asleep or dazed, both day and night, when the keeper made his rounds.

An investigating disclosed that the inmates had, it is reported, conspired to "dig their way out" from the "Whiskey" cell in the fall to their cell, and the hoize that had been taken in raids was rapidly disappearing.

TENNIS RULES ARE REVISED

Nomenclature Changed to Eliminate Feminine Frills Such as "Love" and "Deuce"

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—They've taken the "love" out of tennis. The "deuce" will leave the court deck, along with all the old scoring vernacular.

No more will the cry of "love 15" be heard from the courts, for the supreme council of tennis has ordered it out.

Tennis has been ordered a man's game by the powers of sport, and it will be a man's game.

The executive council of the United National Lawn Tennis association has voted in favor of a new scoring system of numerical designations known as the "one-two-three" system. The new rule speaks for itself.

If the server wins the first point the score is called "one." If the receiver wins the first point the score is called "two." If the server wins the next point, it is called "one-two." The scoring is continued in this manner until either player has won four points. The game is then called for the player until the other player has scored three points, when the score is called "one-three" or "two-four," as the case may be, and the game is then scored for the player who first thereafter gains a lead of two points.

Hazy wording of the old ruling has been cleared up in a substitute clause which provides that the server "must have both feet back of the line until the racket strikes the ball."

The main purpose of the foot fault ruling is to prevent the server from taking an unfair advantage in getting to the net. It is the judgment of the committee that the purpose was accomplished when the server is kept back of the base line, until the racket strikes the ball, as it makes little difference what he does thereafter.

Radical revision has also been made in the method of handicapping. A simple table appears, in which computations that have been required for the handicaps in the past.

The new ruling is: "The method of handicapping shall consist of allowing to each player one or more points in a set. These points are to be added to the points scored by each player in that set. The points scored shall be recorded at the end of each game and at the conclusion of the match. The handicaps shall be added to this total. The player then having the greatest number of points wins the match regardless of the number of games won or lost."

The changes were determined upon after three months' deliberation by S. Wallis Morrison, Edward N. Stein, and William H. Jones, who were assisted by W. H. W. Washburn, Samuel Horley, and Norrie Williams II.

Fight Challenge Has Not Reached Dempsey

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 13.—George Carpentier's "official" challenge to Jack Dempsey for a battle for the world's title had not reached Jack Dempsey's headquarters late today.

"This is more or less a formality," Dempsey said, "there is no doubt about my willingness to meet Carpentier when my manager contacts him and when some promoter makes the proper offer."

Dempsey said that he had been expecting the challenge ever since Carpentier's boat deck.

ALL-AMERICAN TEAM CHOSEN

Walter Camp Picks Out Best Football Men From Colleges and Universities

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Walter Camp, American football authority, has picked an unusual "All American" team.

Camp's criterion generally that it is one of the best he ever entered. It is unusual in that the high honor goes to Centre college, a team unheard of before mid-season, the past fall. The Kentucky college was his choice in the eleven. Weaver at center and McMillan at quarterback.

The team is unusual also in that it does not contain a Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Army or Navy player. With two selections from Kentucky, one from Virginia Tech, one from Virginia, it is fairly representative of the country.

Camp claims it to be one of the greatest teams he has ever seen in the mythical gridiron.

The selections follow:
End—Higgin, Penn State.
Tackle—West, Colgate.
Guard—Alexander, Syracuse.
Center—Weaver, Centre.
Quarter—Vaughton, Dartmouth.
Fullback—Cady, Johns Hopkins.
End—H. Miller, Penn.
Quarter—McMillan, Centre.
Fullback—Cady, Harvard.
Fullback—H. Miller, Ohio State.
Fullback—Rodgers, West Va.

Ban Johnson Is Still President

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—No matter how the controversy of the American League remains, Ban Johnson will remain president of the organization long enough to "wipe out the stain of gambling which now exists in an ancient American game," says Johnson.

Johnson authorized the statement through his attorney, Geo. F. Miller of this city, who accompanied the Chicago club owners to the league meeting in New York this week.

"The thing" wanting his talk, however, now state that they desired to talk matters over to an amicable way," stated Miller. "When they greeted Johnson, they said they were glad to see him with fair new suits at the door of the hotel. This is like hitting a man over the head and expecting him to talk it over afterwards."

Harvard Meets Oregon at Rose Tournament

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 13.—Football critics of the west agree that the Pasadena tournament of today contains the most exciting and strongest football team when it selected the University of Oregon gridiron to battle Harvard at Pasadena New Year's day.

Interest along the coast in the coming game is intense, principally due to the fact that for the first time in the history of annual encounters between the east and west at Pasadena, the strongest teams representing both sections have been chosen, the fans believe.

The Oregonians were defeated once during the season, by Washington State college, 7 to 0, when the big break in the game went against them. The superiority of the Oregon team was indicated by the overwhelming amount of yardage in its favor, and later proved by the fact that the State was beaten by the University of Washington and the Oregon Agricultural college, both of which were humbled by Oregon.

SWEET REVENGE FOR JIMMY FITZPATRICK

Beyond the defeat of Yale by Boston college, made possible by a field goal kicked by Jimmy Fitzpatrick, lies a rather interesting little story. It seems that a couple of years ago, upon graduating from the high school at Newton, Conn., Jimmy planned to enter Yale and to take part in athletics at that university. Johnny Mack, the Yale trainer, looked the boy over one day, however, and remarked that he would never make an athlete. Mack's harsh, rendered judgment caused Fitzpatrick to change his mind about going to Yale and he entered Barton college. The blow he delivered to the Bulldogs' pride, therefore, brought great delight to the heart of the Meriden boy.

A LETTER TO THE LADY OF THE HOUSE

To Everywoman,
Twin Falls, Idaho

Dear Madam—It is just as important for you to SAVE MONEY as it is for your husband to MAKE MONEY. The Real WOMANLY woman—the woman worth while—is the housewife who makes her husband's pay check exercise its full purchasing power by buying cheapest. A husband just naturally feels proud of that kind of wife. More comfort for the home, more furniture, more and better clothing, more and better food, are the results obtained by the woman who reads the advertisements in The Times and takes advantage of the opportunities offered to obtain bargains. The advertised bargains save the woman ready many dollars every month. The woman who reads the advertisements and profits thereby, practices true domestic economy.

The amount saved from the purchase of one little article of food bought at the grocery store that advertises pays the cost of the paper that furnishes the family with its daily news.

PERSHING TELLS HOW DOUGHBOYS WON WORLD WAR

Trained to be Invincible, They Turned Loose on Hunns and Made Victory of Defeat

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—America won the world war, General Pershing shows in his final report to Secretary Baker on his work as commander of the American expeditionary force, made by him tonight.

The United States army, saturated with victory from what remained certain of the allies by Germany, Pershing shows.

Other points brought out by Pershing's report are:

1.—American troops were trained in France in a way which would insure the fixed thought that they were to take the offensive in battle and not the defensive; that they were to be invincible.

2.—Despite insistence of the British and French that the American force be regarded as replacements, Pershing held out for an army under the American flag.

3.—The cables between United States and France were kept hot by appeals to Pershing to the war department to send the necessary money and supplies and to stop loading the transports with other supplies of which there were enough in France.

4.—Telling of the conduct of the American army in its victory in the Meuse-Argonne battle of October 11, 1918, which was followed swiftly by the armistice, Pershing said:

"Every member of the A. E. F. from the front line to the base ports was straining every nerve, 24 hours a day, to win the victory which seemed insurmountable, were overcome daily. It was this spirit of determination animating every American soldier that made it impossible for the enemy to maintain the struggle until 1918.

"The demands of incessant battle which had been maintained day after day for more than a month, but which were our divisions in fight to the limits of their capacity. It was this spirit that made it impossible for the enemy to maintain the struggle until 1918.

"Artillery units were engaged in continuous action, day after day, and were fought out to the last round of their shells and the crews' strength.

"While the high pressure of these dogged attacks was a great strain on our troops, it was calculated to the enemy. His divisions had been broken into cantons by our persistent assaults and his troops had been reduced until his will to resist had almost reached the breaking point.

Once a German division was engaged in the fight it became practically impossible to effect its retreat. The enemy was forced to meet the constant attacking units by attacking upon tactical organization, and using hurried detachments to re-occupied separated portions of the field."

When America entered the war in the spring of 1917, the German general staff could foresee the complete elimination of Russia, the possibility of defeating Italy at the end of the year, and finally the victory of 1918 against the French army, which might terminate the war, Pershing said.

"It cannot be said that German hopes of final victory were extravagant either as viewed at that time or as viewed in the light of history," the report continued.

Pershing said that the great German drive in March, 1918, made such progress upon French and British reserves that defeat stared them in the face. The French had almost entirely dispersed with the exception of their troops for rear warfare, Pershing said, due to the loss in part of trench warfare. To avoid this in our army and to encourage the offensive spirit the following order was issued at the American training centers in France:

"All instructions must contain the assumption of a vigorous offensive. This purpose will be emphasized in every phase of training and in every detail of instruction.

"The rifle and the bayonet are the weapons of the infantry soldier, who are to be trained to a high degree of skill in their use. An effective rifle spirit must be developed until the soldier feels himself as a personal fighter invincible in battle."

DOYLE TALKS TO DEAD SON

English Novelist Declares He Recognized Voice of Son During Battle.

London.—"I can state definitely that I spoke to my dead son. I heard his voice, and would he not be pleased that I should have done so?" Doyle said.

With those words Sir Arthur Conan Doyle added new flesh to the controversy going on in England over spiritualism.

Doyle, one of the leading exponents of the belief in this country, declared that at a recent occasion, in which five men, his wife, and an amateur medium participated, the voice of his dead son was clearly heard, before the medium was bound in six places to prevent all contact with the spirit.

"Suddenly my wife uttered a little cry," Doyle said. "Then I heard the voice."

"Father," the boy said, "I'm here, my boy," I replied. "Doyle said he spoke the voice, but he does not know the address, for he had had only one difference in his lifetime—his belief in spiritualism."

LOVE VALUED AT $200,000

Artist-Soldier Succs Play Producer for Theft of Wife's Affections.

New York.—Two hundred thousand dollars is the valuation for a wife's love, according to the Supreme court by Raymond C. Keller, artist, of 322 West 118th street, against George E. Lottman, Sr., of 100th street.

Mr. Keller explains in the complaint that just before joining the army and in anticipation of going overseas to fight, he and Mrs. Lottman were married on April 5, 1918. While a soldier Mr. Keller won a promotion to sergeant.

The artist asserts that on his return to this country he discovered Mrs. Keller's love was no longer his, and because that Mrs. Lottman had given up her, knowing she was an married woman.

Mr. Lottman filed a general denial to the allegations.
