Investigation of Supreme Court Leaks Is Started on Information supplied by International News Service

WOULD PROMOTE CO-OPERATION

New Organization Started to Combat Extreme Radical Tendencies of Times

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Official notice has just been made by Hon. John C. Whitely, St. Joseph, Mo., chairman of the executive board of the organization of a National anti-radical league, which is being organized in every county of every state in the United States, for effectively combating the dangerous trend toward extreme radicalism, which has been fostered and abetted by the "Yellow Press" and its kindred organs.

Speculation in Wall Street on Advance Knowledge Thought to Have Gone On for 2 Years

Sure-Thing Stock Gamblers Played United States Food Products Stock "Short" in Knowledge That Prohibition Decision Would Force Prices Down

SOUTHERN PACIFIC STOCK WAS PLUM FOR INSIDERS ON OIL LAND DECISION

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—An audacious scheme of a coterie of Washington speculators to interfere with the orderly processes of the most sacred American political institution, the United States supreme court, has been frustrated by publicity through information furnished to the government by the International News Service.

Whether a crime has been committed is a matter to be determined by the highest judicial tribunal and the executives of the department of justice.

Whether men, two of them lawyers, who are known by the department of justice officials as having speculated in Wall Street on the result of the decision of the court, are to be disciplined or otherwise disciplined remains for government action. But whatever official action is taken, it is now certain that "sure-thing" stock gamblers of Washington are today quaking with fear at the disclosures of yesterday concerning an attempt to traffic in Wall Street with alleged advance information concerning the decision of the supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the dry liquor law.

The department of justice investigation, which was conducted under the supervision of Assistant Attorney General C. H. Ames, at the instance of Chief Justice Edward D. White, is continuing, and an attempt is being made to bring to light the names of those who were involved in the speculation.

William J. Flynn, chief of the Internal Security division of the department of justice, and his force of secret service men have before them the mass of unraveling the facts concerning the alleged speculation.

The fact is, however, that on December 6 I was able to notify Judge Ames and Chief Flynn upon information that I had received from a confidential source to the effect that a certain Washington lawyer was in New York claiming to be in possession of the supreme court decision in the case of the liquor question.

It is a matter of record in the department of justice that this same lawyer appeared in New York on Saturday, December 13, and engaged in negotiations to speculate on Wall Street on the United States Food Products stock on the dry decision. It was at that time that Chief Flynn was notified of the alleged speculation.

Chief Flynn had been at Washington on the previous Sunday and had there questioned a lawyer employed in the State Pacific stock on Monday, December 15, the day that the supreme court handed down its adverse decision in the oil lands case. This decision also indicated that he had

Government Grants Indefinite Postponement Because of Good Faith of Miners

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 16.—The "good faith" efforts of officials of the United Mine Workers in bringing about restoration of normal conditions in the coal industry, the government today granted indefinite postponement of the contempt of court proceedings against the union's leaders when the case was called in federal court today.

Two federal attorneys of the defendants were continued to be called up by the government or the defendants on "notice."

Attorney General Cummings, however, will not appear in federal court next Monday to face charges of contempt of court. In the charge of the government's attorneys of the United Mine Workers, the Kansas miners were referred to as "his strike."

He explained that the Kansas strike was the first of the kind since the action against Howatt came as a distinct surprise.

EXPORT FINANCE BILL IS PASSED

Makes It Possible for American to Get Cash for Goods Sold to Foreigners

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The export finance bill introduced by Senator Charles McNary of Oregon and passed by congress today, when the senate adopted the conference committee report, adopted by the house about two weeks ago. There was no roll call.

By amending the federal reserve act this measure provides for the retention of export proceeds to finance the export business of the United States.

No Chances for Booze Till Peace Declared

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—That congress will give no relief to the dealers and owners of liquor stocks in the event of a peace treaty which they are anxious to sell was shown by the decisive vote in the house agriculture committee sitting on the Gallivan bill for prohibition of liquor.

IRISH PAPERS ARE SUPPRESSED

Freeman's Journal and Telegraph of Dublin Are Suspended by British Authorities

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The suppression of the Freeman's Journal at Dublin by the British authorities was brought up in parliament this afternoon. Mr. O'Connell moved to have more adjournment of sessions in order to call the attention of the house to the suppression of the newspapers.

BANDIT VILLA DESCRIBED AS ALMOST LIKE HUMAN BEING BY CAPTURED AMERICAN RANCHMAN

Fred Hugo, Released After Several Days With Notorious Rebel, Returns to America No Worse for Wear—Conceives Admiration for Cruel Despot.

EAGLE PASS, TEX., Dec. 16.—Fred Hugo, American ranchman, captured in the raid by Villa soldiers on Mustang last Wednesday, arrived here today after being held captive by the followers of Pancho Villa for six weeks.

Hugo declared he suffered no hardships during the time he was held prisoner by the followers of the Mexican bandit chief and added that he "had no reason to complain" of the manner in which he was treated.

After I treated the one of the party," Hugo declared, "and became very friendly, I was allowed to go to the kitchen. I was having a five-day stay of board rendered in a local hotel when he had me brought back to the camp."

Hugo was somewhat reticent about what happened from then on in the time of his release, explaining that he was released upon giving his promise he would not tell where he was taken or under what conditions he had been liberated. Pressed for further details as to "what happened" Hugo said:

"I opened my eyes and found myself staring into a gun. One of my ranch hands had stood the fellow's eyes on me. They had rounded him up on the outside and, holding a gun at his head, compelled him to bring me to the camp."

"He had several talks with him during my period of captivity. During one of these talks he told me he did not believe in a military government. He hoped to establish a civil government in Mexico."

Prosecution Rests in I. W. W. Trial

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 16.—The prosecution rested today in the trial in the Kansas City, Kan., federal court of 20 I. W. W. charged with conspiracy against the United States government.

The defense opened its case with the defense which it hopes to prove that the I. W. W. is a legalized society with no aim in its ambitious to help the wage earner.

An interesting class of expert testimony appears imminent in the trial due to an unexplained letter threatening to blow up pipe lines at Augusta, Kan., and by which the government hopes to show many of its charges of sabotage by a definite expert of intent.

ALL COAL WHILE GO AS BUILT

Situation Is So Important That Railroad Administration Has Off Restrictions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The coal situation has become so important that the railroad administration has issued orders for all coal to go as built.

DEMANDS MADE AGAINST JAPAN

China Have Grievance, but Japan Not Guilty Because of Boycotts of Her Goods

TOKIO, Dec. 16.—China today demanded that the Japanese government as a result of the recent disorders at Cheo-Foo, where Japanese marines were landed. They follow:

- Withdrawal of the Japanese consular officials apologues for the killing of Chinese students; compensation for the relatives of the victims; punishment of offenders; prohibition on carrying arms by the Japanese; punishment of the Japanese police chief who caused the trouble; removal of a Chinese boat on Japanese goods there is said to be little likelihood that the demands will be met.

INFORMATION STARTS AN INVESTIGATION

Southern Pacific Stock Was Plunged for Insiders on Oil Land Decision

There upon began the unraveling of a web of delicate circumstances through detective operations in New York and Washington. These men were shadowed and several dispatch records were made of their conversations in rooms at the Pennsylvania hotel in New York and at the New Willard in Washington.

The men involved were supplied with plenty of money and lived splendidly. They were seen in New York, in Houston and living joy parties to their friends, some of whom were actresses and army aviators.

The story told by my informant of these men was as follows: They asserted that they had been receiving advice from the Supreme court over a long period of time and had made considerable money speculating on oil land decisions. They were, however, dissatisfied with their profits, they said; and their object in dealing with my informant was to induce him to secure for them a long line of credit with a first Wall street speculator. They maintained that they were trading about a "clean up" on their information and they believed that they could make a fortune in one day speculating on the near future. They claimed that they could get any decision of the court in advance by ten twenty-four hours in advance of the public.

They told the name of the man in the Supreme court who was furnishing them with the information was a man who had a lawyer employed in the department of justice who was able to produce decisions from the secretary to one of the members of the court.

All this information and much other interesting news was given to Judge Ames and his detectives. The possibility of a leak seemed always to be present in the department of justice officials. In my original talk with Chief Justice White at his home, 1175 Rhode Island avenue, he explained:

It is impossible that such a thing could happen. No man would be permitted to interfere with the processes of the nation's highest court. For more than twenty years I have been in the department of justice and I know how to prevent a leak. It is impossible that such a thing could happen. No man would be permitted to interfere with the processes of the nation's highest court. For more than twenty years I have been in the department of justice and I know how to prevent a leak.

There have been many rumors of leaks in the past, but I have investigated them and all but one were disproved. In the instance of the unfortunate man was rumormongered. He was a minor attaché of the court. That man was brought before me as the president of the United States at White House and made to confess a white gull. A few days later he died under mysterious circumstances and I have been led to believe that the wretched fellow committed suicide. The rumor of the subpoena case is a sacred thing. If it is being tampered with by anyone, particularly a newspaper, the matter shall be referred to the bottom and the guilty shall be punished.

Justice White at one time was so affected by his own case concerning the alleged imposition on his court that he went.

It was when I told the chief justice a presumably minor circumstance to the effect that my informant had feared that the recent decision in the Southern Pacific Oil Land case had been rushed through the court for a decision at the last moment that the chief justice became convinced that my information was accurate. He said:

"The decision in the Southern Pacific case was rushed through at the last moment, but no one could know it but the supreme court or our confidential detail the operations of the court and the fact that the Southern Pacific case had been rushed through and was of high significance. I had told the chief justice that my informant had received from the Washington speculators advance information on numerous decisions, but I bear from Judge Ames that some of this alleged leak material was inaccurate. However, these inaccurate cases were minor cases and the fact remains that on the liquor case which offered great speculative possibilities the information proved to be of the highest quality who gave the information was in a position in Wall street to speculate.

PITTSFIELD, Mo., Dec. 15.—How college girl hit her way into a sargeant-major's heart through a war sweater was learned here after three hours' courtship hearing known here as Don William Butler arrived with a southern belle.

A southern woman was an athletic war knitter and when she turned out her twenty-fifth sweater, "just for fun" as her name and address, to the inside.

Young Butler was at that time sent the regular army in France and the sargeant-major was in the States and in a correspondence, and when the young soldier was discharged from order in war to be a soldier.

Result: an elopement from college, wedding bells in Washington, and young telegrams to all the family. Mr. Butler is twenty-six and is due today.

THREE INDUSTRIAL FACTORS

Just and proper division of profits between capital, labor and management, the three factors which make the success of any people confronting this country in the settlement of questions of industrial unrest," says an economist.

The classification is a useful one to bear in mind. Most people seem to consider only two industrial factors, capital and labor, and some consider only one.

There are workmen who refuse to admit that capital has any claim at all, and there are capitalists just as prejudiced and blind in regard to the claims of labor—which by general agreement of modern thinkers are really superior to those of capital.

Labor, however, is particularly prone to ignore the contribution made to industry by the third class mentioned, the "managers." Some members of the "working class" identify business management loosely with "capital," though the latter is properly speaking, nothing more than inert dollars which are useless and unproductive until some business executive puts them to work.

And there is a tendency, all too prevalent among workmen, to regard men employed in managerial positions as unproductive and unnecessary.

The fact is, of course, that management or superintendence is just as vital in industry as either capital or labor, and that both capital and labor are helpless without it.

Neither dollars nor hands can be employed without the manager who brings the two together and makes them productive. His work is harder than that of the average manual worker. His work is productive in the true sense, none the less because it is mental instead of physical and visible.

There is no more absurd or dangerous fallacy than that of the ignorant workman that the executive sitting in the office "does nothing," and that the manual worker himself is the only "real producer."

That is what the Russian bolshevik thought—and look at Russian industry today, with production crippled, industrial cities emptied, and the workmen, with all their liberty and their stage-manicure, living in abject misery.

MUST LIFT TAXES OR BUSINESS WILL NOT PLAY

Morris F. Frey, tax consultant of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, discussing needed tax reforms in the current issue of the Trust company's magazine, says largely increased production is vital to the solution of the present unstable social conditions, and adds, "The business concerns cannot be expected to accept the hazards of extensive expansion and at the same time pay to the government a large proportion of their profits in the form of excess profits and income tax."

Doubtless the tax consultant has the matter figured out right. Big business knows increased production is necessary to the solution of the world's social problems. Big business knows the government is in sad need of funds to pay the obligations incurred in the prosecution of a successful war. That big business hangs back. It cannot be expected to be patriotic, to stabilize social conditions, to increase production, because the government must needs take a large proportion of their profits in the form of excess profits and income taxes.

If the government would just repeal these obnoxious measures, big business would play—but who would play?

WAR-TIME PROHIBITION HELD VALID Decision of the United States supreme court yesterday upholding the validity of the Volstead act, summed up in few words, is as follows: The enactment was made under the constitutional war powers of the congress, and was valid when passed. The war is not over. Therefore the law is operative, and will so continue until the official declaration of peace.

Referring to the possibility of a crusade against tobacco like that against alcohol, "Life" offers this comment: "But tobacco hangs on to friends. It may not be any too healthy and may contribute to the highest development of the human experiment, but millions and millions of people find their pleasure in it materially supported by it. It costs money, but workmen do not blow in their week's earnings on Saturday night in cigar stores."

Von Mackensen has been making a "triumphant" tour of Germany. Those Germans, whatever their doubts, certainly have imagination.

It would be fine, no doubt, to wade in and clean up Mexico. And it would mean more war taxes.

THE USES OF LAW.

If all men were perfect there would be no need of law. Every man would be a law unto himself. His neighbor would be as he loves himself, requires no statute to guide his footsteps in the paths of righteousness. Likewise and liberty do not go together. Laws are the bulwarks of liberty, under them men are supposed to have the liberty necessary to human happiness. The purpose of law is to prevent men from doing that which only they interfere with the rights of his fellow man, says Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

The opposite of law is anarchy, and anarchy is as well as human progress now presenting an example of what anarchy will do for a people. It is a hell on earth. It is found in Russia. Some revolutions have been made recently by B. E. Simmons, a former representative of the American department of commerce in Russia, before a senate investigating committee at Washington here he said that laws are those that is read in the American family.

"Here's, heavy hangs over your head." The proposed law requiring every aviator to give a bond of $5,000 to cover possible damages he might do to persons and things may serve in some slight degree to prevent the apprehension of those who are afraid that some time an airplane will float down and perch on their shoulder.

Dear Editor: Please publish as before: MISTY MOUNTAIN

In this western land I've found something truly wonderful and profound. Somewhere in this land of mine I've found, and marked by time, "The Misty Mountain."

High it rose to seek the flood. Behind the thunder roared the tide. Hissing in the mist of morn I see Misty Mountains (as I call them).

Backed by grayish dawn—such as a'er you looked upon; that a mountain that is all, Yes, my "Misty Mountain."

Over his slope, a sheepsman's flock—Grass by day, his pride, his stock. And the bleating from a slip—And of buffaloes ruminated. As a mother by her baby's feeble cry.

The a' great sea to see sunrise. Such a' great sea, an eagle's wing. And it's a' great sea, an eagle's wing. I see my "Misty Mountain."

BOY, FIGHTING IN THE DARK, KILLS A "GHOST" ALLAHJAHAD, Dec. 16.—A Burmese boy named Kya, aged fourteen, went out looking for buffalo one evening. He took with him a shah (short sword) for protection. Instead of buffalo he saw a shah (short sword) and, being greatly frightened, he ran away. During his flight he bumped into something which he took to be a "ghost."

MAN DIVERTING UP GOES TO FRANCE FOR DRINK DANIELSON, Conn. Dec. 15.—When a man gets so dry that he actually is dying up, as proved by his loss of forty-five pounds since July 4, it is not to be wondered at that he can find himself since to drink, says Louis Gamlin, who has lived here for years but who is in jail from New Britain, Conn., for drinking on Saturday.

KNOCKOUT IN FIRST ROUND NOT POPULAR

Fans Prefer to Get Little More Battling for Their Money in Championship Bout

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(Special) Knockout in title bouts has not been frequent, and it goes without saying that they are highly unsatisfactory from the standpoint of the spectators.

In modern pug history during a period of the last thirty years or so, there have been a few one-round victories in bouts that are mentioned in the pages who answered the bell.

Back in 1895 Joe Walcott, undoubtedly one of the best who ever lived, lost to Matty Mathews. That is the only time when he met Matty Mathews was a packed fighter. So was Walcott. The latter was a bit crazy and pulled a wallop that carried untroubled attention in the walk-over when the stage was set. He was able to land it fairly. Mathews and Walcott met for the world's welter title and less than three minutes Walcott had his man down and out, cold as a mackerel.

Peter Maher, who, like Dempsey, had been in a fight through a series of one-round victories, met in the ring with Steve O'Donnell, Joe Goffey, Gus Lambert and Mike Morley. The fight was a draw. In 1898 and 1899 the bout was originally slated for Hot Springs, Ark. Later, owing to a clash with the authorities, it was transferred to the city of Dallas across the border from Langtry, Tex., where the men got together on the night of the fight. Maher was in the best of shape for this battle, but Maher was the worse for wear after being driven from pillar to post by the celebrities of a number of towns. Maher wedded right into his man with the first tap of the gong, dropping him for the first time in his career. Several stiff jolts to the jaw.

In 1907, as a preliminary to the Pittman-Corbett battle at Carson City, Nev., Maher and Bert Foster climbed through the ropes to fight for lightweight honors, and as both were rated among the best men in the world at the time, interest in this preliminary bout was widespread. Maher had one punch that was a derby—a hard right jab that landed each landing of the left jab except the second or two, which was a right-handedly whipped. The fight was a draw, and Maher stopped the canvas for the full nine after little more than a minute of sparring.

George LaPlante, who was knocked out by the original Jack Dempsey with a pivot blow, crawled through the ropes after the battle. He was in a state of collapse, but he only lay long enough to take one of the kid's very choice punches and the count of ten was blown by him.

It was in 1904 that O'Neil, former champion British featherweight, came to this country seeking a fight. O'Neil was heralded as one of the most formidable brawlers of his time. He is well known by the name of "The Terrible" Terry McEvoy, but in the waterloo that he met in the ring, he rushed from his corner, beat down the Britisher's guard with a veritable avalanche of blows, and the famous battle of "The Terrible" was over. In 1902 at Fort Erie Joe Gans disposed of Frank Erne, the "kick" weight champion. In the first round Erne, with his left and right hands to the jaw with his right arm. Erne stopped in to meet him. This happened after Erne had beaten Gans in New York.

George Carpenter, who recently disposed of Joe Herbolt in Italy, was treated another British champion in the same manner. At Glent Bolton, in 1913, Carpenter won the title of the world's champion. He won in four rounds. In December of the same year he gave Wallace a return match in London and disposed of him in one round.

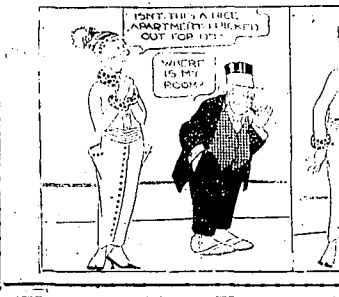

Jack Dempsey, the present world champion, earned the undoubted right to meet Jess Willard for the title when he checked out Fulton under the chin at Newark, N. J. A little over a year ago and saved the last obstacle from his pathway.

He was a knock-out in the first round. He was one sore bird.

BRINGING UP FATHER

A one-round knockout that resulted locally occurred in 1913 when Art Polky met Lanner McCarry at Calgary, Alberta. McCarry was just blowing forth as a likely opponent for Jack Johnson when he met his unfortunate, for he never floated him with a blow to the jaw.

Holland to Pump Zuyder Zee Bone Dry

BREITENBURG, Dec. 15.—(Special) Holland is to pump the historic Zuyder Zee. The work is expected to occupy 23 years and cost over $75,000,000, says the Associated Press. A great dam, or embankment, is to be built, half across the north end of the sea from Wieringen, in North Holland, to Plasmas, in Friesland. It will have a length of nearly fifteen miles, thus making it the longest of any embankment in the world.

Some five months prior to the war the Dutch government put in hand the long projected scheme for draining and reclaiming the historic Zuyder Zee. But during the upheaval the project was dropped. The canal is to be built of sand and rubble and stone, and not with concrete. Communication with the North sea will be maintained by 13 large sluice gates and a couple of locks for shipping. The construction of the embankment is expected to occupy nine years.

Within the embankment four areas, known as the northwestern, northern, western, northeastern and southeastern areas, are to be drained and reclaimed, each of which is to be appropriated to the province which it adjoins. These reclaimed areas will have an area of 1,470,780, 1,272,125 and 252,000 respectively, or a total of 3,000,905 acres, which will be 1,400,000 in clay and sandy soil, 1,400,000 in peat, and 1,920,000 in sand. This means that 1,920,000 square miles will be wrested from the sea and added to the kingdom of Holland.

HOT LUNCHES ARE SERVED TO STUDENTS

Girls of Sharnock School Know How to Cook and Serve Food—Speedily and Well

Under the supervision of Community Leader Mrs. Mark Dean, the children of Sharnock school is serving lunch during the school recess hours.

This work was elected on the farm bureau program of work for the winter at a community meeting and later Mrs. Mark Dean was appointed leader of the girls of the school at the home of Mrs. Dean when the Home Extension Society gave these girls instruction in the fundamentals of soup making.

Last week these girls served for the first time. Two of them take turns at cooking and serving for a week. This is served cafeteria style and the whole process of serving and clearing away took only one-half an hour for the 25 pupils.

Mrs. Dean has already demonstrated her ability as a leader; for the first time she has been in the way they handle the work.
