TWIN FALLS QUINTET HANDS DEFEAT TO RIVAL BUHL FIVE

First Game of Season Played Before Big Crowd
Here Shows Strong Possibilities In Local Team—Score 48—22

Twin Falls basketballers are making their lips today over the success they had last evening when the Blue and White defeated with the Orange and Black Buhl, crushing the enemy to earth as near as they could get to the earth. It was no different, in a different school gym stood between Buhl and quintet, as a Buhl five. A score of 48 to 22 resulted in the triumph of the Twin Falls quintet last night. The game was a hard fought one. In the first half the Blue and White Buhl by the way, suffered a badly scuffed knee. The game was totally a different affair last night when to look at the ordinary looking still and was writing on the floor with his bare feet. At that, the game was rather slow and uninteresting to the spectators.

Both teams started playing fast, although the Buhl team resulted in that way, about the middle of the game. After the time when the Twin Falls five pulled out and together and displayed some good stuff, though it was hindered by a frequent substitution. "Faded" Sale, "Faded" and "Faded" had a hard time when he saw the game only started and the other quintet. From then on it was a hard fought game. The Buhl team, which had the count was 24 to 9. While the building plan of the local post was not what some of the members were desiring to have a permanent home and a structure to inaugurate a constructive building program.

The meeting closed with a prayer and the singing of the national anthem.

If people realized how harmful common tea is, how injurious tannin is to both stomach and nerves—they wouldn't allow it on their tables.

What's the use anyway? Good tea costs less per cup because it has so much of the real tea-flavor.

So why drink common tea with its coarse vegetable flavor and harsh tannin taste, when fine tea costs so much less?

THE old-time pack-bearer could carry a hundred pounds ten miles a day.

The railroad is the modern pack-bearer. For every employee it carries 2,000 times as much.

Back of each railroad worker there is a $10,000 investment in tracks and trains and terminals, with steam and electricity harnessed like a great beast of burden.

Without this mighty transportation machine the railroad worker could do no more than the pack-bearer. But with it he is enabled to earn the highest railroad wages paid in the world, while the country gains the lowest-cost transportation in the world.

The modern railroad does as much work for half a cent as the pack-bearer could do for a full day's pay.

The investment of capital in transportation and other industries increases production, spreads prosperity and advances civilization.

To enlarge our railroads so that they may keep pace with the Nation's increasing production, to improve them so that freight may be handled with less and less human effort—a constant stream of new capital needs to be attracted.

Under wise public regulation the growth of railroads will be stimulated, the country will be adequately and economically served, labor will receive its full share of the fruits of good management, and investors will be fairly rewarded.

THE MARKED-UP SHOES

"What is the most important consideration in the country today? Possibly the Peace Treaty. But right along with it and of almost equal importance ranks the price of clothes. Everybody has to wear them. Many people are engaged in making and selling them. The ready-to-wear industry ranks second to the steel trade in amount of money handled in a year.

This story, therefore, is pertinent. The incident happened in another city, but might have happened almost anywhere. A young woman who teaches school and has to have sensible, well-wearing shoes, bought a pair in November for $14.50. She felt abused, but she had to have the shoes. These were good ones, and she paid the price. She was given a ten-dollar bill for Christmas, and with the advertisements of great after-Christmas sales in mind, she thought she might be able to stretch almost over the price of another pair. She approached the window of the store she had previously patronized. There in the window were shoes identical with those she had on her feet. They had been marked down for clearance to $10.00. She got a shiso and decided that perhaps a pair home in the street could be half-sold once more. She could wait another month or six weeks for a new pair, and meantime, something might happen to the country.

More and more men and women everywhere are deciding to wait for the right shoes and see if something may not happen to the country. If a few millions of them will decide thus—and stick to it—it will not take eight weeks to prick some of the bubbles.

ARTIST'S COWS

Many questions have been raised by the incident that occurred at the state agricultural fair of Minnesota last fall. Are serial cattle more artistic than pure bred cattle? Can a painted cow be both artistic and beautiful? Does the success of an artist's work rest upon the approval of fellow-artists, or upon the approval of persons who know nothing about art as such but who are thoroughly familiar with the painter's subject? Minnesota may arrive at some conclusion before its next state fair. Who knows?

The whole problem was brought up by some paintings of cattle which hung on the walls of the fair buildings. These pictures were by a well-known artist, so the report goes. He was as satisfied with his work as an artist ever is, and the general public seemed pleased enough. Not so the Manitowish farmers who raise cattle. "Said one: 'You can tell the Jerseys are Jerseys, but that's all I can say about the paintings. There's not a cow in the wall that would give a cent coming up to the standards of the male. The artist does not know good cattle when he sees them. All the cows out there on the hill are scrubs.'" Other farmers felt the same way about it. They had lodged a formal protest with the director of the fair's art department.

At any rate, it is encouraging to know that farmers know the difference between scrub cows and first-class cows. It is encouraging to know that a state's milk standard demands the raising of good cows. There's something to be said, too, for the farmers' wish that only examples of the best be held before the public eye in pictorial form.

CANINE REPARATION

The latest development in the war-reparation scheme is to make good, before 25,000 dogs stolen from occupied French territory. The plan is made by the French Ministry of Agriculture, to supplement the demands already made, and allowed, for horses, cattle and other domestic animals. It is not expected that the animals normally taken can be returned, save in exceptional cases. The owners, however, insist on dogs "just as good."

If the reparation commission upholds this unprecedented demand, it will certainly create an odd situation. The shepherd dogs and hunting dogs, perhaps, can be replaced in kind, including those stolen by the Crown Prince and his noble associates. But what can Germany do about the missing French pointers? She might replace them with Weimaraners; but will any Frenchman want a dachshund?

At last a ray of hope! The steel trust has decided not to raise prices. Of course, steel prices are quite high enough now; but a similar consideration doesn't seem to cut-much figure in most of the other industries.
