THE PROFITTEERING STATE OF MIND.

It is easy to expect too much from the restriction of the meat packers to the meat-packing business. This is the last and apparently the biggest of the trust-squabbles but it will not necessarily have much immediate effect on the price of its products to the consumer.

Benefits there will surely be, but mostly, no doubt, indirect and future rather than direct and immediate. The packers were in a hurry to dominate the whole food-surveying business of the United States. It is contended that neither they nor any other group will be allowed to get the nation in the grip of such a monopoly.

Business men are not alone responsible. Workmen are in the profiteering game, too, demanding more pay than the added cost of living would entitle them to. Capitalists want a higher rate of interest. Professional men are not averse to boosting their incomes so as to leave a bigger margin at the end of the year than they would have expected under the old standards.

This greed-psychology must be changed before much relief can be expected from the packers' settlement, or any other settlement. And it takes time to change a national state of mind.

GERMANY, RUSSIA, JAPAN.

With the growth of Lenin's power in Russia, there is more talk than ever of the possibility of a future alliance between Germany, Russia and Japan. Such a combination, stretching across Europe and Asia from the North Sea to the Pacific, and including eventually 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 people, might prove us menacing to the world's peace as did the Central Powers. The idea may not be so fanciful as it appears at first suggestion.

Many leaders of Germany, though they have always maintained that Germany's natural sphere of growth and development lay in Russia and Siberia. Before the war German business interests were steadily extending their influence eastward. They are at it again, more eagerly than ever.

Meanwhile Japan continues to turn her eyes westward. She would like, doubtless, to control all eastern Asia. Limited in China, she tends more than ever to advance her political and business rule in Siberia. She may meet the Germans in that direction eventually and either compromise with them or ally herself with them.

It would not necessarily mean the Bolshevizing of either Germany or Japan. It might mean the restoration of monarchist rule in Russia. Lenin is a monarch now, as much as the czar ever was. Though his empire is smaller than the czar's, it is imaginable that Germany, Russia and Japan might form a vast union in which imperialism would confront the democracy of western Europe and America.

Even a trend in that direction is disturbing to the peace of the world. If there is really anything to it, how can the trend be stopped? There are two suggestions, calling for friendly trade relations with Germany and friendly political relations with Japan.

If the other powers refuse to trade with Germany for their mutual benefit, naturally Germany will be thrown back on Russia, and will seek closer relations with that country, and eventually with Japan. If the other powers consent, Japan may, necessarily, or treat her in a way that she considers unjust, Japan will naturally be thrown into the possible friendship of Russia and Germany. "Divide and conquer" is probably as good a rule in this case as it is in any other.

What is to be the future line of development of the motor car? It is a big, practical question, of interest to every designer and manufacturer, and to every prospective user of an automobile.

William B. Stout, who has won distinction as an aircraft engineer, gives some illuminating suggestions based on aircraft lessons learned during the war. The motor car of the future, he says, should have these general characteristics:

"It should be a closed car, carrying five passengers, and weighing only about 900 pounds, with a small engine of six or more cylinders, giving 30 to 40 miles on a gallon of gasoline, riding more easily than the present heavy-weight cars, and costing no more than any present car of equal passenger capacity and performance.

These are not at all impossible, he maintains. The engine may be lightened by being cooled by air as well as reducing the size of the cylinders. Fifteen horsepower will be enough for the purpose, and the weight need not be more than eight pounds per horsepower, or 120 pounds for the complete engine with starting equipment. The top need not weigh more than 200 pounds. Weight may be eliminated in any parts of the car by a more general substitution of wood for steel. Airplane construction, he holds, has proved the superiority of wood for many purposes, because of its combined strength and elasticity.

Such a car, he says, will not only be fairly cheap in first cost and wonderfully economical to run, but it can be taken care of by the owner with little effort and little skill. The filling will be almost wholly automatic, but there will be no pressure valves or underinflated joints. The outside design will be such that it can be kept clean by a minimum of washing.

It all sounds too good to be true. A million automobile-users will sigh, "Bring us such a car." Maybe the experts will really produce it, before long.

THE WRESTLING PASTOR.

A new pastor recently came out of the remote West to a church in a city east of the Mississippi. He did not know anyone in his new congregation, and they were equally unacquainted with him.

Did the new minister wait for the church to give welcoming reception? Did he propose a general hand-shaking session or suggest an afternoon tea? No, indeed.

This energetic preacher intends to know his people better than any of the usual methods permit. He said, "Fix up a little wrestling bout. That'll be a good way to let me meet the gang." And so it comes about that the new pastor and a lucky volunteer of his church are to meet at the men's community club in a wrestling bout. Admission is free.

No doubt the young men will listen to his sermons with greater respect and attention after he has thrown several of them a few times. The news of his clean sportsmanship and his good fellowship will spread to wives and parents and neighborhoods; and if he has any of the other qualifications of a good pastor, that community may consider itself blessed in having a real man at the head of its church.

Refugees from Russia say that the Bolsheviki are torturing and killing bourgeois, even crucifying them and burning them alive. Economic theory can be as cruel as religious theory, used to be.

Struggling under the same old load of debts? The only way to ludge it is to lug out.

Good Will is a Valuable Asset. —good will is that indefinable asset that inclines people to trade at a certain place. It is a valuable asset. Unfortunately few business men appreciate its value. —a good name cannot be established in a short time. It takes months and sometimes years. —no business man can forget the future. It is a grave mistake to "clean up" today in a way that bars the door to trade tomorrow. It is too much like getting ready money today by putting a mortgage on one's home. The money may last but a day; while the mortgage sticks like a porous plaster. The extra profit made from a few questionable transactions soon vanishes, and the lost reputation can never be regained. —a cornerstone does not make a building, but the displacement of one may wreck it. An honest transaction does not necessarily establish a good reputation, but leave the honesty out of a single deal and it may destroy the good name that it required years to build. We place a high value on the good will of our customers that greatly over-rides any profit that we may make from a single transaction.

GOLFER VARDON NOT OPPOSED TO STYMIE

Falls in With Anyone Who Believes in Observing Rule.

Very keen that game be played according to rules—standard that question of balling in is not worth bother.

"I am not a rabid fanatical lover of the stymie," said Harry Vardon recently in a statement regarding the question of balling in. "Indeed, whenever I meet anyone who thinks that the rule which has allowed a fall in with his ball is inadvisable."

"The trouble is to find anyone who believes in the stymie. My experience in England is that twenty-four out of twenty-five golfers—this is a careful estimate and not a mere statement at random—oppose the stymie. The ground, then, would not be playing stymies, or words to that effect. In Scotland the position is just about the same, so far as I have been able to judge. This in itself is a strong argument for expunging the stymie from the game, except of course when you lay one yourself."

"Personally I am very keen that golf should be played strictly in accordance with the rules, and it does help toward that end to see this stymie."

Harry Vardon.

While rule dated day after day, it weakens a principle and passes the way to other abuses of the law. In addition, I cannot see that the stymie is a desirable feature of the game save that it has helped it to tradition."

"In the international tournament in which Taylor and I met Brand and Hunt for 4000 (Hend stymie) was one of the errors at Trosen when I was about ten yards from the pin. I picked straight on the ball and holed out."

"The question of a standard ball has also come up recently. There are two questions worth considering: Is the scheme workable and is it worth while? Personally I am satisfied that the answer is not worth the slightest bother."

NOTES FROM ABBEY STATE NORMAL SCHOOL

ABBOTTS, Jan. 15.—Miss Mary McCormick left at the end of the term to teach in American Falls, Idaho, and Miss Clara Belle Savarino has accepted a position in Kimberly.

The enrollment in new forty-day courses is higher than last year in spite of the demand for teachers that constantly tempts students to go to work.

The education department reports an enrollment of forty-one correspondence students, mostly in the educational departments.

Several music lovers of the faculty heard Lucy Gates in concert last night at the University of Idaho.

Acting President Bockel left January 15th for Portland to meet with the committee in southern Idaho who were appointed at the State Association to promote the interests of education.

WORLD WAR VETERANS POINT OUT BIG PURPOSE OF ORGANIZATION

The World War Veterans is the original Ex-Service Men's Organization, organized nine days after the signing of the Armistice.

The Minnesota state organization maintains headquarters at 214 Nicollet street, Minneapolis. Its state officers are as follows:

Edward Lee, President; D. E. Harland, Vice President; E. J. Harland, Treasurer; Dr. J. I. Kirtz, Recording Secy.; Carl O. Larson, Business Representative.

The following statement is issued by authority of the organization:

The great War was essentially a War of Nations, not a War of races. These Nations matched their will in operation calling upon their citizens to do their personal work if it meant with the prosecution of the war, as if it did not, then in make it more necessary, in addition to this call of service, each nation invoked in the struggle urged every one of its citizens to do his or her part.

That the services of civilians were of immense value during the war has been attested to by the allied government to make in any other prompt necessary. To the teachers called to help classify the draft questionnaires the United States said that should the United States in the field and the four minute men who spent their evenings studying the gospel of national co-operation and appealing for sacrifice from every person, their work was appreciated, and the women and children who labored
