CREDULITY IS STRAINED

The president of the Massachusetts Retail Shoe Merchants' association, speaking at a dinner of the Boston Boot and Shoe club, announced that the great middle class in the life of America has found that it cannot pay the high prices of shoes, and as a result something must be done.

The New York Tribune requests the organization of the League of American Manufacturers of the middle classes, formed to out-pace.

And who will ever believe that the great American middle class, the goat of all industrial strife, the butt of all profiteering, the dog on whom all experiments are tried, the sacrificial lamb in all brutal offerings of modern days, the patient ultimate consumer upon whom all interests prey, the rubber-stamp citizen, whom all politicians exploit and all reformers who ask, and our voters tremble under the pressure of this emotional crisis—who, let us whisper, will ever believe that a worm so fat and soft will ever lift anything but the other cheek, a soul so supine ever revolt?

It's a time of great things, we admit; these are the days when anything might happen. But that the middle classes would, could or should organize or protest—why, gentlemen, there's a limit even to the new standards of credence.

MODERN PRISON SHOPS

The warden of a Michigan penitentiary has a hobby. It is that every prison should be equipped with modern machinery and its workshops kept abreast of the times. He has two reasons for this theory.

The first is that every improvement in methods of manufacture lessens the cost of production; and, since the state is operating a workshop, it should employ the most economical methods for getting the greatest results.

His second reason is the welfare of the prisoners. A man who earns a trade in prison, working with old-fashioned tools, or doing anything by hand what is done in the modern shop by machinery, is fitted to find employment at his trade when he emerges from prison, and must take his place more among his fellows. Mr. Burtin, the warden referred to, feels that there is a great advantage both to the man and to the state in having the prisoner, when he becomes a free man, ready to take up work as it is being done by the most advanced shops. He thinks much of the discouragement which turns these men again to drifting and crime could be overcome by the simple means of keeping them up to date in working methods.

There is much to be said for this contention. Undoubtedly there has been a tendency of late years to relax too much in disciplinary measures, but there is no incompatibility between punishment which involves labor and the performance of labor in the most advantageous way.

WHY TEMPT THE BURGLAR?

The chief officer of a little city was sending his annual report to the mayor. Among other things, he said: "I wish I could draw the attention of citizens to the necessity of finding a more secure place than their own homes for leaving their valuables and other belongings when they are absent from home. We had one burglarious night last year where there were $3,000 worth of valuables stolen from this place."

There is no need to desire the burglar by putting the burden under the oppressor or in the home. He knows all about the cracked safe and the old trunk and the sewing basket and the corner of the library rug. That is his job. He knows more out-of-the-way places than any honest citizen does.

Moreover, at any one of the Twin Falls banks a safe deposit box can be rented which will guarantee safety for not only the valuables, but for other valuables which ought not to be left around the house as a temptation for the festive house breaker, and which you cannot afford to lose should the demon fire suddenly break out and destroy your place of abode.

Don't you look closely at the safe, and you find he's really a fellow.

HER DISCIPLINE

By JACK LAWTON.

Stanton, riding village-ward for his day's amuse, saw the automobile coming toward him at a clipping pace down the country road. He had just time to throw a glance at the machine as it whirled before the machine was upon him, pushing with a great force toward him at the death.

When Stanton arose, he was not unharmed, the girl, who impatiently awaited proceedings, bent again to the wheel and although she could not see of dust. He had been too confused to note either number or make of the flying auto and his flooding view of the girl's face, as she bent her head, was too indistinct to remember.

But of what use? His study number was muddled as he forced it out of the ditch, and his own bones were lashed and in their place, indignation was at first his overwhelming emotion.

"This automobile of the factory should be locked up like any other car," he declared, "and the inventor of it should be a broken-up realization of pain come over him, with which I should have been punished, and I am thinking about it."

"I guess I've been hurt," said Stanton. "A young woman drove her car on to me, and she drove me back to my shack in the woods."

"A young woman in a big grey car," the man replied, "that factory car, the millionaires' daughter. Think she took the liberty to do that. No matter how rich she is, she ought to be punished."

"The idea! I send a fellow right up from the village to drive you home, and to do that."

"The fellow" left Stanton's ranch at the opening of the wood and in a half hour, while Stanton lay in bed, he went through the forest to his log cabin home. When Stanton had with difficulty prepared his own evening meal, he was exhausted upon a bed by the window. It was here that he watched the sun rise after a sleep of the night, and in the morning, he found a note pinned to his pillow.

"The different types of womanhood in the factory," Stanton mused, "ought to be working for a livelihood."

As Stanton reflected he endeavored to recall the woman's face, but the effect was unavailing. A step sounded, hurried by the pine needles before the door, and he saw a girl's figure appear in the opening.

"Good-morning," she said, hesitating at the man's appearance of liveliness. "I have come to see you further about the wood that I realized, and just when it was becoming too heavy I saw your note. May I please, have a drink of water?"

"Certainly," Stanton responded, "if you will help yourself. I had that in mind, but I was so tired I forgot it."

"Indeed?" asked the girl. She came into the room, gazed curiously at the picture frame, "You are ill, and alone?"

"I have a fever," Stanton answered. "I was hit by an automobile yesterday, and I did not know until I returned here."

Quickly the girl came forward, tossing her hair up in a chair. "First, I will get something for you to eat," she said. "Where do you keep your food?"

As she searched the wall cupboard, Stanton further indicated the girl's genuine, charming face. "You know," she asked presently, "the person who ran into you?"

Stanton frowned. "I learned," he replied, "that she was one of that irresponsible class of women who consider only the gratification of their own wishes, without any regard for others."

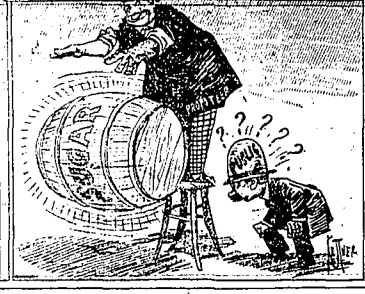

"You talk like a book," the girl said, smiling. "I write books," she answered truthfully. "That's what I do out here for a living. 'Working your own book.'"

"I have that," she said, "in preference to being dictated to by you." "And someone will write up that 'working your own book' as a horrible example," Stanton objected. "She should be the model. What punishment is the payment of a salary to her? If, indeed, indeed, she might be made to work out her own book."

"You think that would help?" asked the girl, who was leaning over the bed. "Just how?" she asked, freely. "Does one build a fire to make oneself a lamp? I have tried to do that, but it won't work. I'm going home to get my shining disk."

"I'm going to try your advice. Will you let me work out to three or four books?" Stanton asked. "I'll take your books," she said, "and I'll take your money, but I'll take your books. I'll take your money, but I'll take your books. I'll take your money, but I'll take your books."

The highest price for the day was paid by William McClasters to C. A. McClasters for Swiss Miss, an Imperial cow bred by Oliver DeWitt of England. WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Congress is divided on a strictly party line over the Sims-Dawkins controversy and inquiry. Republicans welcome the investigation, they say because it shows how the administration has entangled the country while the Democrats insist the opposition party will derive slight benefits from the affair.

Representative Claude Kitchin, Democrat from North Carolina, declared the Republicans would get no political ammunition from the Sims-Dawkins dispute.

"It is the aim of the military arm of the government against the civil authority," he said, "the struggle of the military generals to suppress the political effect on the administration will not amount to anything."

MAN'S BEST AGE

Outfielder Charles Bee.

Binding the latter the better holder of the bat kept him in the lineup and assigned See to a bench-warming role.

See's feat of pouncing out 114 hits in 126 games with Rochester, to lead the league with an average of .385, indicates he is possessed of natural hitting ability and that is what Griffith is looking for. The Howland boy is said to possess many rough edges as a fly-catcher, but he is only about twenty-four years old and if he can maintain a high hitting pace his shortcomings as a fielder can be ironed out with practice.

WORK HARD FOR RECLAMATION SAYS MAJ. REED

Reclamation Man Here to Make Plans For Burley Meeting In Near Future

Major Fred Reed of Pocatello, of the state reclamation association, who is in Twin Falls to make arrangements for the reclamation convention which will take place in Burley on January 27 and 28, states that while it is true to some extent that the success of reclamation is dependent on the interest in it, it is not as true as so many think that there are so many tracts of land that are to be opened.

A great deal is being done for reclamation, according to Mr. Reed, and the work will continue until such a time when there are no more lands to be reclaimed. The Brucena tract, a finely-lying piece of land of 550,000 acres will undoubtedly be opened in the near future but the exact date is at present unknown. There are so many important matters demanding the attention of congress that this matter has not been taken up lately.

Mr. Reed expressed a desire that every reclamation tract opened and that in the shortest time possible so that the present generation may get the benefit of it—at least a part of it. Reclamation of the Brucena will be one of the most important happenings in the west and this should be looked forward to by every one interested in the west's development, is Mr. Reed's belief.

The reclamation conference and the above recently closed at Pocatello which did not stir up interest in reclamation and many people who attended that meeting will look back for the opening of the Brucena and similar tracts. Speakers at that conference emphasized the importance of reclamation and urged that each one do his part toward promoting this great work.

Former Governor Frank I. Gooding, vice president of the state reclamation association, will preside at the Burley meeting, which will be headed by Governor D. W. Davis. Warren Swenson and other reclamation enthusiasts. It will be a conference that, while small when compared to the one at Pocatello, will do much for the reclamation of the desert hands of the west.

MEXICAN RAIDS ARE EXPLAINED

Encounters With Bandits From Across Line

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 19.—When Fred Welch, an American rancher, living at Hidalgo, Mexican frontier, on the American side of the border, was approached by a Carranza officer to pay the return of stock run off his ranch by Mexican bandits, he sent back this word to the Carranzas:

"Capture the bandits and hang them on the other side of the river where every one can see and I will pay a reward."

The cattle were not returned, he writes, and the Carranza committee investigating the Mexican situation.

J. C. McLaughlin, a native of New Zealand who was a member in Colorado of the committee of raids on his ranch following the Mexican revolution and whose Carranza has been president. The latter raid, he said, was conducted by Major Castillo, a Carranza officer, who later was executed on order of his chief.

The Major said Castillo once held him ten days for $2,000 ransom and that Castillo murdered the family of Fred McLaughlin, a rancher living 20 miles west.

W. J. Prosser, who had a store near the Blacklock colony, said that he was "hounded" around considerable when he would not dance.

UNITED STATES ARMY

builder of MEN

TEN years ago it was necessary for the United States Army to argue men into its ranks.

But, today the Army like every other great university, points with pride to its graduates.

Four million of the nation's choicest young men were entrusted to the Army's care.

MOST of them are back in the ranks of industry today; and every parent in America, every employer, every teacher knows that they are better, abler men for their experience.

They stand straight upon their feet, a symbol of physical fitness.

They have learned how to execute orders, and how to give them.

THERE is, in their characters, a maturity beyond their years, a vision and a self-confidence that are fundamentals of success.

The months that they gave to the Army were not lost months; the records of the future will show more rapid progress for them because of the qualities which those months developed.

THE United States Army is open for enlistments today. It wants no inferior applicants; it seeks young men of character and purpose; and it promises, those young men that the term of their enlistment will be fruitful years.

They will come back to civil life in perfect health—their muscles, their eyes, their bearing all evidencing the finest professional care.

IT IS the purpose of the War Department to develop in the American soldier those qualities which are the essentials to success in any trade or business and are the prime requisites in an American citizen.

Congress has appropriated $2,000,000.00 to be used in Educational work in the Army Schools. In many camps and posts men are being trained in the skilled trades and at practically all Army stations, schools are in operation in which the soldier can improve his education.

Through enlistment the United States Army offers opportunities to travel. It provides good food, good clothes and good care. It gives a training which brings health—physical development—mental quickness and self-confidence. It sends you back to civil life better equipped for American citizenship than when you enlisted.

The Fourteen Arms of the Service

The Recruiting Sergeant can give you the information that will help you decide which branch fits you best. In all of them you will get the fine training as a soldier the United States offers all its men—in many branches you can get highly specialized training.

INFANTRY—The men who have made the name of "doughboy" feared and respected throughout the world, welcome you to the comradeship. Fine fellows—good fun and good training in any school at the post you go to.

CAVALRY—When the horses are clamping at the bit and the "yellow legs" mount up and the troop rides forth, there is a thrill that no old cavalryman can ever forget—of your own—a good outdoor life and training for future success.

FIELD ARTILLERY—"Action Front" comes the command—then watch the boys with the red hat sweep into it. A happy outfit—with the dash of mounted service added to interesting work that calls for head and hand. Motors if you wish.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS—Army engineering is known the world over for its excellence, and an enlistment in the Engineers can be the start of a young man's training in the various branches of Engineering and in any of the mechanical and building trades.

COAST ARTILLERY—Living on the sea coast, guarding big cities with big guns, getting time for study and a wide and good technical training; the C. A. C. man is preparing for a peaceful life and good pay and is having a good time while he's learning. The C. A. C. also runs the mobile big gun regiments throughout the country.

AIR SERVICE (including BALLOON CORPS)—The man who gets the early edge in experience with aeroplanes and balloons has a chance to cash in big on his army training. For flying is only in its infancy and its going to be a profitable business for men with the right experience.

ORDNANCE DEPT.—The ordnance is appealing to the studious young American. To wide opportunities for study, it adds a business as well as a technical training.

SIGNAL CORPS—Whether its laying a wire from a reel-car at a gallop or installing a wireless station that will flash its message half around the world, the Signal Corps is there and a man who learns radio telegraph and telephone work in the Signal Corps is always valuable.

TANK CORPS—The man who knows gas motors and tractors or who wants to know them is invited to join the Tanks. Radio, machine gun and ordnance work are all part of the Tank Corps work.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS—The corps that feeds and clothes the Army offers a valuable training for future business. Interesting work for the man who likes horses in the Remount Service.
