AIRPLANE WORK GETS BLACK EYE

Action of House in Turning Down Appropriation for Mail Service is Condemned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Bitter condemnation of the leadership of Representative Frank W. Mondell, of Wyoming, has broken out again among the Republican members in the house. This time their leader had insisted upon denying the aerial mail service over opportunity for extension and also every appropriation to continue the service now installed, his cause prominent Republicans to say they regretted their leadership.

The action of Mondell's will result in failure for the plan of Postmaster General Burdick to extend the aerial mail service to various cities and states. It is possible the Republicans will start an insurgent movement and succeed in overthrowing Mondell on this question at least. They will do so if the senate does not provide for the continuation of the service. It is expected.

Postmaster General Burdick had asked for $3,000,000 for aerial mail service. He reviewed the plan of Postmaster Burdick and insisted that if given the additional $3,000,000 he would effect aerial money savings of more than this amount. He showed that in the service now existing between New York and Washington, and New York and Chicago, sufficient money had been saved to pay the total expense.

Mr. Burdick proposed that four additional lines should be started at once, one of which would connect Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis and St. Louis, and eventually would have provided for extension into New York, a very little matter once the main line between Pittsburgh and St. Louis was established. Through these lines, it would have been possible to put Indiana business in very close touch with the east, because small lines would have been reduced by one-half at least.

The house committee brought in a proposal that only $100,000 should be appropriated, but the moment consideration was given on the floor, it was seen amendments would be offered to provide at least $2,000,000 and probably the $3,000,000 requested by the postmaster general. Sentiment in the house was overwhelmingly in support of the increased appropriations.

With this condition, Representative Tischer of Kansas urged that the entire appropriation should be put on a point of order and this suggestion was supported by Representative

Madden of Illinois, one of the leaders on the Republican steering committee. "Almost immediately," Mr. Madden said, "I rose to the point of order and spoke in behalf of it. It is not to be feared that we will not have the money to carry out the appropriations we put on a point of order. This was the result."

"I have been proud of my membership in this house but I look with shame upon the sentiments expressed here today," said Representative Tischer, Democrat, chairman of the Republican caucus. "The action taken here today not only denies the opportunity of the aerial mail service but also denies the opportunity for development of the airplane industry of this country."

Representative Longworth of Kansas was equally bitter in his condemnation of the action of Mondell. Representative Howell, Republican of Iowa, said no words in his criticism were so words in his criticism as you that if Mondell had been in your shoes and had been in congress he would have frankly brought to use the railroads instead of state churches for mail deliveries.

"If he happens to live thirty years more and remains in congress, he will look back and wonder what inspired him to utterance heard here today," said Mr. Howell.

That Mr. Mondell could not put his action upon the ground of economy was then shown. Representative Byrnes showed that the bill brought in by the Republican committee carried appropriations of $20,000,000 more than was asked by Mr. Burdick and $25,000,000 more than was carried in the bill for the present year. His opponent if Mr. Mondell wanted to economize he should stand by the recommendations of the postmaster general.

OAKLAND MAN EATS ANYTHING SET BEFORE HIM

"Since I commenced taking French oil my troubles have left me and I feel better than I have in eight years," said J. Curry, a well known figure in the city limits, Oakland, who lives at 677 West 12th St., Oakland, Cal.

"I had been troubled with a bad case of indigestion so long that I had become chronic," continued Mr. Curry. "I had a doctor and an apothecary for a while but I ate anything I could get my hands on for hours at a time. I had taken a medicine an hour after I had taken a few blue pills and I would vomit and I would have a bad case in my mouth. I was troubled with indigestion and had to take a medicine almost every day, and one day I had to lay off a whole week. At night I could not sleep but would roll and tumble from one side of the bed to the other and when morning came I felt so tired I had to drag myself off to work."

"I started taking French oil and I will say right here it certainly brought me up to everything the

CURES FOR UNREST

Of proffered cures for the unrest that torments the world there is no end. Peace was to be the panacea to cure the ills of war, but peace administered in most cases is less benevolent than war, for peace doesn't seem to have been very good for what ails us; in fact, it has only disclosed new and more startling ailments.

President Wilson addresses the people more of an insight into government. He thinks if the voters see upon of the whole good round, and learn "where the tick comes from," they will be satisfied.

An eminent pianist—a Russian, by the way—declares music both charms to soothe the troubled populace. "Given a Chopin mazurka, a Beethoven sonata, or a piece of emotionalism by Debussy," he says, "the coal miners would have hesitated about striking."

No doubt he thinks, then, that jazz is to blame for the present St. Vitus dance of the worker; that we are "winding a regular shimmy snake of abandon, tripping the light toe away from the daily task."

The president is a professor of government, and the pianist is a professor of music; each advises a liberal dose of his particular kind of medicine. But there are more professors, and more certain cures, some of which are herewith passed along without the usual fee of prescription.

The butcher may say: "Give every worker a good hot breakfast, two or three times a day, with plenty of ham and eggs for breakfast, and turkey and all the trimmings every Sunday at noon, and he will think more than twice about striking."

The farmer may say: "Let every worker fill his cellar with barrels of meat potatoes and crates of red, shiny apples; put in a corner a couple of bags of furniture and sweet potatoes, and let 'em go to it a couple of times a day and there'll be no unrest."

And the miller says: "Stow away a couple barrels of flour in a dry corner of every worker's home and serve from them according to the housewife's dictates and you'll—say there'll be noth, and to it!"

THE MOB IS WRONG.

This mob violence in whatever form and for whatever purpose a serious menace to constitutional government was declared in a recent address by Hugh L. Nichols of the Ohio Supreme court. "I have heard men discuss violence in one form and condemn it in another. It is a false doctrine," said Justice Nichols. "If offenders of the law would stand their ground, many a scarcely-motivated offender's purpose defeated, but only a very few would be allowed public conscience and respect for law will prevent violence."

Any departure from the Amendments of justice, such as right to trial, right to know the crime one is charged with, is a danger to fair-reading that every citizen should be on guard, said the speaker. This is good talk. Mobs never right wrongs, they only double them. The answer to impatience with slow process of law is not the mob, but the installation of swifter forms of legal procedure or change of personnel in the administration of the courts existing.

Wrong is righted permanently only by processes of thought, by the raising of unaided to ever higher levels of intelligence and justice. The mob is always an unthinking brute which loves every man who joins it. It is a reactionary force, never a progressive one.

THE BUILDING RECORD.

The last Bradstreet's report, compiled up to the end of October, shows a total volume of building operations in 158 cities of $1,021,700,000, which is nearly $200,000,000 more than the best previous showing ever made. The 1919 construction was 150 per cent in excess of that of 1918. The 10 months' construction reported was more than the 12 months' total of the best previous year, 1916.

More striking still is the trend, which is upward in the last ten months. The amount of building in the cities covered, during last October, was nearly six times as much as in the previous October.

Some sections of the building are particularly interesting. Impressive gains are given for the region east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio have led to an impression that the boom was greatest there. Building contracts in that section were awarded in 1919 aggregating the vast sum of $2,900,000,000. Bradstreet's, however, announces that the greatest percentages of gain have been made in the cities of the Northwest and West.

"This was the last year's achievement. It is to be supposed that points to unparalleled activity in the spring and summer—a fact which is stimulating alike to the building industries and the real estate business.

THE 1920 STYLE

"All we, like sheep, are led" either "astray" or in the proper direction. So few people seem really to do their own thinking, so many seem blindly to follow the "style," whatever it may be, that apparently almost anything can be put over on the general public if only a "little" leadership and publicity are forthcoming.

During the war, everyone saved food. It was the style. Nor was any perceptible harm done to the nation's physical well-being. A year ago, when everyone went to a gala entirely from the summer of 1917 to the winter of 1918, have quite got back the former way of life for our menial meals, johnnys and oatmeal porridge. But that's a minor detail.

During the war, everyone saved money. It was the style. Many people went to extremes and saved miserably—that is, they let their personal and home hold needs go unsatisfied in the point which they had to go to the other extreme of unwise laying after the armistice was signed. But that was a minor detail, and by now the adjustment has been made to normal conditions.

During 1919, everyone bought and cluttered with needless abandon. It was the style. There was a minority, the conscientious ones, again, who tried to maintain their balance in the whirl. This time the action of the minority was not a "minor detail." It proved the lesson which shall leave the whole lump. The few proved that balance can be maintained through a period of bewilderment. And "what a human being has done, a human being can do."

"These are the same people who, while the majority talked wildly of 'misfit,' said nothing and saved wad. Then, during the period of the shortage, they had to be woadly. They could not do as they pleased and be happy as well as possible, no matter what the apparent conditions around them.

All we need in 1920 is to make work and thrift and good sense and quiet happiness the style. But every fellow must do his share to keep the style straight.

Color Choices of Tailors When Casting About for Shades That Would Be Desirable.

From the color of the sunset or the color of the clouds, and the fact that brown is rather difficult to obtain is going to make the color of the winter wardrobe when you get it, more a fashion writer. That is, the material has been made in shades of low price for in large amounts, so that it will only be the more expensive things that you will be able to find this winter color, a fact that might give you some satisfaction if you already possess a frock of brown.

Just where the surge for brown came from it would be hard to tell. It is not something that has sprung like a weed from the earth. In fact, it was just before the war was electrical by word of a possible article that was first worn here and there, and themselves distasteful by appearing in interesting brown evening dresses.

It is a strange commentary that Chairman Will H. Hays makes on the present leadership of the Republican party when he stipulates that competitors for the prize of $10,000 to be offered for the best suggestions for the next Republican national platform shall be young men or young women under 25 years of age."

Has he no confidence in the ancients of his party? Has he too dimly the wisdom and ability of the men who have been managing the (G. O. P.) in these many years? Is it possible that he has come to believe—with the rest of the country—that youths "under 25 years of age" are as capable of making a successful Republican platform as Senator Lodge or Majority Leader Mondell of the House of Representatives, for example?

WE PLAYED THE GAME

In days of long ago,
 We did our work without a fuss,
 And then we went just as we were,
 Our steers we sold for forty or fifty,
 And boys about the same;
 We had to work like—no live,
 But work and played the game.
 We didn't know who got the gain,
 But we were all just as we are,
 We didn't dare investigate
 For fear we'd start a fuss,
 But when the strangers organized
 The day for questions came,
 And though we'd not accomplished much
 We stuck and played the game.
 And next the Populists arose,
 A long step on our way.
 Too many politicians, though,
 Kept us from making hay,
 The Democrats killed off the Pop,
 Before a voter came;
 And though our hopes were blasted,
 Yet we stuck and played the game.
 Again our hopes spring fresh and green,
 But these men who rack the boat,
 And all the power of vested wealth
 Can't get the farmer's goat.
 The working folks, fair and near,
 Can't get the vote of Slane,
 The cunning man, shall rule the world,
 We'll stick and play the game.
 We'll stick and play the game,
 We'll stick and play the game.

NEIGHBORS SUE FOR INJURY IN SHEDDY OF DEAD HORNET

GATHAM, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Holding that Albert Young, aged 60, owner of this village who died a while ago, possessed a business which he had hidden away near the small "chicken coop" hanty in which he stored "chicken" with the result that he had destroyed the small building, but he has thoroughly examined the grounds in the neighborhood.

Yonkers, for the last two winters, has lived in what was once a chicken coop. He earned a living by eating for snails and farmwares and doing so.

Neighbors provided him with food occasionally, but generally against his will he was first in not accepting food, it was only by force that he was removed to the county almshouse.

Too Tender-Hearted.
 "Some men said Uncle Eben, 'Is no tender-hearted that day is almost willing to make trouble for a friend, Joe to show how kind an sympathize to his dog kin."

FASHION HINTS

Even Indian frocks are trimmed with fur.

The headed frock of georgette crepe is an essential garment.

Narrow self-girdles are still fashionable for coats and dresses.

A New York inventor has patented a child's mitt formed like a doll.

Black frocks are worn more and more by women in the winter.

New York reports a few of the evening frocks recently shown have a very big collar.

Evening frocks with trims of French plaid in the collar.

From present indications, snuffed, male and kolkilly will probably be the most popular fur this winter.

Castles in the air are being raised in villages, and vella di ball, taupe, brown and black are as usual quite overdone.

Paris has put the stamp of approval on large hats, particularly hats of black velvet. Many of these hats have slightly drooping brims and deep creases and many of the covers are topped with white or colored feathers.

FROCK FOR MORNING WEAR

Outfit Consists of Dress of Chambray, Pink or Blue, and White Linen Bib Apron.

An attractive costume for getting breakfast ready is a frock of chambray, pink or blue, and a bib apron of white linen. Somehow, a frock of this color has a special charm of fresh freshness that is not of any other material. Mobs—or have someone else your own opinion of rather heavy white linen, the silk suit in generous width and coming quite high at the neck, and cut the lower part of the apron from a good or fine cotton pattern so that it will stand out smartly above the narrow skirt of the frock.

When apron is never fetching and whether you realize it or not there is an open call for mits as much as there is for white gloves. The mits are the finished girl around with cotton ribbon edge and may be piped with striped ribbon cut on the bias. Mitts that fit in a big loose are great on a sewing apron or a child's dish apron of show materials, but the linen apron for making is better and more useful but fastness with hutton buttonhole.

Fancy Materials Taboo.
 Both the dress goods and the silk linings have quite decided to stick to the old-fashioned, but the winter suit in some months to come. The reason for this is that conditions are considered too abnormal to warrant making goods that are likely to depreciate considerably if there was a sudden change in the situation. The manufacturers in both these cases content to let the fancy and novelty business go to English and French houses, despite the possibility here in practice that may result. It is also believed that the import lines will not gain so much ground until the manufacturers abroad have an opportunity to settle back into production lines.

Age of Various Treas.
 The city has 200 years, the old 1000 to 1500 years, the Indian 500 to 1000 years, the bronze 1000 years, and the stone 5000 years.

Brother there a man with soul so dead
 Who never to himself has said:
 'My trade of late is growing bad—
 I'll try another trade'—ad."

If such there be, go mark him well
 For him no bank account shall swell

No angels watch the Golden Stair
 To welcome home the millionaire.

The man who never asks for trade
 By local him ad or displayed

Cares more for rest than worldly gain
 And patronage but gives him pain

Tread lightly, friends! No rude sound
 Disturb his solitude profound

Here let him live in calm repose,
 Unthought except by men he owes

And when he dies plant him so deep
 That night may break his dreamless sleep

Where no rude clamor may dispel
 The quiet that he loved so well;

And that the world may know his loss
 Place on his grave a wreath of moss

And on the stone above "Here lies
 A chump that wouldn't advertise."

WARNING—People with cracked lips will take their lives in their hands should they decide to visit the Gem Theatre. Charlie Chaplin in "A Day's Pleasure," his fourth million dollar picture to be distributed by the First National Exhibitor's Circuit will begin today.

This comedy is a composite of Chaplin's original methods that have brought laughs in other productions. One radical departure from his previous productions is noted in this attraction his comedy events to those things that are within the range of possibility. Without overdrawing an incident, he depicts a congested traffic corner that has rocked over the most critical and immovable accidents with steady laughter.

Lawrence Perry says: "This is the fifty-third anniversary of the first year it began not to be considered a disgrace to accept money for playing baseball. It was in 1867 that three members of the Athletics of Brooklyn received $10 a week for playing the game. Every sane movement has had its early martyrs; the irony of it is that the three devoted heroes who braved calumny and contempt to accept $10 for playing baseball are unknown and unnamed."

SMART FABRIC HAT
Headgear and Matching Scarf of Fashionable Material.

The sketch shows a smart hat and matching scarf to be made of velvet, velveteen, tulle, tulle, or other fashionable material, trimmed in plaid or embroidered motif. Such a set may be worn with a plain suit or frock, and is especially smart in the most popular weather the wool fabric scarf will be just as comfortable after a smart hat, too.

That under any conditions be made at home, and the coat need not be too moderate. Wool fabric, such as velveteen, tulle, or other fashionable material, is fully as smart and really much warmer than velvet for making these soft draped hats and, as little trimming is required, they are really quite inexpensive, or may be as fashioned at home.

The draped suit, like the draped frock, is usually welcomed by the amateur. Tailored frocks or suit require expert workmanship, while the draped one offers no perplexing problem to the home dressmaker. The same rule applies to the finishing piece. Many fabrics have an elaborate pattern in silk, tulle, or wool, and a good deal of applique work is used. Others are very practically without trimming.

For hats so much in evidence and so interesting in their design, the velvet is apparently a favorite. It is shown in both brown and black, the former leading. One exceptionally smart model, especially seen, had a crown of wore pony and wide, slightly rolled brim of gold lace. The hat, of course, was for dressy afternoon or evening wear.

Woolen coats are popular again this winter, and the woman who bought one when this past first came to town several years ago is a fortunate girl if she kept it. The pelts now being used are softer and lighter in weight than those of several seasons ago, but the old ones do not mean nearly for the discard because of this slight disadvantage.

FUR USED ON FULL TRAILS
Sable, Skunk, Kolinsky, Sealskin, Squirrel, Chinchilla and Fox Among Favored Furry.

Fur is used with wonderfully lovely effect on trains of the thinnest tulle or tulle, and the weekend dress is made to the splendor of their gold and silver.

Broadways that glitter with gold and silver, worn with colors that reflect the luster of the metals, develop the season's most gorgeous crepe, tulle, and tulle.

Skunk, kolinsky, seal, squirrel, chinchilla and fox are used to trim these trains, whose shimmer emphasizes the luster of the fur.

The sport dress has faded into the past, and the weekend dress is made forward to take its place. The work and dress must be one of the best for all occasions and materials that is substantial in good color, suitable for evening, sports or street. This week-end dress is made to do away with the necessity for carrying much baggage when one goes off for the weekend.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Typical tramp in appearance, dressed in a ragged, tattered coat, with a wide-brimmed hat, and a pair of worn-out shoes, he walked down the street. He was a man of about thirty years of age, with a face that was as hard as iron. He had a look of desperation in his eyes, and a look of defiance in his mouth. He was a man who had seen many things, and who had learned many lessons. He was a man who had learned to be a tramp, and who had learned to be a thief.

CHAPTER II.—The tramp walked on, his eyes fixed on the ground. He was a man who had learned to be a tramp, and who had learned to be a thief. He was a man who had learned to be a tramp, and who had learned to be a thief. He was a man who had learned to be a tramp, and who had learned to be a thief.

A. G. Brooks Vails to Prove
Trial In Probate Court

Earl Chester and Sherman Saxton of Tualah were acquitted of the battery charge brought against them yesterday by A. G. Brooks, attorney in the probate court before Judge C. P. Davall. Brooks alleged that he was attacked by one of the defendants while crossing the street. The Saxtons were acquitted because the evidence showed that they had been knocked unconscious by his first assault. Brooks also alleged that he was assaulted by more than one person and the defense produced testimony that one of the defendants was actually holding Brooks when he claimed to have lost for a time the use of one eye as well as receiving numerous bruises about the face.
